The man rebuckled the flat pack he carried on his shoulders, and was departing, apparently for the servant's quarters, when Lady Trewavas came suddenly across the lawn and confronted him. She looked inquiringly at Sir Hilton, who answered the question in her eyes.

"It is only a peddler," he said, "selling false jewelry, I suppose."

Meanwhile the man, with a lame shambling gait, was departing as hastily as he could, when Lady Trewavas called him back.

"Have you any thimbles peddler?" she said. "I will buy a dozen if you have. I want them for the girls at the school," she added, turning to her grandson.

Sir Hilton, whose mind was full of his brother, nodded to her, and strolled away thoughtfully, meaning to return to the library. With his fluency strangely checked, the peddler took down his pack, and opened it on the lawn.

"Are you Lady Trewavas?" he said, in a hurried voice.

"Yes," she replied.

"I have wanted to see you these many days," he continued, eagerly. "Olive Varcoe sends you this packet. I promised to give it into your own hands."

While speaking, he had unlocked an inner case in his pack, and he now took thence a packet directed to Olive's well-remembered writing, which he handed to Lady Trewavas.

With the packet in her hands, and

THE REDISTRIBUTION OF SEATS.

(Montreal Gazette.)

The clause of the British North America act governing the readjustment of the representation is as follows:—

"On the completion of the census in the year 1871, and of each subsequent decennial census, the representation of the four provinces shall be readjusted by such authority in such manner, and from such time as the Parliament of Canada provides from time to time, subject and according to the following rules:—

(1) Quebec shall have the fixed number of sixty five members.

(2) There shall be assigned to each of the other provinces such a number of members as will bear the same proportion to the number of its population (ascertained at such census) as the number sixty-five bears to the number of the population of Quebec (so ascertained.)

(3) In the computation of the number of members for a province, a fractional part not exceeding one half of the whole number requisite for entitling the province to a member shall be disregarded; but a fractional part exceeding one half of that number shall be equivalent to the whole number.

(4) On any such readjustment the number of members for a province shall not be reduced unless the proportion which the number of the population of the province bore to the number of the aggregate population of Canada at the then last preceding readjustment of the number of members for the province, is ascertained at the then latest census to be diminished by one twentieth part or upwards.

(5) Such readjustment shall not take effect until the termination of the then existing Parliament.

Applying these provisions to the provincial populations as ascertained by the census taken last April, it is found that Ontario will for the ensuing decade retain her representation precisely as at present, namely, 92 members, while Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island will each lose one, and New Brunswick two members. On the other hand, Manitoba will gain two members. The next Parliament will then be composed of the following representation:

| | Present basis. | New basis. |
|---|---|---|
| Ontario | 92 | 92 |
| Quebec | 65 | 65 |
| Nova Scotia | 21 | 20 |
| New Brunswick | 16 | 14 |
| Prince Edward Island. | 6 | 5 |
| Manitoba | 5 | 7 |
| Northwest | 4 | 4 |
| British Columbia | 6 | 6 |
| Totals | 215 | 213 |

The redistribution of seats, for the purpose of equalizing the basis of representation, does not, of course, depend in any way upon the point whether an increase or a decrease in the total membership from the province is made. Since 1867, no change in the electoral boundaries of Quebec has occurred, but it has long been apparent that a redistribution of seats has become necessary in order to preserve some sort of equality in the numerical basis, or representation by population, as between constituencies as well as between provinces. The county of Hochelaga, for instance, has a population of 81,011; while the counties of Laval, Three Rivers, Soulanges and Quebec west have each a population of less than 10,000, and it would be an anamolous and unfair thing to continue to give to each of these latter ridings the same representation in the House of Commons as Hochelaga enjoys. Indeed, there are ten electoral divisions in the province whose aggregate population does not exceed that of Hochelaga. Or take the case of the cities of Montreal and Quebec. The former has a population of 182,695 within its electoral divisions, while the latter has only 63,090, or about one-third; yet in the Commons Quebec city has the same representation as Montreal. So that, while the total number of members from this province cannot be increased, it is perfectly obvious that the basis of representation must be equalized, and the great centres of population, like Montreal, Hochelaga county and Ottawa county, be given a membership more in accordance with their population. The same considerations will also apply to Ontario and other provinces, in every instance where a gross inequality in the basis of representation has been brought out by the shifting or the increase of population.

BRITISH TPOOPS VIA THE C. P. R.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 7—A British regiment returning to England from China next month is to make the trip eastward by way of Canada. This will be the first practical test of Britian's new military highway to the east across her American possessions, and the result will be looked for with much interest. Great Britain expects this route to be of enormous value in case of trouble in India and of the Suez Canal being blockaded. The agreement between the Government and the railroad for the use of the route was made public last week.

CUT IN PIECES BY A REAPER.

Frightful Accident to a Farmer's Son Near Drayton.

DRAYTON, Ont. Sept 7.—The 14 year-old son of Joseph Hills, Maryboro township, was driving a reaper, and in reaching forward to throw it out of gear one of the revolving rakes caught his head and threw him in front of the knives. Both arms and a leg were completely severed from his body. He was also severely cut about the face and died in two hours.

Habita Saad, Arab, an about 23 years of age, was arrested at Guelph on Saturday by Deputy-Sheriff Kenny, of Lockport, and Chief of Police Handfel, near Acton on the charge of murdering his cousin, a young woman about 20, near Lockport, N. Y., on the 27th of August last. His brother Anthony was also arrested as an accomplice. The three were last seen together in a bush near Lockport. The body of the woman was afterwards discovered with two bullet holes in her back and her skull crushed. Deputy-Sheriff Kenny left with the prisoners on the evening train.

A young woman at London, Ont., is under committal charged with causing the death of her child.

Captain King Hands in His Resignation and Leaves the Brigade.

LAWMAKERS ARE LAWBREAKERS.

AFTER SIDEWALKS AND STREET LAMPS.

ALD. YOUMANS AND THE ROVING ROVERS.

Accounts Paid, Reports Adopted and Nonsense Encouraged—Chamber Chit-Chat.

As THE SUN's readers are aware, the town fathers have been taking their summer holidays for the past month and no civic business worth mentioning has been transacted during that interval until Monday night. A word of explanation may not be out of place here, for our tax burdened citizens might imagine that our civic representatives were over in Europe at their (the tax payers') expense. But such is not the case. The aldermanic holiday simply means that the councillors will give the chamber a wide berth for a certain number of weeks and attend to their own business when they are free from the harrowing cares of state. No trip at the ratepayers' expense or anything of the kind.

When the councillors took their seats on Monday night they looked greatly refreshed after their month's holiday, and as one gazed at the civic foreheads the gazer could not suppress a wish that the holiday season would come twice a year. Those present were Mayor Walsh, Reeve Lindsay, Deputy-reeve Endacott, Ald. Cobean, Ketchum, Fiddis, Young, Youmans and Gillespie. Green and McKitrick being the absentees. After the minutes of the last regular meeting and special meetings had been read and adopted the following were presented and ordered paid: Wallace Bros., $3.50; Musgrovan Bros. $8.50; W. Penalton, $10.56; D. McDonald, $22.38; C P R $18.50, Jas Graham, $32.25; J J Hubbard. $3; T. Bird, $3; Jas. Morrison, $3.50. An account from R. Wilson, an Owen Sound lumber merchant, $143.45, was referred to the R. & B., and Beswick Aiken, $18.50, was handed to the F. & W.

WANT A LAMP.

A petition signed by a number of residents west of the C. P. R tracks asked that an electric light be placed on the corner below Wellington street. Ald. Fiddis, chairman of the S. L committee, said the S L. aggrecation intended making a tour of the town before the extra light would be put up.

Reeve Lindsey produced Town Treasurer Irwin's statement for August. The treasurer complained that he had no way of finding out lots that should have snow shovelling charges marked against them.

R. & B. REPORT.

Ald Ketchum submitted the R. & B. report, to which was attached several accounts. The Isabella street sidewalk cost $30 more than the appropriation therefor, but such did not create a commotion. The mayor said the bylaw did not allow that sort of work, but it went "just as hard."

A GOOD IDEA.

Chairman Gillespie brought down the F. & W. committee's report. After several trivial matters were referred to the committee recommended that the waterworks building be heated with steam, consequently a pressure of at least 15 pounds will be kept in the boiler all the time. The cost of the necessary pipes will be about $65, and it is said to be more economical than stoves. The council went into committee of the whole and the matter was thoroughly discussed. The report was adopted in its entirety.

NOT IN IT.

Mayor Walsh, although he said it was out of order, at this point read several accounts and communications that the clerk had overlooked. A Toronto firm of contractors heard this town was about to construct a system of waterworks and wanted a chance for the job. Another firm at Kingston wanted to know if the civic representatives required any rifles, pistols, shotguns or shooting irons of any description. As this town is not about to change its system of waterworks, or yet turn itself into a shooting-gallery, their letters were received with laughter by all.

THROWS UP THE SPONGE

The mayor also read a communication from Charles King, captain of the fire brigade, resigning his position. For a long time a portion of the brigade has objected to the captain, and in this they were backed by Chairman Gillespie. The council went into committee of the whole on an old report of the F & W. committee, which proposed Mr J. W. Aiken for the captaincy. Mr. A. declined the position and he and several firemen petitioned the council to appoint Lieut. Patterson to the office. At a later stage a bylaw appointing Patterson was passed. Ald. Gillespie said he had no "personal" objection to the new captain Mr Aiken will be lieutenant.

THAT SIDEWALK.

Ald. Young and Fiddis South ward members, thought the new sidewalk on John street should be changed from 2 planks to a 4 plank walk, and hat it be extended to the townline (we forget the name of the street), also that it be built on the west side of the street. Mr. Fiddis made a vigorous speech on behalf of the westsiders, but the mayor did not hold the same opinion. The reeve thought if a change was wanted those interested should petition the council to that effect. A vote was taken and the motion carried. Ald. Youmans said the new 2 plank walk on Mill street should have another plank in the centre, and the council thought so, too.

HUNTING TIMBER.

A little discussion arose over a $1 50 livery account in the R. & B report. Under the new bylaw, which appointed a foreman of works and defined his duties, the foreman should see to the purchasing of material, etc., but the "efficient" chairman of the R & B, did that himself. The other day the timber supply ran out and the corporation artists had to shut up the studio. Foreman McBride hired a livery rig and made a tour of the country in search of timber, and the livery bill was $1.50. Mr. McBride was asked to explain matters and he told the above story, and wound up by saying that if the council did not pay for the rig he would do it himself. The council will pay.

CHAMBER CHAT.

Messrs Bros., from whom the new bell was purchased, said a draft would be forwarded shortly. After the bell is tested and found right the T. P. committee will order the treasurer to whack up.

Ald. Youmans gave notice that at the next meeting he will introduce a bylaw to regulate the running at large of cattle. Does he want to quit public life?

ATHLONE.

SICK.—At present Mr. John McGinnis is seriously ill and his recovery is not expected.

WINDING UP.—Harvesting is pretty well advanced, but a large amount of peas and oats is out yet. Some farmers have already commenced sowing their fall wheat.

WHICH WILL WIN?—A football match between the Athlone and Achill clubs will take place on Saturday next. The game will be stubbornly contested, and betting on the result is about even.

PICNIC.—The annual picnic in connection with St. James' church takes place at Colgan on the 22nd. Three young ladies are canvassing for the event and the proceeds will go to pay part of the debt on the new brick church. We trust it will be a success.

MONO CENTRE.

SEEDING.—Farmers are busily engaged sowing their fall wheat, and are more than hustling in order to gain enough time to attend the exhibition.

BURNS' CHURCH.—Rev. Mr. Hudson of Dundalk occupied the pulpit of Burns' church last Sunday and delivered good practical sermons.

PERSONAL.—Miss Fannie Henry has just returned from visiting friends at Meadowvale, Cheltenham and other points.....Mr. T H. Magwood of Toronto spent a few days with his father last week.....Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Ray and Miss Mary Daly of Wingham are guests at Mr. Andrew McCague's.....Miss Hamilton of Stratford is the guest of Mrs. Jas. Arthur.....Mrs. Jas. Wilkinson and Mrs Hugh Henry of Cheltenham spent a few days at Mr. Joseph Henry's last week.

NARROW ESCAPE.—One day last week Mr. Andrew Henry came very near losing a valuable team of horses. It appears that while unloading some grain a heavy scaffold underneath which the horses were standing gave way crushing the horses under about four tons of oats. After considerable difficulty they were extricated and in the course of an hour or two were able to resume work. The strangest feature of the accident was that under the debris and lying across its mother's back was a young colt securely pinned down by a large pole. After a pry had been secured and sufficient room made to relieve the little animal it was hauled out and walked off quite contentedly. How the horses and colt escaped being crushed or smothered to death is a mystery.

CREDIT FORKS.

$50,000 to loan on mortgage security. Interest and expenses low, terms to suit borrowers. F. Irwin, office over Endacott Bros' store Orangeville.

POLICE COURT ITEMS.—To morrow will be quite a day at our police court. Besides Billy Lowe's charivari case several more important disputes will be settled. Mrs. Amos has Mrs Jos Wilson up for assault and battery, the alleged offence occurred the other day.

OMITTED.—In the report of the A O U W. concert in last week's SUN two names were omitted from the list of those who contributed to the success of the entertainment. Mrs. Joseph Crabtree and Miss E J. Charridge sang a pleasing duet entitled "I Don't Know Which to Choose," and were loudly encored by the audience.

SAM CAPTURED.—Mr. S. Hunter of this place was united in the holy bonds of matrimony on Friday last to Miss Polly McDonald of Bodmontain. The ceremony was performed in Orangeville by Rev. A. Henderson, M. A. Both bride and groom are well known in this section and will have the best wishes of their many friends for a long life of wedded bliss.

WHAT'S THE MATTER?—The long winded correspondent of an Orangeville paper has been lying low lately, and those not posted would imagine he has shaken Credit Forks red stone from his pods. For the information of those who are unfortunate enough to have business with the curious individual we may say that he can be found quarrying stone at the edge of the road where "lovers are forbidden to travel."

BILLY LOWE'S PAINFUL POSITION.—Billy Lowe is a stonecutter and has made Brimstone Point his headquarters for many years, but just now he is receiving very unfair treatment at the hands of the other residents of the Point and the Forks. Five years ago Billy took unto himself a wife at Cataract, but domestic troubles cropped up almost two years ago and the firm of Lowe & wife was immediately dissolved by mutual consent. Mrs. Lowe went to reside at Toronto, and Billy still continued to hang out at the old stand. Evidently Billy's faith in woman was not shattered by his disastrous cruise on matrimony's troubled sea, for about the middle of last week the erratic Billy made another venture in the marriage business, taking Miss Nesbitt, who is supposed to hail from Mulmur, as his partner. The people around here hold marriage as a very sacred thing and when Mr. Lowe committed bigamy they became very indignant and, so to speak, took the law into their own hands. Ever since that fateful Wednesday—the day the ceremony was performed—a mob has gathered in front, side and rear of the wedded man's domicile at night and one unaccustomed to the general run of things would imagine that a lunatic asylum was turned inside out. His outbuildings have been torn down, shingles pulled off his house and other damage done, and somebody went so far as to discharge a rifle at their residence, the bullet striking the front door and coming out at the back door. But above the din you can hear voices yelling for $5 to treat the crowd, but the V. does not find its way out of Billy's pocket. This man, being a bigamist, is liable to severe punishment by law, and it does not speak very well for the respectability of the place to see a mob taking the law into their own hands and demanding money to buy drinks. To-morrow's police court will throw some light on the case and a complete report will appear in your paper next week.

Several Seasons.

"For several seasons I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and find that it makes a perfect cure even of the severest attacks of summer complaint and diarrhoea. It is as precious to me."—Mrs. P. C. Wager, Foxhill, Ont.

The FALL ASSIZES!

Very Little Business to Engage His Lordship's Attention.

WATERLOO MUTUAL V. KIRKLAND.

$855 RETURNED TO THE COMPANY.

The Judge's Address and the Grand Jury's Presentment.

The Dufferin fall assizes opened in the court house before Mr Justice Rose at 2:30 o'clock on Monday afternoon. His lordship missed the morning train from Toronto and had to come up by the steamboat express, which accounts for court not commencing business in the morning. The grand jury was sworn in as follows: Thos. MacAdam, (foreman) Geo. Wilcox, A H. Turnbull, Henry Laverty, Orangeville; Robt. A. Ricky, Shelburne; Thos. Barber, Jas J. Buchanan, East Luther; John F. Breen, Jas. McCue, Melancthon; John Dudgeon, Jas. Crombie, B Field; Simon Tremble, Jas. Torrance, Amaranth; Samuel Ewing, John W. Laird, Mono; Thos. Handy, Wm. Irvine, East Garafraxa; Geo. Henderson, David Henderson, Thos Johnston, David Kiernan, John Murphy, Mulmur.

Judge Rose's address was one of unusual length, and of a more practical nature than the average judicial charge. After His Lordship's address the only civil case on the docket was called:

AFTER THEIR MONEY.

The only civil action entered for trial was that of the Waterloo Mutual Fire Insurance Co. v. Kirkland, in which the plaintiffs sought to recover from the defendant $1700, being the amount that it was compelled to pay under policies of insurance issued by it covering the defendant's barn and certain chattel property of the tenant contained in it. It will be remembered that John Kirkland was convicted at the last fall assizes of setting fire to his barn. The Waterloo Mutual had insured same and its contents, and before knowing that Kirkland fired the barn himself they paid over the full amount of the loss. Their claim in this action was that as the fire was the result of Kirkland's own criminal act they were entitled to get their money back. The action was settled by a judgment being entered in favor of the company by consent for $855 without costs.

CHRONIC LITIGANTS.

The Queen v. Watson and the Queen v. Lusty were indictments for perjury preferred against each other by the litigants in a civil action of Watson v. Lusty. The grand jury evidently adopted His Lordship's views that these prosecutions were prompted by spite, and a desire to gain an advantage in the civil action instead of in the public interest, and accordingly threw out both bills.

His Lordship, Mr. Justice Rose, left for Toronto on Tuesday morning, and Judge McCarthy was appointed to receive the grand jury's report, after which the jurors received their pay and were dismissed.

THE JURY'S PRESENTMENT

To his Honor Judge McCarthy, presiding for the Hon. Mr. Justice Rose:—

We, the grand jurors, assembled at the assizes for the county of Dufferin for the fall of 1891, beg to report as follows: We have visited the jail and found it in good order and that everything is being done on the part of its officials to promote the comfort of those committed to their charge that it is their duty to do. We are, however, of the opinion that the present salary of $150 per annum to the present matron, Mrs. Sutherland, is an insufficient remuneration for the arduous duties she has to perform and would recommend that it be supplemented by at least $50. We found no prisoners in jail except a large number of persons committed for vagrancy, viz., fourteen. Whilst on this subject we feel it our duty to express our regret that so many persons, simply for the misfortune of poverty for which in many instances at least they are not personally responsible, should have to submit to the stigma of confinement in a place established for the punishment of the criminal classes, and trust that some satisfactory method will be speedily devised for the care of these unfortunate people, without submitting them to such punishment and disgrace, and we are thankful for the words on this subject that came from the bench in the address to us. We think that the county is to be congratulated on the apparent freedom from crime which was exhibited in the presentation at the opening of the court of a pair of white gloves. We are very much pleased to observe the apparent good health which is at present enjoyed by the Honorable Mr. Justice Rose and trust that he, as well as your Honor, will long be spared in that service to the country which has been so beneficial to it in the past.

T. MACADAM, Foreman.

BOWLING GREEN.

NEARLY DONE.—Harvesting operations are pretty well over in this section of the country and the hum of the binder is seldom heard. The crops were excellent and farmers will make a fortune this year.

THRESHING.—The steam whistle of the thresher is heard on every hand and the Curry boys will make a great season this year if goodluck follows them. The "hoe downs" will commence in a very short time.

RECOVERING.—Mr. Hugh Fennell is at present a little better, but is still very low.....The many friends of Mr. Arthur Rounding will be glad to know that he has completely recovered from his recent illness, but we are sorry to say that Mrs. Rounding is down with that dreaded disease diphtheria.

Solomon's Wisdom.

The Wisdom of Solomon, were he alive to-day, would lead him to choose Burdock Blood Bitters as a remedy for all diseases of the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. It cures dyspepsia, biliousness, headache, constipation and all forms of bad blood from a common pimple to the worst scrofulous sore.

FALL TALK

Is seasonable just now, so is Fall Goods. Our first shipment (this season) of direct importation arrived last week per S.S. Anchoria. The goods passed the Customs on Saturday, and are now ready for inspection. The Dress Goods open up in good style, seasonable, handsome, shades; superior qualities and values, so do the Millinery Trimmings and shapes—everything is still lovely. MISS ROBERTSON is still at the helm of our Millinery ship, which is a guarantee of safe sailing. This is no regular advertisement, simply a reminder of what is to follow, COME NOW.

The Rest of Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"thirty milks should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of even one week they will yield from ¼ to ⅓ per cent. less milk, and that of an inferior quality. Such milk will, on an average, turn sour in twenty four hours less than milk drawn from the same or similar cows receiving salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analyzed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock fine and coarse, at

She left for the Forks by the evening train.

A WIFE DESERTER CAPTURED.—Last Thursday Wm. Ward, alias Mitchell, who deserted his wife at Dundalk a few months ago and ran away with a young girl, was hauled in at Markdale and taken to Dundalk to stand his trial for deserting his wife. The preliminary proceedings took place on Saturday and Ward was committed to Owen Sound Jail until the assizes, when he will be tried. His paramour was remanded to Monday. Chief Shields of this town located the deserter.

ARCHIVES OF ONTARIO
TORONTO

(ascertained at each census) as the number sixty-five bears to the number of the population of Quebec (as ascertained.)

(3) In the computation of the number of members for a province, a fractional part not exceeding one half of the whole number requisite for entitling the province to a member shall be disregarded; but a fractional part exceeding one half of that number shall be equivalent to the whole number.

(4) On any such readjustment the number of members for a province shall not be reduced unless the proportion which the number of the population of the province bore to the number of the aggregate population of Canada at the time last preceding readjustment of the number of members for the province, is ascertained at the thea latest census to be diminished by one twentieth part or upwards.

(5) Such readjustment shall not take effect until the termination of the then existing Parliament.

Applying these provisions to the provincial populations as ascertained by the census taken last April, it is found that Ontario will for the ensuing decade retain her representation precisely as at present, namely, 92 members, while Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island will each lose one, and New Brunswick two members. On the other hand, Manitoba will gain two members. The next Parliament will then be composed of the following representation:

| | Present basis. | New basis. |
|---|---|---|
| Ontario | 92 | 92 |
| Quebec | 65 | 65 |
| Nova Scotia | 21 | 20 |
| New Brunswick | 16 | 14 |
| Prince Edward Island | 6 | 5 |
| Manitoba | 5 | 7 |
| Northwest | 4 | 4 |
| British Columbia | 6 | 6 |
| Totals | 215 | 213 |

The redistribution of seats, for the purpose of equalizing the basis of representation, does not, of course, depend in any way upon the point whether an increase or a decrease in the total membership from the province is made. Since 1867, no change in the electoral boundaries of Quebec has occurred, but it has long been apparent that a redistribution of seats has become necessary in order to preserve some sort of equality in the numerical basis, or representation by population, as between constituencies as well as between provinces. The county of Hochelaga, for instance, has a population of 81,011; while the counties of Laval, Three Rivers, Soulanges and Quebec west have each a population of less than 10,000, and it would be an anamolous and unfair thing to continue to give to each of these latter ridings the same representation in the House of Commons as Hochelaga enjoys. Indeed, there are ten electoral divisions in the province whose aggregate population does not exceed that of Hochelaga. Or take the case of the cities of Montreal and Quebec. The former has a population of 182,695 within its electoral divisions, while the latter has only 63,090, or about one-third; yet in the Commons Quebec city has the same representation as Montreal. So that, while the total number of members from this province cannot be increased, it is perfectly obvious that the basis of representation must be equalized, and the great centres of population, like Montreal, Hochelaga county and Ottawa county, be given a membership more in accordance with their population. The same considerations will also apply to Ontario and other provinces, in every instance where a gross inequality in the basis of representation has been brought out by the shifting or the increase of population.

BRITISH TPOOPS VIA THE C. P. R.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 7.—A British regiment returning to England from China next month is to make the trip eastward by way of Canada. This will be the first practical test of Britian's new military highway to the east across her American possessions, and the result will be looked for with much interest. Great Britain expects this route to be of enormous value in case of trouble in India and of the Suez Canal being blockaded. The agreement between the Government and the railroad for the use of the route was made public last week.

CUT IN PIECES BY A REAPER.

Frightful Accident to a Farmer's Son Near Drayton.

DRAYTON, Ont. Sept 7.—The 14 year-old son of Joseph Hills, Maryboro township, was driving a reaper, and in reaching forward to throw it out of gear one of the revolving rakes caught his head and threw him in front of the knives. Both arms and a leg were completely severed from his body. He was also severely cut about the face and died in two hours.

Habits Saad, Arab, an about 23 years of age, was arrested at Guelph on Saturday by Deputy-Sheriff Kenny, of Lockport, and Chief of Police Handfel, near Acton on the charge of murdering his cousin, a young woman about 20, near Lockport, N. Y., on the 27th of August last. His brother Anthony was also arrested as an accomplice. The three were last seen together in a bush near Lockport. The body of the woman was afterwards discovered with two bullet holes in her back and her skull crushed. Deputy-Sheriff Kenny left with the prisoners on the evening train.

A young woman at London, Ont., is under committal charged with causing the death of her child.

expense. But such is not the case. The aldermanic holiday simply means that the councillors will give the chamber a wide berth for a certain number of weeks and attend to their own business when they are free from the bar rowing cares of state. No trip at the ratepayers' expense or anything of the kind.

When the councillors took their seats on Monday night they looked greatly refreshed after their month's holiday, and as one gazed at the civic foreheads the gazer could not suppress a wish that the holiday season would come twice a year. Those present were Mayor Walsh, Reeve Lindsey, Deputy-reeve Eudacott, Ald. Cobean, Ketchum, Fiddis, Young, Youmans and Gillespie. Green and McKitrick being the absentees. After the minutes of the last regular meeting and special meetings had been read and adopted the following were presented and ordered paid: Wallace Bros., $3.50; Mungovan Bros. $8.50; W. Pension, $10.56; D. McDonald, $22.38; C P. R $18.50, Jas. Graham, $32.25; J J Hubbard, $3; T. Bird, $3; Jas. Morrison, $3.50 An account from R. Wilson, an Owen Sound lumber merchant, $143.45, was referred to the R. & B., and Beswick Aiken, $18.50, was handed to the F. & W.

WANT A LAMP.

A petition signed by a number of residents west of the C. P. R. tracks asked that an electric light be placed on the corner below Wellington street. Ald. Fiddis, chairman of the S. L. committee, said the S L. aggregation intended making a tour of the town before the extra light would be put up.

Reeve Lindsey produced Town Treasurer Irwin's statement for August. The treasurer complained that he had no way of finding out lots that should have snow shovelling charges marked against them.

R. & B. REPORT.

Ald Ketchum submitted the R. & B. report, to which was attached several accounts. The Isabella street sidewalk cost $30 more than the appropriation therefor, but such did not create a commotion. The mayor said the bylaw did not allow that sort of work, but it went "just as hard."

A GOOD IDEA.

Chairman Gillespie brought down the F. & W. committee's report. After several trivial matters were referred to the committee recommended that the waterworks building be heated with steam, consequently a pressure of at least 15 pounds will be kept in the boiler all the time. The cost of the necessary pipes will be about $65, and it is said to be more economical than stoves. The council went into committee of the whole and the matter was thoroughly discussed. The report was adopted in its entirety.

NOT IN IT.

Mayor Walsh, although he said it was out of order, at this point read several accounts and communications that the clerk had overlooked. A Toronto firm of contractors heard this town was about to construct a system of waterworks and wanted a chance for the job. Another firm at Kingston wanted to know if the civic representatives required any rifles, pistols, shotguns or shooting irons of any description. As this town is not about to change its system of waterworks, or yet turn itself into a shooting-gallery, their letters were received with laughter by all.

THROWS UP THE SPONGE

The mayor also read a communication from Charles King, captain of the fire brigade, resigning his position. For a long time a portion of the brigade has objected to the captain, and in this they were backed by Chairman Gillespie. The council went into committee of the whole on an old report of the F & W. committee, which proposed Mr J. W. Aiken for the captaincy. Mr. A. declined the position and he and several firemen petitioned the council to appoint Lieut. Patterson to the office. At a later stage a bylaw appointing Patterson was passed. Ald. Gillespie said he had no "serious" objection to the new captain Mr Aiken will be lieutenant.

THAT SIDEWALK.

Ald. Young and Fiddis South ward members, thought the new sidewalk on John street should be changed from 2 planks to a 4 plank walk, and hat it be extended to the townline (we forget the name of the street), also that it be built on the west side of the street. Mr. Fiddis made a vigorous speech on behalf of the westsiders, but the mayor did not hold the same opinion. The reeve thought if a change was wanted those interested should petition the council to that effect. A vote was taken and the motion carried. Ald. Youmans said the new 2 plank walk on Mill street should have another plank in the centre, and the council thought so, too.

HUNTING TIMBER.

A little discussion arose over a $1 50 livery account in the R. & B report. Under the new bylaw, which appointed a foreman of works and defined his duties, the foreman should see to the purchasing of material, etc., but the "efficient" chairman of the R & B, did that himself. The other day the timber supply ran out and the corporation artists had to shut up the studio. Foreman McBride hired a livery rig and made a tour of the country in search of timber, and the livery bill was $1.50. Mr. McBride was asked to explain matters and he told the above story, and wound up by saying that if the council did not pay for the rig he would do it himself. The council will pay.

MONO CENTRE.

SEEDING.—Farmers are briskly carrying on their fall wheat, and are more than hustling in order to gain enough time to attend the exhibition.

BURNS' CHURCH.—Rev. Mr. Hudson of Dundalk occupied the pulpit of Burns' church last Sunday and delivered good practical sermons.

PERSONAL.—Miss Fannie Henry has just returned from visiting friends at Meadowvale, Cheltenham and other points.....Mr. T H. Magwood of Toronto spent a few days with his father last week.....Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Ray and Miss Mary Daly of Wingham are guests at Mr. Andrew McCague's. Relossey.....Miss Hamilton of Stratford is the guest of Mrs. Jas. Arthur..... Mrs. Jas. Wilkinson and Mrs Hugh Henry of Cheltenham spent a few days at Mr. Joseph Henry's last week.

NARROW ESCAPE.—One day last week Mr. Andrew Henry came very near losing a valuable team of horses. It appears that while unloading some grain a heavy scaffold underneath which the horses were standing gave way crushing the horses under about four tons of oats. After considerable difficulty they were extricated and in the course of an hour or two were able to resume work. The strangest feature of the accident was that under the debris and lying across its mother's back was a young colt securely pinned down by a large pole. After a pry had been secured and sufficient room made to relieve the little animal it was hauled out and walked off quite contentedly. How the horses and colt escaped being crushed or smothered to death is a mystery.

CREDIT FORKS.

$50,000 to loan on mortgage security. Interest and expenses low, terms to suit borrowers. F. Irwin, office over Eudacott Bros' store Orangeville.

POLICE COURT ITEMS.—To morrow will be quite a day at our police court. Besides Billy Lowe's charivari case several more important disputes will be settled. Mrs. Amos has Mrs Jos. Wilson up for assault and battery, the alleged offence occurred the other day.

OMITTED.—In the report of the A.O.U.W. concert in last week's SUN two names were omitted from the list of those who contributed to the success of the entertainment. Mrs. Joseph Crabtree and Miss E J. Clarridge sang a pleasing duet entitled "I Don't Know Which to Choose," and were loudly encored by the audience.

SAM CAPTURED.—Mr. S. Hunter of this place was united in the holy bonds of matrimony on Friday last to Miss Polly McDonald of Bolsontain. The ceremony was performed in Orangeville by Rev. A. Henderson, M. A. Both bride and groom are well known in this section and will have the best wishes of their many friends for a long life of wedded bliss.

WHAT'S THE MATTER?—The long winded correspondent of an Orangeville paper has been lying low lately, and those not posted would imagine he has shaken Credit Forks red stone from his pods. For the information of those who are unfortunate enough to have business with the curious individual we may say that he can be found quarrying stone at the edge of the road where "lovers are forbidden to travel."

BILLY LOWE'S PAINFUL POSITION.—Billy Lowe is a stonecutter and has made Brimstone Point his headquarters for many years, but just now he is receiving very unfair treatment at the hands of the other residents of the Point and the Forks. Five years ago Billy took unto himself a wife at Cataract, but domestic troubles cropped up almost two years ago and the firm of Lowe & wife was immediately dissolved by mutual consent. Mrs. Lowe went to reside at Toronto, and Billy still continued to hang out at the old stand. Evidently Billy's faith in woman was not shattered by his disastrous cruise on matrimony's troubled sea, for about the middle of last week the erratic Billy made another venture in the marriage business, taking Miss Nesbitt, who is supposed to hail from Mulmur, as his partner. The people around here hold marriage as a very sacred thing and when Mr. Lowe committed bigamy they became very indignant and, so to speak, took the law into their own hands. Ever since that fateful Wednesday—the day the ceremony was performed—a mob has gathered in front, side and rear of the wedded man's domicile at night and one unaccustomed to the general run of things would imagine that a lunatic asylum was turned inside out. His outbuildings have been torn down, shingles pulled off his house and other damage done, and somebody went so far as to discharge a rifle at their residence, the bullet striking the front door and coming out at the back door. But above the din you can hear voices yelling for $5 to treat the crowd, but the V. does not find its way out of Billy's pocket. This man, being a big smist, is liable to severe punishment by law, and it does not speak very well for the respectability of the place to see a mob taking the law into their own hands and demanding money to buy drinks. To morrow's police court will throw some light on the case and a complete report will appear in your paper next week.

Several seasons.

Judge Rose's address was one of unusual length, and of a more practical nature than the average judicial charge. After His Lordship's address the only civil case on the docket was called:

AFTER THEIR MONEY.

The only civil action entered for trial was that of the Waterloo Mutual Fire Insurance Co. v. Kirkland, in which the plaintiffs sought to recover from the defendant $1700, being the amount that it was compelled to pay under policies of insurance issued by it covering the defendant's barn and certain chattel property of the tenant contained in it. It will be remembered that John Kirkland was convicted at the last fall assizes of setting fire to his barn. The Waterloo Mutual had insured same and its contents, and before knowing that Kirkland fired the barn himself they paid over the full amount of the loss. Their claim in this action was that as the fire was the result of Kirkland's own criminal act they were entitled to get their money back. The action was settled by a judgment being entered in favor of the company by consent for $855 without costs.

CHRONIC LITIGANTS.

The Queen v. Watson and the Queen v. Lusty were indictments for perjury preferred against each other by the litigants in a civil action of Watson v. Lusty. The grand jury evidently adopted His Lordship's views that these prosecutions were prompted by spite, and a desire to gain an advantage in the civil action instead of in the public interest, and accordingly threw out both bills.

His Lordship, Mr. Justice Rose, left for Toronto on Tuesday morning, and Judge McCarthy was appointed to receive the grand jury's report, after which the jurors received their pay and were dismissed.

THE JURY'S PRESENTMENT

To his Honor Judge McCarthy, presiding for the Hon. Mr. Justice Rose:—

We, the grand jurors, assembled at the assizes for the county of Dufferin for the fall of 1891, beg to report as follows: We have visited the jail and found it in good order and that everything is being done on the part of its officials to promote the comfort of those committed to their charge that it is their duty to do. We are, however, of the opinion that the present salary of $150 per annum to the present matron, Mrs. Sutherland, is an insufficient remuneration for the arduous duties she has to perform and would recommend that it be supplemented by at least $50. We found no prisoners in jail except a large number of persons committed for vagrancy, viz., fourteen. Whilst on this subject we feel it our duty to express our regret that so many persons, simply for the misfortune of poverty for which in many instances at least they are not personally responsible, should have to submit to the stigma of confinement in a place established for the punishment of the criminal classes, and trust that some satisfactory method will be speedily devised for the care of these unfortunate people, without submitting them to such punishment and disgrace, and we are thankful for the words on this subject that came from the bench in the address to us. We think that the county is to be congratulated on the apparent freedom from crime which was exhibited in the presentation at the opening of the court of a pair of white gloves. We are very much pleased to observe the apparent good health which is at present enjoyed by the Honorable Mr. Justice Rose and trust that he, as well as your Honor, will long be spared in that service to the country which has been so beneficial to it in the past.

T. MACADAM, Foreman.

BOWLING GREEN.

NEARLY DONE.—Harvesting operations are pretty well over in this section of the country and the hum of the binder is seldom heard. The crops were excellent and farmers will make a fortune this year.

THRESHING.—The steam whistle of the thresher is heard on every hand and the Curry boys will make a great season this year if goodluck follows them. The "hoe downs" will commence in a very short time.

RECOVERING.—Mr. Hugh Fennell is at present a little better, but is still very low.....The many friends of Mr. Arthur Rounding will be glad to know that he has completely recovered from his recent illness, but we are sorry to say that Mrs. Rounding is down with that dreaded disease diphtheria.

The Restof Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof. Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of some one week they will yield from 10½ to 17½ per cent. less milk, and that of an inferior quality. Such milk will, on an average, turn sour in twenty four hours less time than milk drawn from the same or similar cows receiving salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THIS is only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analyzed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is said cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. The sidewalk at the C P R crossing is in a disgraceful state and should have been repaired months ago. The R. & B. chairman will please take this points.

Two Italians, who have been peddling plaster casts around Orangeville for the past several days, raked in many loose quarters. Casts of Sir John and other noted personages sold like hot cakes.

A quoit match between Messrs. G. R. Monkman and J. E. Boon on one side and F. Anthony and J. J. Hubbard on the other took place on the fair ground yesterday afternoon, the former side winning with comparative ease.

Don't miss to hear the wonder of the age, the Edison Phonograph which has just arrived from New York and which is on exhibition in the store below THE SUN office, opposite the Paisley house. It will be on exhibition until Saturday night. Admission 10 cts. JOHN JELLY.

STILL HAPPY.—The census returns show that Brampton's population is 3252, an increase of nearly 500 in ten years. We are still ahead of Orangeville and of course comparatively happy.—Banner.

GARDEN PARTY AT HOCKLEY.—The congregation of St. James' mission church, Hockley, will hold a grand entertainment at that place to morrow (Friday) evening in aid of the building fund. A pleasing and attractive program has been prepared and no doubt a large crowd will attend.

A GREAT INVENTION.—The Graphophone Edison phonograph ever operated in Orangeville is on exhibition in the store below THE SUN office, and great crowds are seeing it. Mr John Jelly, the manager, is as obliging as ever, and you should see the great instrument. It will be here until Saturday night.

DEATH OF HAZEL JOHNSTON.—The Death Messenger visited the home of Mr. W Johnston, of A. & W Johnston, Wednesday evening, and plucked out one of its fairest flowers—Hazel in estimable death. In their sad bereavement Mr. and Mrs Johnston will have the sympathy of their many friends.

DON'T BITE.—A "Chicago detective agency" is flooding the country with circulars in which they inform the readers that for $10 they will secure the appointment of the victim as a detective to work at the world's fair. The offer is a swindle pure and simple and a bit of good advice is, if you have $10 to lose, tie it up in something else.

THE DUFFERINS DOWNED.—The boys of four members of the Dufferin lacrosse club and several juniors went to Brampton on Friday and played a return match with the Excelsiors of that town. The Brampton boys were in fine form and had on their best players, and, as was expected, succeeded in defeating Orangeville by 8 games to 0. Wos Mt. Forest laugh!

A TIPSY SQUAW.—Last Tuesday a dusky maiden from the Forks paid one of her periodical visits to Orangeville and became overloaded with fire water. She was "mashed" on every young "pale face" she happened to meet, and when the "pale-faces" fled up the street in horror the fleet footed child of the wilderness pursued them. She left for the Forks by the evening train.

A WIFE DESERTER CAPTURED.—Last Thursday Wm. Ward, alias Mac well, who deserted his wife at Dundalk a few months ago and ran away with a young girl, was hauled in at Markdale and taken to Dundalk to stand his trial for deserting his wife. The preliminary proceedings took place on Saturday and Ward was committed to Owen Sound jail until the assizes, when he will be tried. His paramour was remanded to Monday. Chief Shields of this town located the deserter.

A BIG BELL.—The new town bell arrived in Orangeville from Meneely Bros.' foundry at Troy, N. Y., the week and will probably be placed in position on the top of the tower on Saturday. In the side of our other bells were engraved the words "City of Orangeville," but since the recent amalgamation was taken the new bell in the "Town

THE REDISTRIBUTION OF SEATS.

(Montreal Gazette.)

The clause of the British North America act governing the readjustment of the representation is as follows:—

"On the completion of the census in the year 1871, and of each subsequent decennial census, the representation of the four provinces shall be readjusted by such authority in such manner, and from such time as the Parliament of Canada provides from time to time, subject and according to the following rules:—

(1) Quebec shall have the fixed number of sixty five members.

(2) There shall be assigned to each of the other provinces such a number of members as will bear the same proportion to the number of its population (ascertained at such census) as the number sixty-five bears to the number of the population of Quebec (so ascertained.)

(3) In the computation of the number of members for a province, a fractional part not exceeding one half of the whole number requisite for entitling the province to a member shall be disregarded; but a fractional part exceeding one half of that number shall be equivalent to the whole number.

(4) On any such readjustment the number of members for a province shall not be reduced unless the proportion which the number of the population of the province bore to the number of the aggregate population of Canada at the then last preceding readjustment of the number of members for the province, is ascertained at the then latest census to be diminished by one twentieth part or upwards.

(5) Such readjustment shall not take effect until the termination of the then existing Parliament.

Applying these provisions to the provincial populations as ascertained by the census taken last April, it is found that Ontario will for the ensuing decade retain her representation precisely as at present, namely, 92 members, while Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island will each lose one, and New Brunswick two members. On the other hand, Manitoba will gain two members. The next Parliament will then be composed of the following representation:

| | Present basis. | New basis. |
|---|---|---|
| Ontario | 92 | 92 |
| Quebec | 65 | 65 |
| Nova Scotia | 21 | 20 |
| New Brunswick | 16 | 14 |
| Prince Edward Island. | 6 | 5 |
| Manitoba | 5 | 7 |
| Northwest | 4 | 4 |
| British Columbia | 6 | 6 |
| Totals | 215 | 213 |

The redistribution of seats, for the purpose of equalizing the basis of representation, does not, of course, depend in any way upon the point whether an increase or a decrease in the total membership from the province is made. Since 1867, no change in the electoral boundaries of Quebec has occurred, but it has long been apparent that a redistribution of seats has become necessary in order to preserve some sort of equality in the numerical basis, or representation by population, as between constituencies as well as between provinces. The county of Hochelaga, for instance, has a population of 81,011; while the counties of Laval, Three Rivers, Soulanges and Quebec west have each a population of less than 10,000, and it would be an anamolous and unfair thing to continue to give to each of these latter ridings the same representation in the House of Commons as Hochelaga enjoys. Indeed, there are ten electoral divisions in the province whose aggregate population does not exceed that of Hochelaga. Or take the case of the cities of Montreal and Quebec. The former has a population of 182,695 within its electoral divisions, while the latter has only 63,090, or about one-third; yet in the Commons Quebec city has the same representation as Montreal. So that, while the total number of members from this province cannot be increased, it is perfectly obvious that the basis of representation must be equalized, and the great centres of population, like Montreal, Hochelaga county and Ottawa county, be given a membership more in accordance with their population. The same considerations will also apply to Ontario and other provinces, in every instance where a gross inequality in the basis of representation has been brought out by the shifting or the increase of population.

BRITISH TPOOPS VIA THE C. P. R.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 7—A British regiment returning to England from China next month is to make the trip eastward by way of Canada. This will be the first practical test of Britain's new military highway to the east across her American possessions, and the result will be looked for with much interest. Great Britain expects this route to be of enormous value in case of trouble in India and of the Suez Canal being blockaded. The agreement between the Government and the railroad for the use of the route was made public last week.

DRAYTON, Ont. Sept 7.—The 14 year-old son of Joseph Hills, Maryboro township, was driving a reaper, and in reaching forward to throw it out of gear one of the revolving rakes caught his head and threw him in front of the knives. Both arms and a leg were completely severed from his body. He was also severely cut about the face and died in two hours.

Habits Saad, Arab, an about 23 years of age, was arrested at Guelph on Saturday by Deputy-Sheriff Kenny, of Lockport, and Chief of Police Handfel, near Acton on the charge of murdering his cousin, a young woman about 20, near Lockport, N. Y., on the 27th of August last. His brother Anthony was also arrested as an accomplice. The three were last seen together in a bush near Lockport. The body of the woman was afterwards discovered with two bullet holes in her back and her skull crushed. Deputy-Sheriff Kenny left with the prisoners on the evening train.

LAWMAKERS ARE LAWBREAKERS.

AFTER SIDEWALKS AND STREET LAMPS.

ALD. YOUMANS AND THE BOVINE BOVINES.

Accounts Paid, Reports Adopted and Expenses Encouraged—Chamber Chit-Chat.

As THE SUN's readers are aware, the town fathers have been taking their summer holidays for the past month and no civic business worth mentioning has been transacted during that interval until Monday night. A word of explanation may not be out of place here, for our tax burdened citizens might imagine that our civic representatives were over to Europe at their (the tax payers') expense. But such is not the case. The aldermanic holiday simply means that the councillors will give the chamber a wide berth for a certain number of weeks and attend to their own business when they are free from the harrowing cares of state. No trip at the ratepayers' expense or anything of the kind.

When the councillors took their seats on Monday night they looked greatly refreshed after their month's holiday, and as one gazed at the civic foreheads the gazer could not suppress a wish that the holiday season would come twice a year. Those present were Mayor Walsh, Reeve Lindsay, Deputy-reeve Endacott, Ald. Cobean, Ketchum, Fiddis, Young, Youmans and Gillespie, Green and McKitrick being the absentees. After the minutes of the last regular meeting and special meetings had been read and adopted the following were presented and ordered paid: Wallace Bros., $3.50; Mungovan Bros. $8.50; W. Penalton, $10.56; D. McDonald, $22 38; C P. R $18 50, Jas. Graham, $32.25; J J Hubbard. $3; T. Bird, $3; Jas. Morrison, $3 50. An account from R. Wilson, an Owen Sound lumber merchant, $143 45, was referred to the R. & B., and Beswick Aiken, $18 50, was handed to the F. & W.

WANT A LAMP.

A petition signed by a number of residents west of the C. P R tracks asked that an electric light be placed on the corner below Wellington street. Ald. Fiddis, chairman of the S L committee, said the S L. aggregation intended making a tour of the town before the extra light would be put up.

Reeve Lindsey produced Town Treasurer Irwin's statement for August. The treasurer complained that he had no way of finding out lots that should have snow shovelling charges marked against them.

R. & B. REPORT.

Ald Ketchum submitted the R. & B. report, to which was attached several accounts. The Isabella street sidewalk cost $30 more than the appropriation therefor, but such did not create a commotion. The mayor said the bylaw did not allow that sort of work, but it went "just as hard."

A GOOD IDEA.

Chairman Gillespie brought down the F. & W. committee's report. After several trivial matters were referred to the committee recommended that the waterworks building be heated with steam consequently a pressure of at least 15 pounds will be kept in the boiler all the time. The cost of the necessary pipes will be about $65, and it is said to be more economical than stoves. The council went into committee of the whole and the matter was thoroughly discussed. The report was adopted in its entirety.

NOT IN IT.

Mayor Walsh, although he said it was out of order, at this point read several accounts and communications that the clerk had overlooked. A Toronto firm of contractors heard this town was about to construct a system of waterworks and wanted a chance for the job. Another firm at Kingston wanted to know if the civic representatives required any rifles, pistols, shotguns or shooting irons of any description. As this town is not about to change its system of waterworks, or yet turn itself into a shooting-gallery, their letters were received with laughter by all.

THROWS UP THE SPONGE.

The mayor also read a communication from Charles King, captain of the fire brigade, resigning his position. For a long time a portion of the brigade has objected to the captain, and in this they were backed by Chairman Gillespie. The council went into committee of the whole on an old report of the F & W. committee, which proposed Mr. J. W Aiken for the captaincy. Mr. A. declined the position and he and several firemen petitioned the council to appoint Lieut. Patterson to the office. At a later stage a bylaw appointing Patterson was passed. Ald. Gillespie said he had no "personal" objection to the new captain Mr Aiken will be lieutenant.

THAT SIDEWALK.

Ald. Young and Fiddis South ward members, thought the new sidewalk on John street should be changed from 2 planks to a 4 plank walk, and that it be extended to the townline (we forget the name of the street), also that it be built on the west side of the street. Mr. Fiddis made a vigorous speech on behalf of the westsiders, but the mayor did not hold the same opinion. The reeve thought if a change was wanted those interested should petition the council to that effect. A vote was taken and the motion carried. Ald. Youmans said the new 2 plank walk on Mill street should have another plank in the centre, and the council thought so, too.

HUNTING TIMBER.

A little discussion arose over a $1 50 livery account in the R. & B report. Under the new bylaw, which appointed a foreman of works and defined his duties, the foreman should see to the purchasing of material, etc., but the "efficient" chairman of the R & B, did that himself. The other day the timber supply ran out and the corporation artists had to shut up the studio. Foreman McBride hired a livery rig and made a tour of the country in search of timber, and the livery bill was $1.50. Mr. McBride was asked to explain matters and he told the above story, and wound up by saying that if the council did not pay for the rig he would do it himself. The council will pay.

CHAMBER CHAT.

Merely Bros., from whom the new bell was purchased, said a draft would be forwarded shortly. After the bell is tested and found right the T. P. committee will order the treasurer to check up.

Ald. Youmans gave notice that at the next meeting he will introduce a bylaw to regulate the running at large of cattle. Does he want to quit public life?

ATHLONE.

SICK.—At present Mr. John McGinnis is seriously ill and his recovery is not expected.

WINDING UP.—Harvesting is pretty well advanced, but a large amount of peas and oats is out yet. Some farmers have already commenced sowing their fall wheat.

WHICH WILL WIN?—A football match between the Athlone and Ashill clubs will take place on Saturday next. The game will be stubbornly contested, and betting on the result is about even.

PICNIC.—The annual picnic in connection with St. James' church takes place at Colgan on the 22nd. Three young ladies are canvassing for the event and the proceeds will go to pay part of the debt on the new brick church. We trust it will be a success.

MONO CENTRE.

SEEDING.—Farmers are busily engaged sowing their fall wheat, and are more than hustling in order to gain enough time to attend the exhibition.

BURNS' CHURCH.—Rev. Mr. Hudson of Dundalk occupied the pulpit of Burns' church last Sunday and delivered good practical sermons.

PERSONAL.—Miss Fannie Henry has just returned from visiting friends at Meadowvale, Cheltenham and other points.....Mr. T H. Magwood of Toronto spent a few days with his father last week.....Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Ray and Miss Mary Daly of Wingham are guests at Mr. Andrew McCague's.....Miss Hamilton of Stratford is the guest of Mrs. Jas. Arthur.....Mrs. Jas. Wilkinson and Mrs Hugh Henry of Cheltenham spent a few days at Mr. Joseph Henry's last week.

NARROW ESCAPE.—One day last week Mr. Andrew Henry came very near losing a valuable team of horses. It appears that while unloading some grain a heavy scaffold underneath which the horses were standing gave way crushing the horses under about four tons of oats. After considerable difficulty they were extricated and in the course of an hour or two were able to resume work. The strangest feature of the accident was that under the derbis and lying across his mother's back was a young colt securely pinned down by a large pole. After a pry had been secured and sufficient room made to relieve the little animal it was hauled out and walked off quite contentedly. How the horses and colt escaped being crushed or smothered to death is a mystery.

CREDIT FORKS.

$50.000 to loan on mortgage security. Interest and expenses low, terms to suit borrowers. F. Irwin, office over Eudacott Bros' store Orangeville.

POLICE COURT ITEMS.—To morrow will be quite a day at our police court. Besides Billy Lowe's charivari case several more important disputes will be settled. Mrs. Amos has Mrs Jos Wilson up for assault and battery, the alleged offence occurred the other day.

OMITTED.—In the report of the A O U W. concert in last week's SUN two names were omitted from the list of those who contributed to the success of the entertainment. Mrs. Joseph Crabtree and Miss E J. Clarridge sang a pleasing duet entitled "I Don't Know Which to Choose," and were loudly encored by the audience.

SAM CAPTURED.—Mr. S. Hunter of this place was united in the holy bonds of matrimony on Friday last to Miss Polly McDonald of Bodmontain. The ceremony was performed in Orangeville by Rev. A. Henderson, M. A. Both bride and groom are well known in this section and will have the best wishes of their many friends for a long life of wedded bliss.

WHAT'S THE MATTER?—The long winded correspondent of an Orangeville paper has been lying low lately, and those not posted would imagine he has shaken Credit Forks red stone from his feet. For the information of those who are unfortunate enough to have business with the curious individual we may say that he can be found quarrying stone at the edge of the road where "lovers are forbidden to travel."

BILLY LOWE'S PAINFUL POSITION.—Billy Lowe is a stonecutter and has made Brimstone Point his headquarters for many years, but just now he is receiving very unfair treatment at the hands of the other residents of the Point and the Forks. Five years ago Billy took unto himself a wife at Cataract, but domestic troubles cropped up almost two years ago and the firm of Lowe & wife was immediately dissolved by mutual consent. Mrs. Lowe went to reside at Toronto, and Billy still continued to hang out at the old stand. Evidently Billy's faith in woman was not shattered by his disastrous cruise on matrimony's troubled sea, for about the middle of last week the erratic Billy made another venture in the marriage business, taking Miss Nesbitt, who is supposed to hail from Mulmur, as his partner. The people around here hold marriage as a very sacred thing and when Mr. Lowe committed bigamy they became very indignant and, so to speak, took the law into their own hands. Ever since that fateful Wednesday—the day the ceremony was performed—a mob has gathered in front, side and rear of the wedded man's domicile at night and one unaccustomed to the general run of things would imagine that a lunatic asylum was turned inside out. His outbuildings have been torn down, shingles pulled off his house and other damage done, and somebody went so far as to discharge a rifle at their residence, the bullet striking the front door and coming out at the back door. But above the din you can hear voices yelling for $5 to treat the crowd, but the V. does not find its way out of Billy's pocket. This man, being a big amist, is liable to severe punishment by law, and it does not speak very well for the respectability of the place to see a mob taking the law into their own hands and demanding money to buy drinks. To-morrow's police court will throw some light on the case and a complete report will appear in your paper next week.

THE FALL ASSIZES!

Very Little Business to Engage His Lordship's Attention.

WATERLOO MUTUAL V. KIRKLAND.

$855 RETURNED TO THE COMPANY.

The Judge's Address and the Grand Jury's Presentment.

The Dufferin fall assizes opened in the court house before Mr Justice Rose at 2:30 o'clock on Monday afternoon. His lordship missed the morning train from Toronto and had to come up by the steamboat express, which accounts for court not commencing business in the morning. The grand jury was sworn in as follows: Thos. MacAdam, (foreman) Geo. Wilcox, A. H. Turnbull, Henry Laverty, Orangeville; Robt. A. Ricky, Shelburne; Thos. Barber, Jas J. Buchanan, East Luther; John F. Breen, Jas. McCuo, Melancthon; John Dudgeon, Jas. Crombie, B Field; Simon Tremble, Jas. Torrance, Amaranth; Samuel Ewing, John W. Laird, Mono; Thos. Handly, Wm. Irvine, East Garafraxa; Geo. Henderson, David Henderson, Thos Johnston, David Kiernan, John Murphy, Mulmur.

Judge Rose's address was one of unusual length, and of a more practical nature than the average judicial charge. After His Lordship's address the only civil case on the docket was called:

AFTER THEIR MONEY.

The only civil action entered for trial was that of the Waterloo Mutual Fire Insurance Co. v. Kirkland, in which the plaintiffs sought to recover from the defendant $1700, being the amount that it was compelled to pay under policies of insurance issued by it covering the defendant's barn and certain chattel property of the tenant contained in it. It will be remembered that John Kirkland was convicted at the last fall assizes of setting fire to his barn. The Waterloo Mutual had insured same and its contents, and before knowing that Kirkland fired the barn himself they paid over the full amount of the loss. Their claim in this action was that as the fire was the result of Kirkland's own criminal act they were entitled to get their money back. The action was settled by a judgment being entered in favor of the company by consent for $855 without costs.

CHRONIC LITIGANTS.

The Queen v. Watson and the Queen v. Lusty were indictments for perjury preferred against each other by the litigants in a civil action of Watson v. Lusty. The grand jury evidently adopted His Lordship's views that these prosecutions were prompted by spite, and a desire to gain an advantage in the civil action instead of in the public interest, and accordingly threw out both bills.

His Lordship, Mr. Justice Rose, left for Toronto on Tuesday morning, and Judge McCarthy was appointed to receive the grand jury's report, after which the jurors received their pay and were dismissed.

THE JURY'S PRESENTMENT

To his Honor Judge McCarthy, presiding for the Hon. Mr. Justice Rose:—

We, the grand jurors, assembled at the assizes for the county of Dufferin for the fall of 1891, beg to report as follows: We have visited the jail and found it in good order and that everything is being done on the part of its officials to promote the comfort of those committed to their charge that it is their duty to do. We are, however, of the opinion that the present salary of $150 per annum to the present matron, Mrs. Sutherland, is an insufficient remuneration for the arduous duties she has to perform and would recommend that it be supplemented by at least $50. We found no prisoners in jail except a large number of persons committed for vagrancy, viz., fourteen. Whilst on this subject we feel it our duty to express our regret that so many persons, simply for the misfortune of poverty for which in many instances at least they are not personally responsible, should have to submit to the stigma of confinement in a place established for the punishment of the criminal classes, and trust that some satisfactory method will be speedily devised for the care of these unfortunate people, without submitting them to such punishment and disgrace, and we are thankful for the words on this subject that came from the bench in the address to us. We think that the county is to be congratulated on the apparent freedom from crime which was exhibited in the presentation at the opening of the court of a pair of white gloves. We are very much pleased to observe the apparent good health which is at present enjoyed by the Honorable Mr. Justice Rose and trust that he, as well as your Honor, will long be spared in that service to the country which has been so beneficial to it in the past.

T. MACADAM, Foreman.

BOWLING GREEN.

NEARLY DONE.—Harvesting operations are pretty well over in this section of the country and the hum of the binder is seldom heard. The crops were excellent and farmers will make a fortune this year.

THRESHING.—The steam whistle of the thresher is heard on every hand and the Curry boys will make a great season this year if goodluck follows them. The "hoe downs" will commence in a very short time.

RECOVERING.—Mr. Hugh Fennell is at present a little better, but is still very low.....The many friends of Mr. Arthur Rounding will be glad to know that he has completely recovered from his recent illness, but we are sorry to say that Mrs. Rounding is down with that dreaded disease diphtheria.

The Restof Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof. Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of even one week, they will yield from 14 to 17 per cent. less milk, and that of an inferior quality. Such milk will, on an average, turn some in seventy four hours instead of forty eight hours." Cows should have access to salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analyzed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock England coarse, etc.

general assent, the representatives of the four provinces shall be readjusted by such authority in such manner, and from such time as the Parliament of Canada provides from time to time, subject and according to the following rules:—

(1) Quebec shall have the fixed number of sixty five members.

(2) There shall be assigned to each of the other provinces such a number of members as will bear the same proportion to the number of its population (ascertained at such census) as the number sixty-five bears to the number of the population of Quebec (so ascertained.)

(3) In the computation of the number of members for a province, a fractional part not exceeding one half of the whole number requisite for entitling the province to a member shall be disregarded; but a fractional part exceeding one half of that number shall be equivalent to the whole number.

(4) On any such readjustment the number of members for a province shall not be reduced unless the proportion which the number of the population of the province bore to the number of the aggregate population of Canada at the then last preceding readjustment of the number of members for the province, is ascertained at the then latest census to be diminished by one twentieth part or upwards.

(5) Such readjustment shall not take effect until the termination of the then existing Parliament.

Applying these provisions to the provincial populations as ascertained by the census taken last April, it is found that Ontario will for the ensuing decade retain her representation precisely as at present, namely, 92 members, while Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island will each lose one, and New Brunswick two members. On the other hand, Manitoba will gain two members. The next Parliament will then be composed of the following representation:

| | Present basis. | New basis. |
|---|---|---|
| Ontario | 92 | 92 |
| Quebec | 65 | 65 |
| Nova Scotia | 21 | 20 |
| New Brunswick | 16 | 14 |
| Prince Edward Island. | 6 | 5 |
| Manitoba | 5 | 7 |
| Northwest | 4 | 4 |
| British Columbia | 6 | 6 |
| Totals | 215 | 213 |

The redistribution of seats, for the purpose of equalizing the basis of representation, does not, of course, depend in any way upon the point whether an increase or a decrease in the total membership from the province is made. Since 1867, no change in the electoral boundaries of Quebec has occurred, but it has long been apparent that a redistribution of seats has become necessary in order to preserve some sort of equality in the numerical basis, or representation by population, as between constituencies as well as between provinces. The county of Hochelaga, for instance, has a population of 81,011; while the counties of Laval, Three Rivers, Soulanges and Quebec west have each a population of less than 10,000, and it would be an anamolous and unfair thing to continue to give to each of these latter ridings the same representation in the House of Commons as Hochelaga enjoys. Indeed, there are ten electoral divisions in the province whose aggregate population does not exceed that of Hochelaga. Or take the case of the cities of Montreal and Quebec The former has a population of 182,695 within its electoral divisions, while the latter has only 63,090, or about one-third; yet in the Commons Quebec city has the same representation as Montreal So that, while the total number of members from this province cannot be increased, it is perfectly obvious that the basis of representation must be equalized, and the great centres of population, like Montreal, Hochelaga county and Ottawa county, be given a membership more in accordance with their population The same considerations will also apply to Ontario and other provinces, in every instance where a gross inequality in the basis of representation has been brought out by the shifting or the increase of population.

BRITISH TROOPS VIA THE C. P. R.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 7—A British regiment returning to England from China next month is to make the trip eastward by way of Canada. This will be the first practical test of Britain's new military highway to the east across her American possessions, and the result will be looked for with much interest Great Britain expects this route to be of enormous value in case of trouble in India and of the Suez Canal being blockaded. The agreement between the Government and the railroad for the use of the route was made public last week.

CUT IN PIECES BY A REAPER.

Frightful Accident to a Farmer's Son Near Drayton.

DRAYTON, Ont. Sept 7.—The 14 year-old son of Joseph Hills, Maryboro township, was driving a reaper, and in reaching forward to throw it out of gear one of the revolving rakes caught his head and threw him in front of the knives. Both arms and a leg were completely severed from his body. He was also severely cut about the face and died in two hours.

Habita Saad, Arab, aged about 23 years of age, was arrested at Guelph on Saturday by Deputy-Sheriff Kenny, of Lockport, and Chief of Police Handfel, near Acton on the charge of murdering his cousin, a young woman about 20, near Lockport, N. Y., on the 27th of August last. His brother Anthony was also arrested as an accomplice. The three were last seen together in a bush near Lockport. The body of the woman was afterwards discovered with two bullet holes in her back and her skull crushed. Deputy-Sheriff Kenny left with the prisoners on the evening train.

A young woman at London, Ont., is under committal charged with causing the death of her child.

Testimonials Encouraged—Chamber Chit-Chat.

AS THE SUN's readers are aware, the town fathers have been taking their summer holidays for the past month and no civic business worth mentioning has been transacted during that interval until Monday night. A word of explanation may not be out of place here, for our tax burdened citizens might imagine that our civic representatives were over to Europe at their (the tax payers') expense. But such is not the case. The aldermanic holiday simply means that the councillors will give the chamber a wide berth for a certain number of weeks and attend to their own business when they are free from the harrowing cares of state. No trip at the ratepayers' expense or anything of the kind.

When the councillors took their seats on Monday night they looked greatly refreshed after their month's holiday, and as one gazed at the civic foreheads the gazer could not suppress a wish that the holiday season would come twice a year. Those present were Mayor Walsh, Reeve Lindsey, Deputy-reeve Eudacott, Ald. Cobean, Ketchum, Fiddis, Young, Youmans and Gillespie, Green and McKitrick being the absentees. After the minutes of the last regular meeting and special meetings had been read and adopted the following were presented and ordered paid: Wallace Bros., $3.50; Mungovan Bros. $8.50; W. Pension, $10.56; D. McDonald, $22.38; C P. R $18 50, Jas. Graham, $32.25; J J Hubbard. $3; T. Bird, $3; Jas. Morrison, $3 50 An account from R. Wilson, an Owen Sound lumber merchant, $143 45. was referred to the R. & B., and Beswick Aiken, $18.50, was handed to the F. & W.

WANT A LAMP.

A petition signed by a number of residents west of the C. P. R tracks asked that an electric light be placed on the corner below Wellington street. Ald. Fiddis, chairman of the S L committee, said the S L. aggregation intended making a tour of the town before the extra light would be put up.

Reeve Lindsey produced Town Treasurer Irwin's statement for August The treasurer complained that he had no way of finding out lots that should have snow shovelling charges marked against them

R. & B. REPORT.

Ald Ketcham submitted the R. & B. report, to which was attached several accounts. The Isabella street sidewalk cost $30 more than the appropriation therefor, but such did not create a commotion. The mayor said the bylaw did not allow that sort of work, but it went "just as hard"

A GOOD IDEA.

Chairman Gillespie brought down the F. & W. committee's report. After several trivial matters were referred to the committee recommended that the waterworks building be heated with steam consequently a pressure of at least 15 pounds will be kept in the boiler all the time. The cost of the necessary pipes will be about $65, and it is said to be more economical than stoves The council went into committee of the whole and the matter was thoroughly discussed. The report was adopted in its entirety.

NOT IN IT.

Mayor Walsh, although he said it was out of order, at this point read several accounts and communications that the clerk had overlooked A Toronto firm of contractors heard this town was about to construct a system of waterworks and wanted a chance for the job. Another firm at Kingston wanted to know if the civic representatives required any rifles, pistols, shotguns or shooting irons of any description. As this town is not about to change its system of waterworks, or yet turn itself into a shooting-gallery, their letters were received with laughter by all.

THROWS UP THE SPONGE.

The mayor also read a communication from Charles King, captain of the fire brigade, resigning his position For a long time a portion of the brigade has objected to the captain, and in this they were backed by Chairman Gillespie The council went into committee of the whole on an old report of the F & W. committee, which proposed Mr J. W Aiken for the captaincy. Mr. A. declined the position and he and several firemen petitioned the council to appoint Lieut. Patterson to the office At a later stage a bylaw appointing Patterson was passed. Ald. Gillespie said he had no "earthly" objection to the new captain Mr Aiken will be lieutenant.

THAT SIDEWALK.

Ald. Young and Fiddis South ward members, thought the new sidewalk on John street should be changed from 2 planks to a 4 plank walk, and that it be extended to the townline (we forget the name of the street), also that it be built on the west side of the street. Mr. Fiddis made a vigorous speech on behalf of the westsiders, but the mayor did not hold the same opinion. The reeve thought if a change was wanted those interested should petition the council to that effect. A vote was taken and the motion carried. Ald. Youmans said the new 2 plank walk on Mill street should have another plank in the centre, and the council thought so, too.

HUNTING TIMBER.

A little discussion arose over a $1 50 livery account in the R. & B report. Under the new bylaw, which appointed a foreman of works and defined his duties, the foreman should see to the purchasing of material, etc., but the "efficient" chairman of the R & B, did that himself. The other day the timber supply ran out and the corporation artists had to shut up the studio Foreman McBride hired a livery rig and made a tour of the country in search of timber, and the livery bill was $1.50. Mr. McBride was asked to explain matters and he told the above story, and wound up by saying that if the council did not pay for the rig he would do it himself. The council will pay.

CHAMBER CHAT.

Messrs Bros., from whom the new well advanced, but a large amount of pens and cots is out yet. Some farmers have already commenced cutting their fall wheat.

WHICH WILL WIN?—A football match between the Ashland and Achill clubs will take place on Saturday next. The game will be stubbornly contested, and betting on the result is about even.

PICNIC.—The annual picnic in connection with St. James' church takes place at Colgan on the 22nd. Three young ladies are canvassing for the event and the proceeds will go to pay part of the debt on the new brick church. We trust it will be a success.

MONO CENTRE.

SEEDING.—Farmers are busily engaged sowing their fall wheat, and are more than hustling in order to gain enough time to attend the exhibition.

BURNS' CHURCH.—Rev. Mr. Hudson of Dundalk occupied the pulpit of Burns' church last Sunday and delivered good practical sermons.

PERSONAL.—Miss Fannie Henry has just returned from visiting friends at Meadowvale, Cheltenham and other points.....Mr T H. Magwood of Toronto spent a few days with his father last week.....Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Ray and Miss Mary Daly of Wingham are guests at Mr. Andrew McCague's.....Miss Hamilton of Stratford is the guest of Mrs. Jas. Arthur..... Mrs. Jas. Wilkinson and Mrs Hugh Henry of Cheltenham spent a few days at Mr. Joseph Henry's last week.

NARROW ESCAPE.—One day last week Mr. Andrew Henry came very near losing a valuable team of horses. It appears that while unloading some grain a heavy scaffold underneath which the horses were standing gave way crushing the horses under about four tons of oats. After considerable difficulty they were extricated and in the course of an hour or two were able to resume work. The strangest feature of the accident was that under the debris and lying across its mother's back was a young colt securely pinned down by a large pole. After a pry had been secured and sufficient room made to relieve the little animal it was hauled out and walked off quite contentedly. How the horses and colt escaped being crushed or smothered to death is a mystery.

CREDIT FORKS.

$50,000 to loan on mortgage security. Interest and expenses low, terms to suit borrowers. F. Irwin, office over Eudacott Bros' store Orangeville.

POLICE COURT ITEMS.—To morrow will be quite a day at our police court. Besides Billy Lowe's charivari case several more important disputes will be settled. Mrs. Amos has Mrs Jos Wilson up for assault and battery, the alleged offence occurred the other day.

OMITTED.—In the report of the A.O.U.W. concert in last week's SUN two names were omitted from the list of those who contributed to the success of the entertainment. Mrs. Joseph Crabtree and Miss E J. Clarridge sang a pleasing duet entitled "I Don't Know Which to Choose," and were loudly encored by the audience.

SAM CAPTURED.—Mr. S. Hunter of this place was united in the holy bonds of matrimony on Friday last to Miss Polly McDonald of Bolinbroke. The ceremony was performed in Orangeville by Rev. A. Henderson, M. A. Both bride and groom are well known in this section and will have the best wishes of their many friends for a long life of wedded bliss.

WHAT'S THE MATTER?—The long winded correspondent of an Orangeville paper has been lying low lately, and those not posted would imagine he has shaken Credit Forks red stone from his pods. For the information of those who are unfortunate enough to have business with the curious individual we may say that he can be found quarrying stone at the edge of the road where "lovers are forbidden to travel."

BILLY LOWE'S PAINFUL POSITION.—Billy Lowe is a stonecutter and has made Brimstone Point his headquarters for many years, but just now he is receiving very unfair treatment at the hands of the other residents of the Point and the Forks. Five years ago Billy took unto himself a wife at Cataract, but domestic troubles cropped up almost two years ago and the firm of Lowe & wife was immediately dissolved by mutual consent. Mrs. Lowe went to reside at Toronto, and Billy still continued to hang out at the old stand. Evidently Billy's faith in woman was not shattered by his disastrous cruise on matrimony's troubled sea, for about the middle of last week the erratic Billy made another venture in the marriage business, taking Miss Nesbitt, who is supposed to hail from Mulmur, as his partner. The people around here hold marriage as a very sacred thing and when Mr. Lowe committed bigamy they became very indignant and, so to speak, took the law into their own hands. Ever since that fateful Wednesday—the day the ceremony was performed—a mob has gathered in front, side and rear of the wedded man's domicile at night and one unaccustomed to the general run of things would imagine that a lunatic asylum was turned inside out. His outbuildings have been torn down, shingles pulled off his house and other damage done, and somebody went so far as to discharge a rifle at their residence, the bullet striking the front door and coming out at the back door. But above the din you can hear voices yelling for $5 to treat the crowd, but the V. does not find its way out of Billy's pocket. This man, being a bigamist, is liable to severe punishment by law, and it does not speak very well for the respectability of the place to see a mob taking the law into their own hands and demanding money to buy drinks. To morrow's police court will throw some light on the case and a complete report will appear in your paper next week.

Several seasons.

"For several seasons I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and find that it works a perfect cure even of the severest attacks of summer complaint and diarrhoea. It is as precious as gold."—Mrs. P. C. Wagner, Foothill, Ont.

the court house before Mr Justice Rose at 2:30 o'clock on Monday afternoon. His lordship missed the morning train from Toronto and had to come up by the steamboat express, which accounts for court not commencing business in the morning. The grand jury was sworn in as follows: Thos. MacAdam, (foreman) Geo. Wilcox, A H. Turnbull, Henry Laverty, Orangeville; Robt. A. Ricky, Shelburne; Thos. Barber, Jas J. Buchanan, East Luther; John F. Breen, Jas. McCuaig, Melancthon; John Dudgeon, Jas. Crombie, S Field; Simon Tremble, Jas. Torrance, Amaranth; Samuel Ewing, John W. Laird, Mono; Thos. Handly, Wm. Irvine, East Garafraxa; Geo. Henderson, David Henderson, Thos Johnston, David Kiernan, John Murphy, Hulmur.

Judge Rose's address was one of unusual length, and of a more practical nature than the average judicial charge. After His Lordship's address the only civil case on the docket was called:

AFTER THEIR MONEY.

The only civil action entered for trial was that of the Waterloo Mutual Fire Insurance Co. v. Kirkland, in which the plaintiffs sought to recover from the defendant $1700, being the amount that it was compelled to pay under policies of insurance issued by it covering the defendant's barn and certain chattel property of the tenant contained in it. It will be remembered that John Kirkland was convicted at the last fall assizes of setting fire to his barn. The Waterloo Mutual had insured same and its contents, and before knowing that Kirkland fired the barn himself they paid over the full amount of the loss. Their claim in this action was that as the fire was the result of Kirkland's own criminal act they were entitled to get their money back The action was settled by a judgment being entered in favor of the company by consent for $855 without costs.

CRIMINAL LITIGANTS.

The Queen v. Watson and the Queen v. Lusty were indictments for perjury preferred against each other by the litigants in a civil action of Watson v. Lusty. The grand jury evidently adopted His Lordship's views that these prosecutions were prompted by spite, and a desire to gain an advantage in the civil action instead of in the public interest, and accordingly threw out both bills.

His Lordship, Mr. Justice Rose, left for Toronto on Tuesday morning, and Judge McCarthy was appointed to receive the grand jury's report, after which the jurors received their pay and were dismissed.

THE JURY'S PRESENTMENT

To his Honor Judge McCarthy, presiding for the Hon. Mr. Justice Rose:—

We, the grand jurors, assembled at the assizes for the county of Dufferin for the fall of 1891, beg to report as follows: We have visited the jail and found it in good order and that everything is being done on the part of its officials to promote the comfort of those committed to their charge that it is their duty to do. We are, however, of the opinion that the present salary of $150 per annum to the present matron, Mrs. Sutherland, is an insufficient remuneration for the arduous duties she has to perform and would recommend that it be supplemented by at least $50. We found no prisoners in jail except a large number of persons committed for vagrancy, viz., fourteen. Whilst on this subject we feel it our duty to express our regret that so many persons, simply for the misfortune of poverty for which in many instances at least they are not personally responsible, should have to submit to the stigma of confinement in a place established for the punishment of the criminal classes, and trust that some satisfactory method will be speedily devised for the care of these unfortunate people, without submitting them to such punishment and disgrace, and we are thankful for the words on this subject that came from the bench in the address to us. We think that the county is to be congratulated on the apparent freedom from crime which was exhibited in the presentation at the opening of the court of a pair of white gloves. We are very much pleased to observe the apparent good health which is at present enjoyed by the Honorable Mr. Justice Rose and trust that he, as well as your Honor, will long be spared in that service to the country which has been so beneficial to it in the past.

T. MACADAM, Foreman.

BOWLING GREEN.

NEARLY DONE.—Harvesting operations are pretty well over in this section of the country and the hum of the binder is seldom heard. The crops were excellent and farmers will make a fortune this year.

THRESHING.—The steam whistle of the thresher is heard on every hand and the Curry boys will make a great season this year if goodluck follows them. The "hoe downs" will commence in a very short time.

RECOVERING.—Mr. Hugh Fennell is at present a little better, but is still very low.....The many friends of Mr. Arthur Rounding will be glad to know that he has completely recovered from his recent illness, but we are sorry to say that Mrs. Rounding is down with that dreaded disease diphtheria.

Solomon's Wisdom.

The Wisdom of Solomon, were he alive to-day, would lead him to choose Burdock Blood Bitters as a remedy for all diseases of the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. It cures dyspepsia, biliousness, headache, constipation and all forms of bad blood from a common pimple to the worst scrofulous sore.

The Best of Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof. Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of over one week they will yield from 14½ to 17½ per cent. less milk, and that of an inferior quality. Such milk will, on an average, turn sour in twenty four hours less than milk drawn from the same or similar cows receiving salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analyzed 99 84-100 Pure Salt All kinds of stock will do better where this salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock the most coarse, as

STILL HAPPY.—The census returns show that Brampton's population is 3252, an increase of nearly 500 in ten years. We are still ahead of Orangeville and of course comparatively happy.—Banner.

GARDEN PARTY AT HOCKLEY.—The congregation of St. James' mission church, Hockley, will hold a grand entertainment at that place to morrow (Friday) evening in aid of the building fund. A pleasing and attractive program has been prepared and no doubt a large crowd will attend.

A GREAT INVENTION.—The first Edison phonograph ever operated in Orangeville is on exhibition in the store below THE SUN office, and great crowds are seeing it. Mr John Jelly, the manager, is as obliging as ever, and you should see the great instrument. It will be here until Saturday night.

DEATH OF HAZEL JOHNSTON.—The Death Messenger visited the home of Mr. W. Johnston, of A. & W. Johnston, Wednesday evening, and plucked out one of its fairest flowers—Hazel is asleep in death. In their sad bereavement Mr and Mrs Johnston will have the sympathy of their many friends.

[illegible]N'T BITE.—A "Chicago detective agency" is flooding the country with circulars in which they inform their victims that for $10 they will secure the appointment of the victim as a detective to work at the world's fair. The offer is a swindle pure and simple, but a bit of good advice is, if you have $10 to lose, tie it up in something else.

THE DUFFERINS DOWNED.—Three nine-four members of the Dufferin lacrosse club and several juniors went to Brampton on Friday and played a return match with the Excelsiors of that town. The Brampton boys were in fine form and had on their best players, and, as is expected, succeeded in defeating Tansevville by 8 games to 0. Won't the Forest laugh!

A THIRSTY SQUAW.—Last Tuesday a dusky maiden from the Forks paid one of her periodical visits to Orangeville and became overloaded with fire water. She was "mashed" on every young "pale face" she happened to meet, and when the "pale faces" fled up the street in horror the fleet footed child of the wilderness pursued them. She left for the Forks by the evening train.

A WIFE DESERTER CAPTURED.—Last Thursday Wm. Ward, alias Maxwell, who deserted his wife at Dundalk a few months ago and ran away with a young girl, was hauled in at Markham and taken to Dundalk to stand his trial for deserting his wife. The preliminary proceedings took place on Saturday and Ward was committed to Owen Sound jail until the assizes, when he will be tried. His paramour was remanded till Monday. Chief Shields of this town located the deserter.

A BIG BELL.—The new town bell arrived in Orangeville from Meneeley Bros.' foundry at Troy, N. Y., this week and will probably be placed in its position at the top of the tower on Saturday. In the side of our other bells were engraved the words "City of Orangeville," but since the recent census was taken the new bell is the "Town of Orangeville," and underneath this inscription the names of our civic representatives stand out in bold relief. The bell and hangers weigh about 2400 pounds.

CLOSED BY DIPHTHERIA.—For the past several days the Camilla postmaster has refused to receive mail matter from the Whittington postoffice on account of diphtheria which is so prevalent around the latter place. Several members of the Whittington P. M.'s family are down with the disease and the Camilla man was afraid of introducing it around his hamlet. The Whittington postoffice will be removed to some other house until the disease disappears. Churches and schools have suspended for the present.

PAID HIM IN COPPERS.—Constable Charlton was up at the Toronto Police Court Thursday afternoon charged with refusing to pay Michael McNeil $1 wages due him for bricklaying. It was finally agreed that Charlton should pay the man, and on that understanding the case was dismissed. Then the fun came. Charlton went out, got a hundred copper and doled them out one at a time. This was all well enough but the man knew that copper was legal tender only to the amount of 25c. When he had received this amount he kicked vigorously. He wanted silver for the balance, he said. But the constable didn't happen to have it and at last with "Howly Moses, I suppose I'll hav to." Michael pocketed his pound of copper and marched away.—Guelph Heardld.

MUSICAL MEN.—At the weekly practice meeting of the Orangeville orchestra last Thursday evening in the King block the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: W. F. Seymour, B. A., president; W. Wallace, secretary; J. H. Hulse, conductor and treasurer; W. Bamsley, librarian; W. H. Hill, A. Bell, J. H. Hulse, executive committee; W. F. Seymour, J. J. Hulse, E. Shaver auditing committee. The following constitute the orchestra, with the instruments upon which they perform: J. H. Hulse (conductor) and W. Bamsley, 1st violins; E. Shaver and H Bowles, 2nd violins; T. Presley, violincello; J. J. Hulse, bass violin; Geo. Presley, flute and piccolo; W. J. McLeod, flute; W. F. Seymour, clarinet; John Presley, 1st cornet; A. Bell, 2nd cornet; W. H. Hill, trombone; F. Marshall, ophonium; Robt. Shields, snare drum; W. Wallace, bass drum, etc.

FIGHTING OVER THE FARM.—Wm. Parsons, real estate agent, Adelaide street, is suing John A. Blake, a farmer, and Wm Dixon (Parson's late partner) for an injunction and the appointment of a receiver under the following circumstances: The three men, Parsons, Blake and Dixon, are equally interested in a large farm at Niagara, situated next the Chautauqua Assembly grounds and valued at about $30,000. Blake, who is a farmer, cultivates the land, and accuses Blake of selling the fruit off the farm in a sly manner, and as the peach crop, which the land produces each year, amounts to about $3,000, the court is moved to appoint a receiver and issue an injunction to prevent Blake selling any more peaches. A motion to partition the land is also included. The matter was enlarged this morning before Chancellor Boyd pending the examination of Wm Parsons.—Toronto Telegram. The Wm. Parsons mentioned above is none other than the dashing Major Parsons, who resided in Orangeville for many years and is well known to most of our citizens.

CAMILLA.

CHURCH SERVICES.—There will be two services in the Camilla church on Sunday at 2:30 and 7:30 o'clock p. m. Rev. Mr. Hudson of Dundalk will conduct the services.

GETTING BETTER.—We are glad to announce that Willie Howard, who broke his leg several weeks ago, is almost able to be around again. Mr. Harry Culp is improving, but is still very weak.

MERRY THRESHERS.—Bob and Dave Stevens have purchased a new separator and engine and they will undoubtedly receive a fair share of patronage. McKim Bros. have started their machine and are doing good work.

DIPHTHERIA NOT HERE. Diphtheria has been hovering around on all sides of Camilla, but at the time of writing no cases have been reported to the health authorities. Can't THE SUN issue some easily procured disinfectant.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES.—In some places the apples are a complete failure, while in other places the trees are laden.....In some places around here potatoes are rotting in the fields and the tops are turning black. Old heads say a general rot will ensue.

THE PRODIGAL RETURNED.—Mr John Lewis has returned to Camilla again and he has with him a tired man. This is a boom to Mr. Morrison, as it will save his back from carrying the hod and as acting churchboy to Joy Honesty & Liberty Lewis.

BRIEF ITEMS.—Messrs. Joe Reid and Davie Trimble have taken a trip to the Northwest.....Harvesting is almost a thing of the past and the farmers can now listen to the hired man whistling without getting mad. Although the crops are not as good as was anticipated, still they are away above the average.....Mr. Thos. Essery is making extensive improvements at his cattle farm. Tom is enterprising and we wish we had more men like him.

GLENOE GALOOTS.—There is a gang of boys who come from Glenoe and if they are not more careful how they act when they come to Camilla the galoots will be taught how to act in the Orangeville jail. Joseph Howard's orchard bears marks of their vandalism, and James Doney had his garden trampled and several articles stolen. Not content with this the galoots attempted to steal his honey, but luckily there was none to steal. The galoots may thank their stars that their names are not published.

CHURCH REOPENING.—Camilla Presbyterian church was reopened on Sunday, the 30th, Rev. Mr. Neil of Carleton street church, Toronto, preached two powerful sermons from the words "My words are a light unto my feet and a lamp unto my path." The church was filled to overflowing and then scores had to be turned away being unable to get near. Forty-six dollars was raised at both collections and many from Orangeville were present. On Monday, the 31st, a concert was held in the evening and both the musical and literary excellence of it has never been, we believe, equalled north of Toronto. Miss Turnbull from Orangeville sang and Revs. McRobbie, Neil and Hudson and Rev. Mr. Burt and Ballantyne addressed the audience who were so delighted that they thought 12.30 too early to go home.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Wm. Duffy of Lisle is in town.

DROWNING ACCIDENT.

Miss Mary Stewart of Maple Valley Falls in a Mill-Pond and is Drowned.

SHELBURNE, Ont., Sept. 6.—Miss Mary Stewart, who has for some time past been keeping house for her father Thomas Stewart of Maple Valley, a few miles from here, was found drowned in the mill pond yesterday. When the men came home for dinner they found that dinner had not been prepared, and she was missing. A search was instituted with the result that her body was found floating in the mill pond near the house.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—Miners and Workers in Goldfields.—This invaluable and renowned Ointment is extensively used and patronized by such people for their very great advantage, being small compass it is portable and easy of application. When used in conjunction with Holloway's Pills in accordance with the clear and concise directions for use which accompany each pot and box, there are few of the diseases which afflict mankind that will not yield to the combined powers of these remedies. Holloway's Ointment and Pills do not deteriorate by keeping nor by change of climate, and as they contain no deleterious mineral drug, they can be used with the most perfect safety under the most adverse climates and sanitary conditions.

TOSSED THE MEN IN ALL DIRECTIONS.

WALSH, Ont., Sept. 7.—About 11 a. m. to day at the barn of H. M. Carver, a farmer one mile from this village, the threshing engine of Henry B. Palmerston exploded with tremendous force. The machine was in action at the time of the explosion and the engineer had just stepped into the barn. The threshing hands were thrown about in all directions, but no one was seriously injured. The engine is a total wreck.

Mr. Charles R. Devlin, M. P. for Ottawa county, is at the point of death from an affection which had supervened in the throat. At a late hour Drs. Quirk and Trudel were in consultation, but the position was considered very serious.

If you could see your own scalp through an ordinary magnifying glass, you would be amazed at the amount of dust, dandruff and dead skin thereon accumulated. The best and most popular preparation for cleansing the scalp is Ayer's Hair Vigor.

An English bridegroom has been fined for disorderly conduct during the marriage ceremony. He was very shy and nervous, and to "give him courage" quietly took out a flask while the clergyman was reading the exhortation and indulged in a nip. The church was pretty dark and he thought no one saw him but in this he was mistaken, for the clergyman knew the service by heart, and instead of looking at the book was looking at him. He was fined $5 and costs.

very pale, Lady Trewavas stood silent and amazed, she listened eagerly to the man's rapid and foreign accent, and peculiar voice.

"You are not a peddler," she said, abruptly.

"Pardon, lady," said he. "No. You are right. I am not a peddler, but a travelling merchant—a dealer in silks and jewels, lace, lacon, feathers, shawls—anything you please; or I take jewels in exchange, if your ladyship—"

"Of what use is it to bestow this jargon upon me?" said Lady Trewavas sternly. "It is evident to me you are not what you seem. You are an emissary of Olive Varcoe's. Why has she sent you hither?"

"Lady, you see the truth at once," said he. "I will not try to deceive you. Yes, I am a messenger from your niece, but she only sent me to deliver that packet. Now I have done her bidding, I go back to my own land."

Twisting the packet in her hands, Lady Trewavas remained a moment, bewildered and silent. It was so like Olive to send a letter in this wild, outlandish way, that she did not doubt the man's statement.

"I suppose you know," she resumed, "that it would be dangerous and cruel to mention to any one where you saw this unhappy girl; you know it is unsafe even to name her."

"I have listened and not spoken since I have been in this land," replied the peddler. "Will you give me a line to show the packet has come safe to your hands?"

"Shall you see her again, then, soon?" asked Lady Trewavas, eagerly.

"Not soon," replied the wily peddler, "but we may meet again, and then I would like her to know I had obeyed her commands."

Lady Trewavas glanced uneasily at the man's face, and then said, in a hurried manner, "I will give you a line to-morrow, when I have read this. Come for it if you will."

"I dare not promise to come to-morrow, lady," said he; "but if you will put the letter in this handkerchief, and put it in the old hollow tree that overhangs the turnstile by the church, I can get it by a sure hand."

The lady took the handkerchief he held towards her.

"I will put the letter in the tree my self," she said, quietly.

"Thanks, madam," said the peddler, bowing low, but without lifting his hat, and in another moment his long, ungainly shadow might be seen gliding swiftly over the park.

Lady Trewavas watched the peddler till he was out of sight, and it was not till then that she turned towards the house. She opened the packet in Sir Hilton's presence. There were two letters within, one addressed to herself, one to Sir Hilton. As Sir Hilton tore open his letter, a bundle of bank notes fell to the ground. This was all it contained; there was not a word or line on the blank sheet of paper. Trembling with excitement, he did not stoop to pick up the money lying at his feet.

"Grandmother," he said, in a low voice, "what is the meaning of this?"

Lady Trewavas did not reply, but put the other letter in his hand, and he read the following lines:

"MY DEAR AUNT—I cannot begin my letter any other way, parted though we are in anger and in pain. I will not say how often I think of Trewavas, or how sad I am at times. I write only to send you the money I owe you and Sir Hilton, for my long residence beneath your roof—a residence of two years—more than half my life. I find that you have generously deducted nothing from my little fortune, for all the expense to which I have put you. I might accept this kindness into charity from you, aunt, but I will not take it from Sir Hilton Trewavas. I enclose in another packet the sum I owe him. I send it by a sure hand, who will bring a letter to me in return if you care for me enough to write it. Before I left England I heard, not from Mr. Truscott direct, but through him, that you wished to settle two hundred a year on me. I cannot accept it. Do not be hurt, I assure you it is utterly impossible for me to accept any favor of this kind at your hands. Trust me, and believe me in this, though you will in nothing else. I should not insist on repaying you all I have cost you unless my present position imperatively forced me to do you this justice. If you think I do this from pride and ill will, you will mistake me.

"Farewell, aunt. I must not give you any news of myself, beyond saying that I am well, and that I am still in heart,

"Your niece,
"OLIVE VARCOE

"P. S.—Take care of John. I fear his health needs watchfulness."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

A Narrow Escape.

"I would probably have been in my grave to-day and it not been for the Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. For two years I suffered from bowel complaint and became very weak and thin, but after using half a bottle of the extract I was completely cured and have since had no return of the complaint."—Miss Zillah M. Hunting st., Toronto.

The German Emperor is said to be extremely fond of his big, kind hearted blonde frau, and is reported as saying: "I could wish no better to men of my nation than that the girls would follow the example of their Empress in devoting their lives as she does to the cultivation of three K's—Die Kirche, Die Kinder, and Die Kuche" (the church, the children, and the cuisine).

The voice of the People.

In every part of canada the voice of the people rules, and the voice of the people adores Burdock Blood Bitters as the best and surest blood purifier known. Nothing drives out boils, blotches, humors, sores and impurity so quickly as B. B. B., and perfect health with bright pure skin always follows its use.

Watches, in gold and silver, all styles, at Fox's.

THE HOTEL SWELL.

"Let me see the letters to F," said a dapper-looking young fellow at the Ryan last night. Eugene Mehl watched the fellow as he ran over the packet, taking out one missive that was evidently from a feminine correspondent. As the fellow walked over toward the waiting room, Mr. Mehl said:—"I believe that there are 125 people waiting their mail here who have no right to do so." Just then he of the dapper appearance returned and asked for some paper and envelopes. "The same old game," said Mehl. "He is carrying on a correspondence from the Ryan and is boarding at a $4 a week house. It costs us many hundreds of dollars to supply these people with stationery and we have them all spotted, but cannot refuse them without causing unpleasant scenes, and then it is less trouble to give them what they ask for. It is all in a life time and we can't help but admire gall.

Don't You Forget It.

"I will never forget that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry saved my life. Five years ago I had a terrible attack of summer complaint and was given up by the doctor and my parents. A friend advised Fowler's Strawberry and at the second dose I was relieved and soon was as well as ever."—Maggie McGillivray, Falsenburg, Ont.

SUNBEAMS.

"So you're 5 years old, Nellie! Well when will you be 6?" "On my next birthday, sir!"

A man no sooner gets old enough to know how to talk well than he also learns the value of not talking at all.

The most attentive man to business we ever knew was he who wrote on his shop door "Gone to get married: return in half an hour."

Blushing Girl—"Yes, Dick. My heart is in your keeping." Young Bagganeman—"My own darling! I will give you a check for it."

Cook (ruminating in the kitchen)—"I wonder what I must do today to rile the missis. Shall I burn the roast meat to a cinder or boil the potatoes to a hash!"

Oppressive headaches, partial loss of vision, hawking and spitting, are certain symptoms of catarrh. Hazel Balm never fails to give immediate relief and effect a permanent cure. Easy to use, pleasant and agreeable. It has cured thousands of others and will cure you.—Sold by all dealers or sent on receipt of price (50c. and $1 a bottle) by addressing G. T. Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont.

She—"Papa, may I marry Jack? I could go further and fare worse." He—"You couldn't fare worse."—She—"Then what's the use of my going further!"

Adam's experience was typical rather than unique. He kicked up his heels in joyous ignorance for a little while, got married and had to go to work.

Mr. Grump—"I can't see, my dear, what good that border of fur does around the hem of your skirt." Mrs. Grump—"Why it shows that I can afford it."

"Build a hell for these New Yorkers," shrieks Dr. Talmage. What's the use? The chances are they would call on the balance of the country to subscribe to a feul fund.

Sallow and leaden-hued complexions soon give place to the loveliest pink and white, when the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is persisted in, and constipation entirely abandoned. Nothing can counteract the rosy glow of perfect health, which blesses those who use this medicine.

Sunday School Teacher—And now, children, who have we to thank for the beautiful sunshine, and, more than all, the health giving rains with which we are blessed? Texas Class (in unison)—Uncle Jerry Rusk.

Poet (impressively)—I always know when I write something that is very good. Critic (thoughtfully)—But do you know when you write something that is very bad?

Adair, the Photographer, for beautiful finished Photos all sizes and style, cheap. Gallery, opposite Harry Gillespie's book store.

A Common Origin.

All skin diseases of whatever name or nature are caused by impure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters is a natural foe to impure blood, removing all foul humors from a common pimple to the worst scrofulous sore.

"So you passed yourself as a widow while you were away, eh?" said Mr. Briggs to his spouse, who, by the way, is rather good looking. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself, but I suppose you are not." "Of course I am not," was her reply. "I did it merely on Johnny's account. You have no idea how kind all the gentlemen were to him."

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Is the "Ideal" Hair-dressing. It restores the color to gray hair; promotes a fresh and vigorous growth; prevents the formation of dandruff; makes the hair soft and silken; and imparts a delicate but lasting perfume.

"Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. I tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best in the world."—T. Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a number of years, and it has always given me satisfaction. It is an excellent dressing, prevents the hair from turning gray, insures its vigorous growth, and keeps the scalp white and clean."—Mary A. Jackson, Salem, Mass.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for promoting the growth of the hair, and think it unequaled. For restoring the hair to its original color, and for a dressing, it cannot be surpassed."—Mrs. Geo. La Fever, Eaton Rapids, Mich.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a cure for dandruff."—J. W. Bowen, Editor "Enquirer," McArthur, Ohio.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past two years, and found it all it is represented to be. It restores the natural color to gray hair, causes the hair to grow freely, and keeps it soft and pliant."—Mrs. M. V. Day, Cohoes, N. Y.

"My father, at about the age of fifty, lost all the hair from the top of his head. After one month's trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor the hair began coming, and, in three months, he had a fine growth of hair of the natural color."—P. J. Cullen, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

STRATFORD, ONT., January 15, 1891.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIRS—Your Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are the best medicine for that purpose that humanity was ever blest with. Life is at the longest a burden if we are troubled with any of the ills that are cured by your pills. A few months ago I was a sufferer from Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and Constipation, and what is the result—at first, only a slight difference was noticable in my condition, but each pill seemed to do its work more effectually than the preceding one, until at last, what would have been considered a miracle in those days, I found myself cured. Since then I have been troubled with sick headache, but a few of your pills have been sufficient to clear the entire system, leaving me free from headache, improved in health, and free from pain. In one word, I have been cured with little trouble, because I always find the system responds to the use of Morse's Pills, and we preserve vigor and vitality.
Yours truly,
H. F. ARMEL.

ARNPRIOR POST, P.O., Jan. 19, '91.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIR—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an actual personal experience of their value and merits. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling equipment complete without a box of Morse's Pills.

FRANCE AND GERMANY.

A CONFLICT BETWEEN THE TWO REGARDED AS INEVITABLE.

The Great Soldi[illegible] Statesmen [illegible] New, French [illegible] Generals Want Why the Nations Rush Off.

To-day, as yesterday, as to-morrow, and so for a long time to come, the attention of France and Germany forms the great subject of anxiety which is imposed upon the meditation of all European statesmen. As no other point is in foresight that war can break out, Russia has great ambitions, and Italy has strong desires; but Russia is too remote, doomed merely to cherish ambitions, for she cannot realize them single-handed, and it does not depend upon her to provoke a general war, which would be one result of her combined action with France, while as for Italy, she will never venture to give the signal of war, for if she did, she would be left to herself, and would be perilously overwhelmed. It could be safely as the result of a general war that Italy could obtain her share. And in the present state of her alliances she could also that share only from France, so that a general war alone could procure it for her; inasmuch as, if she were left single-handed, she would not be able to overcome France. Neither Austria nor England dreams of war. It is therefore still, as twenty years ago, France and Germany who could decision war; because, whatever may be alleged, whatever may be proclaimed, or whatever may be conceded, [illegible] war—[illegible] for the sake, and next for the rest; and if, in order to have done with this [illegible] France-Germany right reason, forgive, and have promise to fold her arms, and afterwards to intervene merely as arbiter, war would break out to-morrow between France and Germany, for the fatality of war haunts and overrules both nations. An end should be put once for all to the fiction which everybody affects to believe, but which is believed by nobody who is accustomed to search for the truth of things by probing human depths; it is not true that the Alsace-Lorraine question is what places France and Germany face to face, with hatred in their eyes.

I have long been tormented by the desire of telling the simple, real, and undisguised truth on this subject. What means the Germans and French repeatedly confront each other is the unexpected [illegible] ter and the crushing victory of the [illegible] Alsace and Lorraine are objects of grief and pride chiefly because they are the [illegible] and tangible trophy of the triumph of one party and the overthrow of the other. By this I do not mean that the Germans do not love Alsace and Lorraine. I only mean that they [illegible] them all the more because by recovering [illegible] they will at the same time restore [illegible] Not [illegible] I mean that the [illegible] do not [illegible] great store on them, [illegible] keeping them they remain at the same time victors holding the front rank. These provinces and Lorraine, dear to the [illegible] as to the other, are for both, above all things, the symbol of defeat and the [illegible] of victory. Their restitution pure and simple could not suffice to those who have lost them. It would not efface the humiliation of the vanquished or the pride of the victors; it would leave untouched, despite protocols and treaties, the irremediable antagonism which separates the two nations; and this feeling is such, I venture to affirm, at the risk of appearing paradoxical, that if Alsace were not an absolute hypothesis, the French would be more easily resigned to losing the German Alsace and Lorraine than to merely defeating them, just as the Germans would suffer less from a surrender of these two provinces after winning a fresh victory over the French. For if at this moment France is anxious to prove that it is not the empire much more than herself which was vanquished, then, if the case arose, would it be the contrary, or that it was France herself that was vanquished in overthrowing the Germans? The conclusion to be drawn from this is that the question [illegible] not between France and Germany, that no conference can settle it, and that, whatever the issue, the battle of the fate of nations can alone decide [illegible] the antagonism of sentiments which separates the German from the Frenchman.

Till 1870 France held the [illegible] of the world [illegible] could be unchallenged in [illegible] consent. No [illegible] was [illegible] from him [illegible] The day after he expelled [illegible] Austria and Prussia [illegible] before the greater half [illegible] dissatisfaction. Since the war of 1870 this role has ceased to belong to France. Germany has usurped it, and [illegible] it is to what has resulted the [illegible] who remains alone, arriving in [illegible] attention to neutralize the [illegible] supremacy of Germany, allowing France to render him apparent homage in order to emphasize his attitude, but really knowing himself to be doomed to impotality as long as he remains outside the allied empires. Very reassured that what weighs on the heart of France is the invention of authority, the lost place in the front rank of Europe, her supremacy questioned, the victor for twenty years regulating the main elements of the settlement of which till then belonged without dispute to the supreme will of France. This is what she cannot bear. Those who dream of settling the Franco-German question by a compromise must also resign themselves to this. Never will this question have ended in the pure [illegible] that atmosphere of peace. If Germany were agreed to restore Alsace and Lorraine to France in return for a pledged contracting power, France would agree to such an arrangement with the greatest repugnance, and would avert her eyes forever from the mocking deliverer who at such a price had her sheathe her sword. She has not, however, to dread any such mortification, for Germany would fly to arms a hundred times sooner than lose her conquered prey; and notwithstanding her past victory, she, too, dreams of returning it afresh. No, peace is not concluded between the two nations. No, the era of combats between them is not over, and the sword is what must again and again decide, until the unknown time when a new morality shall govern the world, and when the God of peace shall be universally acknowledged.—From "Germany, France, and General European Politics," by M. de Blowitz, in Harper's Magazine for September.

The Book of Common Prayer.

A recent addition to the Pratt Free Library at Baltimore, Md., is a photo-lithographic fac-simile in book form of the original manuscript of the Book of Common Prayer. It has excited the interest of hundreds of literary men and the Episcopal clergy who have visited the library to look at it. The publication is a reproduction of the manuscript Book of Common Prayer, which was attached as annexed to the act of uniformity, and which for this reason is often called the Annexed Book. It was been issued as a companion volume to the Book of Common Prayer, revised by convention A. D. 1661, which was reproduced in facsim le A. D. 1871, for the Royal Commission on Ritual, and is commonly styled the Convocation Book. It was from this book that the Annexed Book was fairly written out. The Annexed Book has been supposed to have been lost since the year 1819. It was, however, discovered in 1867. It has been preserved among the originals of the acts of Parliament, which included the act of uniformity itself, but has been detached from the act. When the book was found it was placed, and has since remained, in the custody of the librarian of the House of Lords.

The book now produced has been lithographed by her Majesty's printers from photographs of the original, page by page, without disturbing the binding, and without removing the volume from the precincts of the House of Lords or from the custody of Mr. J. H. Pulman, the present librarian. At the end of the volume is a fac-simile of the back of the original book, in which the seven holes, through six of which the strings passed to attach the volume to the act, as well as the ends of the six strings, may be recognized. The Act of Uniformity still exhibits holes corresponding exactly with the six strings. The work also contains the fac-simile of the signatures of the convocation of December, 1661, headed by the famous William, Archbishop of Canterbury.

The Safest

AND most powerful alterative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the eruptive diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William F. Dougherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. As last we began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child is livelier, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of almost every kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M.D., Wiggs, Arkansas.

Poetry.

CONSOLATION.

"Come unto me all ye that labor and I will refresh you."

Oh weary souls, oh careful souls,
And ye that long for rest,
Come lay your weary, aching heads
Upon that gentle breast:
The gentle breast of Jesus dear,
Our Love so meek and mild,
And there remain unfettered while
Life's storms are raging wild.

In joys and sorrows, griefs and fears,
Oh come with childlike trust;
For He is waiting, ready to aid
The sinner, as well as the just.
Oh, do not doubt His tender love;
He gave himself for thee;
His tender Heart is yearning now
From sin to set you free.

If your cross is heavy, and hard to bear,
And earth seems dark and drear,
He bids us come with perfect love
Which casteth out all fear
For Satan to His blessed words,
He uttered with all zest:
"All ye that labor come to me
And I will give you rest."

How sweet upon a Saviour's breast
Our weary heads to lean,
And there receive a kind embrace,
Be all the world unseen.
He died for us, and even now
He's yearning for our love,
And only wishes us to turn
Our minds to Him above.

So when cares and sin encompass thee,
Just raise thy heart above,
And offer it to Jesus dear,
So full of pity and Love.
Then He will give you all you need—
For hear His words so blest:
"All ye that labor come to Me
And I will give you rest."

Toronto, Aug., 1891. ANNIE E. HARRIS.

The Story Teller.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER XIV.

"Then she is not married!" exclaimed Sir Hilton. "She signs herself 'Varcoe.' Can she have sunk so low? Is young Vigo such a coward?"

"Can you blame him, Hilton?" said Lady Trewavas. "Would you have married Olive Varcoe?"

"No," replied Sir Hilton; "but I would not have taken advantage of her guilt and her defencelessness—"

"Neither has Charles Vigo," interrupted Lady Trewavas, "Think better of him, Hilton, and of your cousin also. Passionate as Olive has too often shown herself, she has the honor of a queen. This is not the letter of a woman who has lost self respect. Her crime was the impulse of a desperate moment; her virtues are her own. Poor girl—poor poor girl!"

Lady Trewavas felt her eyes fill with tears, and to hide them, she stooped and picked up the notes lying at Sir Hilton's feet. She laid them on the table before him, but he swept them down again savagely.

"Grandmother," said he, "why did you never say a good word of her before? Why have you waited until she was an outcast, wandering we know not whither before you confess she has some virtue? And what is she doing? If she is not Charles Vigo's wife, how is she living? She has stripped herself of all she possesses to send us this accursed money. Not being of age, and fleeing as she is from justice, she must have got it at an immense sacrifice."

Sir Hilton looked at his grandmother with a sort of sullen despair in his face.

"Perhaps it is not her money—perhaps, Charles Vigo—" she began.

"Mother, Olive would not dare insult me!" exclaimed Sir Hilton. "A moment ago you took her part; now you say she has that man's purse at her command. No—I tell you she would never send me any of Charles Vigo's money!"

"Then it is her own, Hilton," she said; "and, as you say, she has beggared herself to procure it."

There was a moment's silence, no sound breaking it but Sir Hilton's hurried steps as he paced the room.

"And how is the girl living? Can you answer me that?" he cried suddenly.

He spoke in a tone of bitter mournfulness, a tone that could not offend Lady Trewavas, though it grieved her.

"The small fortune she possessed being gone," continued Sir Hilton, in the same dreary voice, "she faces the world penniless, friendless, alone; and she is but a child—a beautiful child. Guilty, passionate as she is, she is so young that the strictest justice might still feel for her some touch of human pity, when thinking of her forlorn condition, her helplessness, her loneliness."

"And her remorse," interposed Lady Trewavas gently. "Surely Hilton, if her punishment is great, if her hardships and sufferings will be terrible, so also is her crime; and let us hope her repentance will equal it."

"I saw none in her," said Sir Hilton thoughtfully. "I saw grief, certainly, and with it there was a strange kind of courage, but I saw nothing like remorse or shame. But her wayward nature is not easily understood; she may suffer more in her fearlessness than the weepers and wailers can imagine. In is of her life I am thinking, not of her guilt. Hard men have died in the battle she has taken upon herself; how then can she war with the world and live? Without references, without friends, living in secrecy under a false name, she can get her living by no honorable path. In fact, unless we help her, she must perish, or fall a prey to her position and the villainy of the world."

"How can we help her when she will accept no aid from us, and when we do not know where she is?" asked Lady Trewavas.

"We can help her through her own messenger," replied Sir Hilton. "We can restore this money by him, and we can send her to the same way the deed by which you will settle on her an annuity of two hundred a year."

"You can do it, if you will," said Lady Trewavas; "but I feel certain it will be all useless. However, the man told me how a letter would reach him. I am to wrap it in this handkerchief, and hide it in the hollow tree that stands near the stile by the church. Will it be safe to put the money there?"

"Safe enough, if I watch the place till the man comes for it," replied Sir Hilton.

Lady Trewavas did not answer for a moment, but her face wore an expression of great uneasiness.

"The man is no peddler, Hilton," she said, "and I confess I do not like his appearance. I would rather you did not come in contact with him."

"I hope I can fight, if needs be," replied Sir Hilton carelessly.

"It is not that," said Lady Trewavas. "The truth is, I would rather you did not see any of Olive Varcoe's messengers. If it should be known, the world would say we had connived at her guilt and her flight, and knew her hiding place—in fact, the whole affair would come up again."

"Do you care?" asked Sir Hilton. "For myself; I am beginning to think—"

He paused, rose hurriedly, and began to pace the room again.

"I consider, also, Hilton, that since she has put herself under the guardianship of young Vigo," said Lady Trewavas, hurriedly, "we have scarcely a right to interfere in her affairs."

"We have a better right than he has!" exclaimed Sir Hilton, fiercely. "And as to the world, what would it say to the annuity you give her? Would it not say it was the price I paid her for her crime?"

"It would indeed," said Lady Trewavas; "and therefore she will refuse it, Hilton. She cannot take a penny from us. She never will—she never can—the thing is impossible."

"I know it," said the young man, stopping drearily in his walk. "And I begin to understand at last her motive. She refuses our help, to spare our family pride. An outcast, a wanderer, she will bear her guilt, her pain alone, unshielded even in secret by a Trewavas—she will bear beggary, shame, famine, anything rather than let her name be coupled with hours."

"She is right, Hilton," said Lady Trewavas; "and there is a kind of nobleness in that, too. Guilty as she is, she knows us innocent, and she does not wish the shadow of her sin to touch us."

"But what if I do not care?" asked Sir Hilton, mournfully. "What if I feel it would be better to endure the shadow, and suffer the suspicions and slander of a gaping world, rather than let Olive Varcoe starve and die, or sink into shame? Oh, tell me, what shall I do to force this girl to accept something from us?"

His sudden vehemence and his despair startled Lady Trewavas.

"We can send her money back by her messenger," she said. "I do not see that we can do more. She is in Charles Vigo's hands; we must leave the rest to him.

"But I will not leave the rest to him!" thundered Sir Hilton, fiercely. "Why should she take Charles Vigo's money rather than mine?"

"Because her crime is in no way connected with him as it is with us," replied Lady Trewavas. Eleanor Maristowe was not his affianced wife."

Sir Hilton sat down, and rested his head upon his hands; when he looked up again his face was white and haggard.

"How I envy that man his love!" he said

Lady Trewavas saw that deep down in Sir Hilton's heart lay a passionate and mournful love, against which his pride had struggled for years, and now at last it was beating down all barriers even those of crime and shame; and he was half lamenting the bars he had held against it; he was envying the reckless, wild generosity of this boy, young Vigo.

"Charles has acted cruelly towards his father and his family," said Lady Trewavas, with some warmth. "If you or John thus sacrificed your name and mine, for the sake of a wicked girl, I should die of grief and shame."

"Do not fear," said Sir Hilton, with a tinge of his old pride in his voice; "John and I will never disgrace the name of Trewavas."

"What is it that you say of me?" asked a patient, quiet voice, in broken tones. "Disgrace! No, I will die before I disgrace you."

"My dear John, how softly you crept into the room!" said Lady Trewavas. "I never heard you."

"I have only been here a minute," he said. "What's this? A letter from Olive! Let me read it."

He read it in a quick, excited way, unlike himself, and then laid it on the table with a trembling hand.

"How did you get it?" he said quickly.

An instinctive fear withheld the explanation from Lady Trewavas's lips.

"A man—a messenger from Olive brought it," she replied evasively.

"He must be careful, very careful;" said John, looking much alarmed. "If Sir Anthony Roskelly knew of it, he would find some pretence at once for arresting the man. I had better see him and warn him. Where can he be found?"

"I cannot tell you," replied Lady Trewavas. "And rely on it, John, it would be most imprudent to hold any communication with a messenger of Olive's. Leave the man to take care of himself."

John listened to Lady Trewavas's words in his his old patient way, but it was easy to see that it cost him an effort to do this, for a cold dew stood upon his forehead in large drops, and there grew into his eyes an expression of such dreary pain and sorrow that the heart quailed at it.

"Always the same selfish counsels," he said. "Let us forsake the wretch who was tortured into crime by one mad, miserable impulse, lest the leprosy of guilt cling to us and shame us! Am I never to do anything for Olive? I ask you—never?"

His sudden vehemence burst upon them like a sort of terror, holding both silent.

"It was I who should have saved her, I tell you, not Charles Vigo," he continued. "Oh, I was sick, weak, miserable and mad, else surely, somewhere within my soul, I should have found the courage of a man. I should have had strength to raise and defend the unhappy girl against the world. Hilton, you should have dragged me from my bed, you should have flung me from my room like a dog. Why did you heed my cowardly tears, my whinings, my terror?"

But here John suddenly stopped; the fury of his words, which had held them silent, ceased; and his voice broke quivering, like the voice of a woman in tears. Strange to say, Lady Trewavas had not much pity for him—he was never her favorite, and she spoke now with some bitterness.

"I will go and write a few lines to Olive, cautiously of course; and I will put the letter and the money in the place the man appointed," she said. "If you persist in your intention to watch, I hope you will promise me not to speak to him"

"I have no wish to to do so," replied Sir Hilton.

He would have said more; but, as Lady Trewavas passed him in quitting the room, he marked how her face had aged, and her stately carriage had bent, and her firm step faltered, and he determined wisely to talk less than he had done of Olive Varcoe.

At ten o'clock that night Lady Trewavas laid the packet in the hollow tree herself, and then departed slowly homewards through the moonlight, leaving Sir Hilton standing in the shadow of the old church, completely hidden by the buttress against which he leant.

Slowly the hours went by, tolling out their iron sound to the night, like a knell of faded hope and dying love, and still no footstep broke the silence, no human shadow stole upon the quiet graves.

At one o'clock the moon went down, but the night was fine, and the clear starlight left the old stile and hollow tree faintly visible. And thus nearly another hour went by, and Sir Hilton, leaning wearily against the wall, with patience and hope both worn out roused himself with sudden expectation, as a sharp rustle among the leaves came distinctly on his ear. Another instant, and there dashed by him something indistinct and dusky—rapid as a shadow. He scarcely saw it, ere the flash of a pistol illumined the darkness, and looking up bewildered, he perceived John's woful, white face.

"It was Eslick who fired," said John. "Did you see him—the dog, I mean—Bolster? Now, will you believe I saw Charles Vigo? Hilton, I swear to you I have seen that young man every day since Olive left."

Confused by the suddenness of the whole affair, Sir Hilton listened in bewilderment to John's excited words; then, to his perplexed eyes, another face grew out of the mist, and shaped itself into the seraphic visage of Mr. Eslick.

"I never hit the brute," he cried. "He's gone clean off with the booty. As well try to chase a ghost, as catch Bolster."

"Charles Vigo's dog!" exclaimed Sir Hilton.

"The very same," said Mr. Eslick, breaking into his old smile; "and the best retriever in all England."

"And is it Bolster," said Sir Hilton, "who has fetched away the packet—"

"Directed to Miss Varcoe," interrupted Mr. Eslick. "Yes, Sir Hilton, it is that exceedingly sagacious animal that has carried off the letter to its address. There is no doubt now that his master and mistress are in hiding somewhere close by."

Sir Hilton could not restrain his annoyance and indignation.

"Why are you here, sir?"

"I was here in the fulfilment of my duty, Sir Hilton," he replied. "Sir Anthony Roskelly and other magistrates are determined to arrest Miss Varcoe, they have placed the whole affair in my hands; I intend to carry it to a successful issue. To discover Mr. Charles Vigo, will be to put one's hand on Miss Varcoe. And thinking I might hear or see something of that gentleman at this place to-night, I came hither, and took up my watch nearer the old tree than you did, Sir Hilton."

"Who is this villain—the traitor, the spy, at Trewavas—who relates to you all that happens under my roof?" cried Sir Hilton.

The passion that shook in his voice and sparkled in his eyes, made the smiling Mr. Eslick draw a step or two backwards.

"I am not at liberty to mention my informant, Sir Hilton," he replied; "so pray excuse my inability to oblige you."

"Come away, Hilton," said John, anxiously.

Sir Hilton, evidently thinking it useless to parley further, strode away, without giving any parting salutation to the superintendent. John, however, slightly raised his hat in passing, though he kept his face turned away.

"I can understand nothing of this," resumed Sir Hilton, in a low voice, as they got out of hearing. "Explain it, John, if you can."

"Eslick is a miserable sneak and scoundrel, and a spy of Sir Anthony's," said John. "Hilton, that man is resolved to drive us from the country; he will fix this murder on us, if he can."

"You are dreaming, John," said his brother. "What have we to do with that unhappy girl's crime? And what is this idiot boy Vigo about, if he has not got her safe away?"

John shook like a reed as his brother asked the question, and his wan lips uttered no reply.

"Who can tell what Vigo is doing?" he said at last. "He has never left England, I am certain."

"Well, I hope his dog has taken him back his accursed money," said Sir Hilton between his teeth. "Now explain how all this has happened."

"I fear it is partly my fault," replied John. "I complained the other day, at the little police station in the village, of that man who has followed me about. This made them watchful, and it seems they looked out for this peddler, and saw him speak to Lady Trewavas on the lawn."

"And Eslick placed a spy upon her, I suppose, and watched her put the packet in the hollow tree," said Sir Hilton. "The rascal must have been in ambush, then. I wish I had guessed it; I would have given him something to remember me by."

"It would have been useless, Hilton," said John, mournfully. "Sir Anthony Roskelly could only employ another spy. On all sides we are surrounded, and we shall be hunted down at last. I am weary of it."

"Let him go on," exclaimed Sir Hilton. "He will find out at length that we know nothing of Olive. You were foolish to complain to Eslick of the spy he had put on you."

John was silent a moment, then he said, in that patient, meek way peculiar to him:

"You will say again that I am mad, but it is no spy of Eslick's that follows me—it is Charles Vigo! I tell you I see his face wherever I go."

"I will not say you are mad, John," replied his brother. "Since Bolster is in the country, perhaps his master is also. I only say it is a mad fancy of yours, to suppose he should trouble himself to follow you; and if you have mentioned this notion to Eslick, I am not surprised he watched the tree to-night. Perhaps he hoped to see Vigo, and intended to follow him, knowing he should then get at the place of Olive's concealment.

"I am sorry I said anything; I never thought of its leading to mischief," remarked John, meekly.

"Never trust Eslick again, John," said Sir Hilton. "I don't think it matters this time. Charles Vigo knew better than to come himself to the tree; his messenger, the peddler, was also too clever to risk it, and the dog has got safe away; so our friend with the smiling countenance has not gained much by his move to-night."

HOLLOWAY'S PILL.—Changes of temperature and weather frequently upset persons who are most careful of their health, and particular in their diet. The corrective, purifying, and gentle aperient pills are the best remedy for all defective action of the digestive organs. They augment the appetite, strengthen the stomach, correct biliousness, and carry off all that is noxious from the system. Holloway's Pills are composed of rare balsams, unmixed with base matter, and on that account are peculiarly well adapted for the young, delicate, and aged. As this peerless medicine has gained fame in the past, so will it preserve it in the future by its renovating and invigorating qualities, and the impossibility of its doing harm.

A few days ago while George, son of Mr. H. Breit, near Beeton, was cutting with the binder in heavy grain the machine became choked and necessitated greater speed, and as the boy was behind the horse urging the animal along, it became vicious and kicked him in the stomach. Twenty hours later he died.

"I took six bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters for liver complaint, headache and dull stupid feeling, but now I am entirely well and healthy, having also a good appetite which I did not have previously."—Mrs. T. Davis, Regina, N.W.T.

The Safest

AND most powerful alterative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the eruptive diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. . . had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William F. Dougherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child's liver, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of almost every kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M.D., Wiggs, Arkansas.

"Not a word to myself for these,
Not a word there is pouring now
From sin to and you free.

If your cross is heavy, and hard to bear,
And earth seems dark and drear,
He bids us come with perfect love
Which casteth out all fear.
For Satan to his blessed words,
He answered with all seal:
"All ye that labor come to me
And I will give you rest."

How sweet upon a Saviour's breast
Our weary heads to lose,
And there receive a kind sentence,
By all the world unseen.
He died for us, and even now
He's pouring in our love,
And only wishes us to turn
Our minds to Him above.

So when cares and sin encompass thee,
Just raise thy heart above,
And offer it to Jesus dear,
So full of pity and love.
Then He will give you all you need—
For hear His words so blest:
"All ye that labor come to Me
And I will give you rest."

Toronto, Aug., 1891. ANNIE E. HARRIS.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER XIV.

"Then she is not married!" exclaimed Sir Hilton. "She signs herself 'Varcoe.' Can she have sunk so low? Is young Vigo such a coward?"

"Can you blame him, Hilton?" said Lady Trewavas. "Would you have married Olive Varcoe?"

"No," replied Sir Hilton; "but I would not have taken advantage of her guilt and her defencelessness—"

"Neither has Charles Vigo," interrupted Lady Trewavas, "Think better of him, Hilton, and of your cousin also. Passionate as Olive has too often shown herself, she has the honor of a queen. This is not the letter of a woman who has lost self respect. Her crime was the impulse of a desperate moment; her virtues are her own. Poor girl—poor poor girl!"

Lady Trewavas felt her eyes fill with tears, and to hide them, she stooped and picked up the notes lying at Sir Hilton's feet. She laid them on the table before him, but he swept them down again savagely.

"Grandmother," said he, "why did you never say a good word of her before? Why have you waited until she was an outcast, wandering we know not whither before you confess she has some virtue? And what is she doing? If she is not Charles Vigo's wife, how is she living? She has stripped herself of all she possesses to send us this accursed money. Not being of age, and fleeing as she is from justice, she must have got it at an immense sacrifice."

Sir Hilton looked at his grandmother with a sort of sullen despair in his face.

"Perhaps it is not her money—perhaps, Charles Vigo—" she began.

"Mother, Olive would not dare insult me!" exclaimed Sir Hilton. "A moment ago you took her part; now you say she has that man's purse at her command. No—I tell you she would never send me any of Charles Vigo's money!"

"Then it is her own, Hilton," she said, "and, as you say, she has beggared herself to procure it."

There was a moment's silence, no sound breaking it but Sir Hilton's hurried steps as he paced the room.

"And how is the girl living? Can you answer me that?" he cried suddenly.

He spoke in a tone of bitter mournfulness, a tone that could not offend Lady Trewavas, though it grieved her.

"The small fortune she possessed being gone," continued Sir Hilton, in the same dreary voice, "she faces the world penniless, friendless, alone; and she is but a child—a beautiful child. Guilty, passionate as she is, she is so young that the strictest justice might still feel for her some touch of human pity, when thinking of her forlorn condition, her helplessness, her loneliness."

"And her remorse," interposed Lady Trewavas gently. "Surely Hilton, if her punishment is great, if her hardships and sufferings will be terrible, so also is her crime; and let us hope her repentance will equal it."

"I saw none in her," said Sir Hilton thoughtfully. "I saw grief, certainly, and with it there was a strange kind of courage, but I saw nothing like remorse or shame. But her wayward nature is not easily understood; she may suffer more in her fearlessness than the weepers and wailers can imagine. In is of her life I am thinking, not of her guilt. Hard men have died in the battle she has taken upon herself; how then can she live without world and live? Without references, without friends, living in secrecy under a false name, she can Lady Trewavas; "but I feel certain it will be all useless. However, the man told me how a letter would reach him. I am to wrap it in this handkerchief, and hide it in the hollow tree that stands near the stile by the church. Will it be safe to put the money there?"

"Safe enough, if I watch the place till the man comes for it," replied Sir Hilton.

Lady Trewavas did not answer for a moment, but her face wore an expression of great uneasiness.

"The man is no peddler, Hilton," she said, "and I confess I do not like his appearance. I would rather you did not come in contact with him."

"I hope I can fight, if needs be," replied Sir Hilton carelessly.

"It is not that," said Lady Trewavas. "The truth is, I would rather you did not see any of Olive Varcoe's messengers. If it should be known, the world would say we had connived at her guilt and her flight, and knew her hiding place—in fact, the whole affair would come up again."

"Do you care?" asked Sir Hilton.

"For myself; I am beginning to think—"

He paused, rose hurriedly, and began to pace the room again.

"I consider, also, Hilton, that since she has put herself under the guardianship of young Vigo," said Lady Trewavas, hurriedly, "we have scarcely a right to interfere in her affairs."

"We have a better right than he has!" exclaimed Sir Hilton, fiercely. "And as to the world, what would it say to the annuity you give her? Would it not say it was the price I paid her for her crime?"

"It would indeed," said Lady Trewavas; "and therefore she will refuse it, Hilton. She cannot take a penny from us. She never will—she never can—the thing is impossible."

"I know it," said the young man, stopping drearily in his walk. "And I begin to understand at last her motive. She refuses our help, to spare our family pride. An outcast, a wanderer, she will bear her guilt, her pain alone, unshielded even in secret by a Trewavas—she will bear beggary, shame, famine, anything rather than let her name be coupled with hours."

"She is right, Hilton," said Lady Trewavas; "and there is a kind of nobleness in that, too. Guilty as she is, she knows us innocent, and she does not wish the shadow of her sin to touch us."

"But what if I do not care?" asked Sir Hilton, mournfully. "What if I feel it would be better to endure the shadow, and suffer the suspicions and slander of a gaping world, rather than let Olive Varcoe starve and die, or sink into shame? Oh, tell me, what shall I do to force this girl to accept something from us?"

His sudden vehemence and his despair startled Lady Trewavas.

"We can send her money back by her messenger," she said. "I do not see that we can do more. She is in Charles Vigo's hands; we must leave the rest to him."

"But I will not leave the rest to him!" thundered Sir Hilton, fiercely. "Why should she take Charles Vigo's money rather than mine?"

"Because her crime is in no way connected with him as it is with us," replied Lady Trewavas. Eleanor Martstone was not his affianced wife."

Sir Hilton sat down, and rested his head upon his hands; when he looked up again his face was white and haggard.

"How I envy that man his love!" he said.

Lady Trewavas saw that deep down in Sir Hilton's heart lay a passionate and mournful love, against which his pride had struggled for years, and now at last it was beating down all barriers even those of crime and shame; and he was half lamenting the bars he had held down, to his perplexed eyes, another face grew out of the mist, and shaped itself into the seraphic visage of Mr. Eslick.

"I never hit the brute," he cried. "He's gone clean off with the booty. As well try to chase a ghost, as catch Bolster."

"Charles Vigo's dog!" exclaimed Sir Hilton.

"The very same," said Mr. Eslick, breaking into his old smile; "and the best retriever in all England."

"And is it Bolster," said Sir Hilton, "who has fetched away the packet—"

"Directed to Miss Varcoe," interrupted Mr. Eslick. "Yes, Sir Hilton, it is that exceedingly sagacious animal that has carried off the letter to its address. There is no doubt now that his master and mistress are in hiding somewhere close by."

Sir Hilton could not restrain his exultation and indignation.

found?"

"I cannot tell you," replied Lady Trewavas. "And rely on it, John, it would be most imprudent to hold any communication with a messenger of Olive's. Leave the man to take care of himself."

John listened to Lady Trewavas's words in his old patient way, but it was easy to see that it cost him an effort to do this, for a cold dew stood upon his forehead in large drops, and there grew into his eyes an expression of such dreary pain and sorrow that the heart quailed at it.

"Always the same selfish counsels," he said. "Let us forsake the wretch who was tortured into crime by one mad, miserable impulse, lest the leprosy of guilt cling to us and shame us! Am I never to do anything for Olive? I ask you—never?"

His sudden vehemence burst upon them like a sort of terror, holding both silent.

"It was I who should have saved her, I tell you, not Charles Vigo," he continued. "Oh, I was sick, weak, miserable and mad, else surely, somewhere within my soul, I should have found the courage of a man. I should have had strength to raise and defend the unhappy girl against the world. Hilton, you should have dragged me from my bed, you should have flung me from my room like a dog. Why did you heed my cowardly tears, my whinings, my terror?"

But here John suddenly stopped; the fury of his words, which had held them silent, ceased; and his voice broke quivering, like the voice of a woman in tears. Strange to say, Lady Trewavas had not much pity for him—he was never her favorite, and she spoke now with some bitterness.

"I will go and write a few lines to Olive, cautiously of course; and I will put the letter and the money in the place the man appointed," she said. "If you persist in your intention to watch, I hope you will promise me not to speak to him."

"I have no wish to to do so," replied Sir Hilton.

He would have said more; but, as Lady Trewavas passed him in quitting the room, he marked how her face had aged, and her stately carriage had bent, and her firm step faltered, and he determined wisely to talk less than he had done of Olive Varcoe.

At ten o'clock that night Lady Trewavas laid the packet in the hollow tree herself, and then departed slowly homewards through the moonlight, leaving Sir Hilton standing in the shadow of the old church, completely hidden by the buttress against which he leant.

Slowly the hours went by, tolling out their iron sound to the night, like a knell of faded hope and dying love, and still no footstep broke the silence, no human shadow stole upon the quiet graves.

At one o'clock the moon went down, but the night was fine, and the clear starlight left the old stile and hollow tree faintly visible. And thus nearly another hour went by, and Sir Hilton, leaning wearily against the wall, with patience and hope both worn out roused himself with sudden expectation, as a sharp rustle among the leaves came distinctly on his ear. Another instant, and there dashed by him something indistinct and dusky, rapid as a shadow. He scarcely saw it, ere the flash of a pistol illumined the darkness, and looking up bewildered, he perceived John's woful, white face.

"It was Eslick who fired," said John. "Did you see him—the dog, I mean—Bolster? Now, will you believe I saw Charles Vigo? Hilton, I swear to you I have seen that young man every day since Olive left."

Confused by the suddenness of the whole affair, Sir Hilton listened in bewilderment to John's excited words; then, to his perplexed eyes, another face grew out of the mist, and shaped itself into the seraphic visage of Mr. Eslick.

"I never hit the brute," he cried. "He's gone clean off with the booty. As well try to chase a ghost, as catch Bolster."

"Charles Vigo's dog!" exclaimed Sir Hilton.

"The very same," said Mr. Eslick, breaking into his old smile; "and the best retriever in all England."

"And is it Bolster," said Sir Hilton, "who has fetched away the packet—"

"Directed to Miss Varcoe," interrupted Mr. Eslick. "Yes, Sir Hilton, it is that exceedingly sagacious animal that has carried off the letter to its address. There is no doubt now that his master and mistress are in hiding somewhere close by."

Sir Hilton could not restrain his exultation and indignation.

spy, sir Trewavas—who relates to you all that happens under my roof?" cried Sir Hilton.

The passion that shook in his voice and sparkled in his eyes, made the smiling Mr. Eslick draw a step or two backwards.

"I am not at liberty to mention my informant, Sir Hilton," he replied; "so pray excuse my inability to oblige you."

"Come away, Hilton," said John, anxiously.

Sir Hilton, evidently thinking it useless to parley further, strode away, without giving any parting salutation to the superintendent. John, however, slightly raised his hat in passing, though he kept his face turned away.

"I can understand nothing of this," resumed Sir Hilton, in a low voice, as they got out of hearing. "Explain it, John, if you can."

"Eslick is a miserable sneak and scoundrel, and a spy of Sir Anthony's," said John. "Hilton, that man is resolved to drive us from the country; he will fix this murder on us, if he can."

"You are dreaming, John," said his brother. "What have we to do with that unhappy girl's crime? And what is this idiot boy Vigo about, if he has not got her safe away?"

John shook like a reed as his brother asked the question, and his wan lips uttered no reply.

"Who can tell what Vigo is doing?" he said at last. "He has never left England, I am certain."

"Well, I hope his dog has taken him back his accursed money," said Sir Hilton between his teeth. "Now explain how all this has happened."

"I fear it is partly my fault," replied John. "I complained the other day, at the little police station in the village, of that man who has followed me about. This made them watchful, and it seems they looked out for this peddler, and saw him speak to Lady Trewavas on the lawn."

"And Eslick placed a spy upon her, I suppose, and watched her put the packet in the hollow tree," said Sir Hilton. "The rascal must have been in ambush, then. I wish I had guessed it; I would have given him something to remember me by."

"It would have been useless, Hilton," said John, mournfully. "Sir Anthony Roskelly could only employ another spy. On all sides we are surrounded, and we shall be hunted down at last. I am weary of it."

"Let him go on," exclaimed Sir Hilton. "He will find out at length that we know nothing of Olive. You were foolish to complain to Eslick of the spy he had put on you."

John was silent a moment, then he said, in that patient, meek way peculiar to him:

"You will say again that I am mad; but it is no spy of Eslick's that follows me—it is Charles Vigo! I tell you I see his face wherever I go."

"I will not say you are mad, John," replied his brother. "Since Bolster is in the country, perhaps his master is also. I only say it is a mad fancy of yours, to suppose he should trouble himself to follow you; and if you have mentioned this notion to Eslick, I am not surprised he watched the tree tonight. Perhaps he hoped to see Vigo, and intended to follow him, knowing he should then get at the place of Olive's concealment."

"I am sorry I said anything; I never thought of its leading to mischief," remarked John, meekly.

"Never trust Eslick again, John," said Sir Hilton. "I don't think it matters this time. Charles Vigo knew better than to come himself to the tree; his messenger, the peddler, was also too clever to risk it, and the dog has got safe away; so our friend with the smiling countenance has not gained much by his move to night."

HOLLOWAY'S PILL.—Changes of temperature and weather frequently upset persons who are most careful of their health, and, particular in their diet. The corrective, purifying, and gentle aperient Pills are the best remedy for all defective action of the digestive organs. They augment the appetite, strengthen the stomach, correct biliousness, and carry off all that is noxious from the system. Holloway's Pills are composed of rare balsams, unmixed with base matter, and on that account are peculiarly well adapted for the young, delicate, and aged. As this peerless medicine has gained fame in the past, so will it preserve it in the future by its renovating and invigorating qualities, and the impossibility of its doing harm.

A few days ago while George, son of Mr. H. Twenty hours later he died.

A GOOD MOVE.

It was a good move the council made when it adopted the suggestion of the F. & W. committee to heat the new waterworks buildings with steam from the boiler. Hitherto ancient coal-stoves were used and it would be exaggeration to say anything like satisfaction was obtained. The cost of putting in the necessary pipes will not amount to as much as the cost of new stoves and will undoubtedly give better satisfaction. A resolution of the council provides that the water in the boiler at the waterworks has to be kept warm all the time, and it will require comparatively little more fuel to keep up a certain amount of steam.

This is an important move and may be the cause of saving thousands of dollars worth of property. Steam being up all the time the engines can be started instantly in case of fire, and no time will be lost as at previous conflagrations. The firemen will now be able to fight fires under more favorable circumstances and will not be subject to slurs from the onlookers.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE amendment to the Election act adopted in the House of Commons last week, making the taking of a bribe by a voter punishable offence is a commendable one. Bribery is a crime that requires two to consummate, and on no ground of morals or logic can the purchaser be considered more or less guilty than the purchased. It is not necessary to take a very active part in an election contest to discover how eager some men, even those occupying respectable positions, are to sell their votes. Their conduct makes it almost a certainty that if one side does not buy them the other will, and when there is reason to think the election is to be a close one the temptation to pay the fellows for their merchandise is almost too strong to resist. This is what most often leads to corrupt elections, and anything to discourage it is in the interest of good government.

THE report of the Railway Committee of the Senate on the Baie des Chaleurs Railway scandal has set the official seal of malfeasance in office upon Premier Mercier and a number of his political friends. The report enters minutely into the awarding of the contract and the large subsidy offered by the Quebec Government, and traces most of the moneys into the pockets of the Premier and a number of members of the Legislature. The charge that out of the certain moneys, amounting to $280,000 authorized by the government of the Province of Quebec to be paid to the company as subsidy, a sum amounting to $175,000 had been retained and improperly applied, the committee finds to be true, and that among those who profited by the misapplication were Hon. Mr. Mercier, Hon. C. A. Pelletier, Hon. Charles Langelier, Hon. Francois Langelier, L. Tarte and Ernest Pacaud.

SHELBURNE.

SOLD OUT.—Mr. Angus Bell has sold his livery business here to Messrs. Skelding & Sawyers. The new proprietors took possession on Monday morning.

APPRECIATED.—For the past two months Mr. W. C. Clark of Hornings Mills, has had charge of St. Andrew's church, Berlin, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Alex. Winchester, who was on a trip to Europe. The pastor paid Mr. Clark $90 for his services and the congregation very liberally insisted on paying his board bill for the two months, and at a farewell reception given Mr. Clark on Friday evening last he was presented with a purse and $60 in gold. We congratulate Mr. Clark on his success in winning the esteem and good wishes of our Presbyterian friends in Berlin.

WON'T HAVE SEWERS.—At the last meeting of the village council a discussion of the sewer question brought about the introduction of the following resolution by Councillor Riley, but which failed to find a seconder:—

"That the tender of the Hamilton and Toronto Sewer Pipe Co. be accepted and that a sufficient quantity of pipe to proceed with the drainage of Main street be ordered at once." A somewhat heated discussion ensued. Failing to get his resolution through Mr. Riley wanted a resolution passed to the effect that the town be made a cesspool. Mr. Mason and Councillors Whitton and Hamilton thought it was too late to undertake the work at this time of the year, and fears were also expressed that trouble might arise regarding the outlet of such a sewer as the one proposed. The meeting broke up without an adjournment and without the tax rate for this year having been struck.

One hundred and nine election protests are on the docket for trial, 47 of them in Ontario, 35 in Quebec, 16 in Nova Scotia and the other 11 in New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Manitoba. In this province, also, 17 cross petitions have been filed. There will doubtless be a number of "saw offs" and of other withdrawals; nevertheless the courts will have their hands full.

On Thursday morning of last week Mr Patrick Ward was found by his aged mother lying dead at the back door of his residence on Fergus st. The body was cold and stiff and other facts lead to the discovery that he had lain all night where found. Dr. Jones, coroner, was summoned but did not deem an inquest necessary as deceased had for years been a great sufferer with asthma and all the surroundings pointed to the one fact, that the unfortunate man while struggling for breath in an acute attack of his malady the evening before, had gone outside expecting relief in the fresh air. When relief came in the shape of death, before he could regain the house. The aged mother who was the only other occupant of the house failed to notice her son's absence, hence the cause of the exposure of the body.—Mt. Forest Rep.

A GARAFRAXA OUTRAGE!

An Old Man Worth Money Locked Up in a Poor House.

A remarkable case was disclosed at Osgoode hall the other day in connection with a motion by R. E. A. Du Vernet for a writ of habeas corpus in respect to a prisoner confined in the poor house of the county of Wellington. The prisoner is Greville Ewing Lightbody, a bachelor of 60, who for the past forty years has lived in Elmwood village, in West Garafraxa, a few miles from Orangeville. Lightbody owns considerable property in the village, and is a brother of Andrew Lightbody, a retired gentleman and ex-postmaster of the same place.

Bachelor Lightbody is an antiquarian, geologist and scientist, and during the forty years past he has collected a great many specimens of fossils remains and natural curiosities.

Lately, however, the citizens who reside near the old man have declared that his place is a nuisance and say that they will remove from the village if the queer collection of living and dead things is not removed to the suburbs or destroyed. In the words of an affidavit which was read in court, "the neighbors who live in a different world from him see no beauty in the wonders that are hidden from the eyes of those who call him a crank."

The agitation of these kickers resulted in a visit to the old man's place by the local Board of Health. They found him whitewashing. When the object of their visit was disclosed he used the whitewash brush on them and pasted their clothes with lime. A charge of assault "by whitewashing the members of the board" was dismissed, but on a second charge of not keeping the house in a proper condition under the local health laws, the old man was fined $5 and costs or 14 days. The fine was paid, but the situation was not changed.

Despite the fact that he has property, a charge of inability to support himself was laid against the old fellow, and he appeared the other day before Hugh Macdonald, Wm. Simpson and R. Y. Blyth, local J. P.s. He was committed to the poor-house for an indefinite period without much ado.

Mr. Justice McMahon was much amused by the recountal of the case, and granted the writ at once. A motion to quash the conviction will be made in a few days. Mr. Du Vernet says the whole proceedings were irregular and an outrage, and were brought about by a few of the neighbors who are tired of the old antiquarian.—News.

ATHLONE.

BUSY.—Farmers around here are busy drawing in their oats and sowing fall wheat. A large amount of wheat is already sowed.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Simon Langley was in Barrie last week attending county court.....Miss Annie Gamble of Loretto is back again after a visit to friends at Toronto. Her numerous friends around here are glad to see her home again.

NOT PLAYED.—The football match between Athlone and Achill teams, which should have been played last Saturday, did not take place owing to rain. A start was made, but the game was not finished. It will be finished on the Achill grounds on Saturday, the 26th. A great game is looked for.

DON'T FORGET.—Don't forget the monster picnic in the church grove in aid of St. James' church, Adjala, on Tuesday next. A large prize is offered for a football tournament, also generous prizes for running races and jumping contests. A large platform is being erected for dancing and the Tottenham brass band will be in attendance. Tickets 50 cts.

A FIREMAN KILLED.

Freight Train Derailed by Cattle at Fergus.

A serious railway accident to a freight train took place at Fergus Saturday morning about 9 o'clock on the Grand Trunk, whereby James Laing, the fireman, was killed. The run-off happened near the diamond, where the C. P. R. and G. T. R. cross each other. The accident was caused by the train striking a cow on the highway crossing. It was carried about 75 feet, when the animal got under the engine, which was then thrown from the rails and ran along for about 150 feet when she plunged into the ditch, almost burying herself, with the tender and some cars piled up in every way. The fireman was crushed between the tender and a car and must have been instantly killed. He lived in Palmerston and leaves a wife and two children. The engineer, James Sloan, stuck to his engine till she started for the ditch, when he jumped and saved his life by a very narrow escape.

AFTER 25 YEARS.

Stolen in Toronto a Quarter of a Century Since and Now Discovered.

ORILLIA, Sept. 4.—John O'Brien is one of a family who lived in Toronto, and four of whom he still believes to be alive. They were left orphans at an early age, but all were provided with homes. John was taken to live with a man named Harrington in Mara. Shortly after John moved to Mara, Charles O'Brien, a younger brother, was stolen from the home in which he was living in Toronto by a travelling show. Efforts were made to find him without avail and John heard nothing of him until this week when he received a photograph of his brother, accompanied by a short note. Charles O'Brien has been in the show business all his life, and is a leading comedian in the "Twelve Temptations" Company which recently played in Chicago, from where the letter was written. He had lost track of John and did not know until recently whether he was living or dead.

Retail shoe dealers say there has been a considerable revival of the demand for leg boots during this year, and well informed members of the shoe trade predict that before very long leg boots will be extremely fashionable. The indications all point that way, they say. The demand this season has been principally for the finer grade of boots, made especially for dress wear. The business in top boots of all kinds has been declining for about fifteen years.

Clinton Clippings.

"I had for years been troubled with dyspepsia and sick headache and found but little relief until I got Burdock Blood Bitters which made a perfect cure. It is the best medicine I ever used in my life."—Hattie Davis, Mary St., Clinton, Ont.

A most remarkable case, which has baffled all medical skill, and which is said to be without precedent in the person of a healthy and strong middle aged farmer residing near Teeswater, has come to light. One side of this gentleman's face will not permit him to place to his mouth any meat, no matter how fine it has been prepared; eggs he can eat, but milk he cannot drink, water he can drink, and bread he can eat. The afflicted side of his face will spare any objectionable food, as a child would medicine. No cause can be found for it and the effect is not at all pleasant.

What Say They?

In popularity increasing. In reliability the standard. In merit the first. In fact, the best remedy for all summer complaints, diarrhoea, dysentery, cramps, colic, cholera infantum, etc., is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. All medicine dealers sell it.

The authorities at Rockwood Asylum Kingston, think they have struck a bonanza in the find of natural gas. The well was bored to a depth of 171 feet, when the rush of gas came, and it has been pouring out at the rate of 6,000 feet per hour—enough to supply the citizens of Kingston with fuel. The noise can be heard thirty feet away. It is genuine natural gas. "The supply if it will keep up," said Dr. Clark, "will be worth thousands of dollars to the institution."

The use of calomel for derangements of the liver has ruined many a fine constitution. Those who, for similar troubles, have tried Ayer's Pills testify to their efficacy in thoroughly remedying the malady, without injury to the system.

A man named George Smith drove into Niagara Falls with his wife and put up at a farmer's named Hoehn. While there the couple quarreled and the wife let out that the husband had stolen the horse and rig. The farmer detained the horse and discovered through an advertisement that it belonged to a man in Cooksville. Smith and his wife bolted after stealing a watch and other articles in the neighborhood, and have not yet been arrested.—Arthur Enterprise.

Timely Wisdom.

Great and timely wisdom is shown by keeping Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry on hand. It has no equal for cholera, cholera morbus, diarrhoea, dysentery, cholic, cramps, and all summer complaints or looseness of the bowels.

FOR MANITOBA.—Messrs. John Large, Geo. B. Keys and J. W. Hodgens started for Manitoba on Wednesday with 17 horses and a car load of implements.

Dominion Rifle Association.

OTTAWA, Sept. 2.—Another successful day of the Dominion Rifle Association meeting was brought to a close yesterday. The minister of Militia's match was shot in the afternoon, and in the afternoon the Governor's match and British Challenge Shield match. The sun was bright and strong, no wind. The following are winners:

Governor's match, cup and $50, G.G.F.G., score 226; $40, 3rd Victoria Rifles, 469; 225, 43rd, G. & C. Rifles, 476; $30, G.G.B., 476; 224, 12th Batt., 466; $20, 5th Royal Scots, 458. Next in order were: Royal Grenadiers, 451; 43rd Batt., 444; "D" Co. Infantry School Corps, 422; 67th Batt., 406.

British Challenge Shield match, 840, G. G. F. G., 77 hits, 320 score; $30, 13th Batt., 1st team; 75 hits, 307 score; $20, 43rd Batt., 75 hits, 300 score; $10, 2nd Victoria Rifles, 85 hits, 298 score; Royal Grenadiers, 63 hits, 293 score; 5th Batt., 62 hits, 239 score; 2nd Q. O. R., 54 hits, 232 score; G. G. F. G. (2nd team) 54, 229; 43rd, 57, 218.

Last year shield was won by 10th Royal Grenadiers with score of 214.

Killed at North Bay.

NORTH BAY, Sept. 2.—A man named Thomas Fanson, an employe of the C. P. R., was killed last night on the main line between Sturgeon Falls and Corbe Bay, about 22 miles west of here. He left Sturgeon Falls on a velocipede about 12.30 p.m. and was run into by No. 4 express coming east shortly afterwards. His head, both feet and one hand were severed from the body.

An Immense Parade.

QUEBEC, Sept. 2.—Labor day witnessed yesterday the largest public demonstration ever witnessed in Quebec. It is estimated that 15,000 took part in the procession that morning, which assembled in St. Sauveur and marched through the streets of lower town, upper town and the suburbs. It was over an hour passing a given point.

Unsuccessful Diving.

BURLINGTON BEACH, Sept. 2.—The Toronto river has been at work all day looking for the body of fireman Crouch the other victim of Sunday night's awful accident on the Grand Trunk, but so far without success. It is thought now that the body is held down by some of the wreckage.

A Burns-Hearted Day.

OTTAWA, Sept. 2.—The Ottawas P. C. has given a gold medal to Willie Anderson, aged 8, of Antrim, Ont., who had his foot taken off by a reaper while pleading with the driver of a machine to stop to save the lives of a nest of swallows he had found in the hay-field.

Sunday Harvesting.

OTTAWA, Sept. 2.—At Old Chelsea on Sunday mass was celebrated and the sermon omitted, the reverend father officiating telling his flock as soon as mass was concluded to go out and make use of the fine weather by gathering the kindly fruits of the earth.

To Swim the Whirlpool.

NIAGARA FALLS, Sept. 2.—The Philadelphia cooper, Carlisle D. Graham, who floated through the rapids five years ago in a barrel, is here, and says that Tommy Burns of Liverpool will soon come over and together they will swim the whirlpool.

Another Suicide.

BRACEVILLE, Ont., Sept. 2.—Yesterday morning Mrs. William Howell, aged 50, while laboring under a fit of temporary insanity took a dose of carbolic acid and died in the evening.

THE BRITISH ISLES

Swept by Violent Gales and Many Wrecks the Result.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Violent gales and rainstorms continue to sweep over Great Britain and Ireland. Despatches from Dublin state the crops throughout the province of Ulster are in a pitiable condition, and that in many parts of Ulster and elsewhere they are almost entirely submerged. In other sections the croppers in several fields of wheat and will be completely destroyed.

Off Ilfracombe, Devonshire, yesterday, during a gale, a passenger steamer having a hundred passengers on board had a narrow escape from destruction. A succession of heavy seas struck her, sweeping the decks, smashing in the saloon skylights and pouring tons of water down the companionways. Successive seas the pounding the steamer received by the waves that many passengers were severely injured, of which number six are in a precarious condition.

In the Mersey a fishing smack, making for shelter from the storm, foundered. All hands were lost.

On the south coast of England there have been several wrecks.

The gale continued in Ireland, Wales, the north of England and Scotland the whole of the day. All cross channel steamers were delayed. The Welsh rivers are flooded, and much damage has been done to property. A house was blown over in Dublin and three others were burned in the ruins. All were badly injured, one being in a dying condition.

German Army Feuds.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—Chancellor Von Caprivi and Herr Von Kaltenborn-Stachlau, Minister of War, have had frequent private audiences with the Emperor as a result of an important and unusual step taken yesterday, it says the various rumors current in regard to these audiences are unfounded.

The military Wochenblatt urges the importance and necessity of inventing new cannon to meet the requirements of modern warfare. The small calibre magazine guns having proved to minimize advantage from artillery extremely powerful lower in entry.

The Germania commenting upon Sedan Day, discusses the situation regarding Germany to be more alert than ever but they are unanimous that Germany will never begin a war, however provoked.

No Will and a Lapsed Title.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Great curiosity prevails here as to the direction in which the immense estate of the late Duke of Cleveland may come. As no less an heir than the Duke himself, but it appears that the Duke died without a will, such is one of the strangest situations on record.

The heir, if he can be ascertained, leaving no blood relations, inherits it, as well as the ducal coronet, and if there were no heir the property would come over and together they will swim the whirlpool.

FOUND.—A bunch of keys, which were picked up on Broadway a few days ago, are at this office awaiting an owner.

SPORTS.—At a meeting of the H. S. Literary Society on Thursday last, it was decided that the annual sports should be held on Oct 2nd. No date has yet been appointed for convocation.

THE MARKET.—The Orangeville market reopens on Thursday, the 24th of September, and will continue open every Thursday during the fall and winter season for the sale of poultry, butter, eggs, vegetables, etc. 4

SPECIAL PRIZES.—The Agricultural Arts Association of Ontario will give a special prize of a silver medal for the best Durham bull in the county, also a bronze medal for the best pen of Leicester sheep in Dufferin.

THE REASON.—Bandmaster Ketchum of the Citizens' band requests THE SUN to explain why there has been no street music for the past several weeks. Several of the boys are employed in the foundry and were away setting up McMaster's great binder, and several more are holidaying at Buffalo. The band, however, will be on hand this week, and will play two nights each week to make up for lost time.

IN THE JAIL.—Since ten deaths occurred at the jail last week only twelve persons are confined in that institution, and not one of them are serving time for criminal offences. At present eight men and four women are slowly wearing their lives away in an institution which was intended to house criminals—not paupers. One man and two women are insane and the remainder have been committed as vagrants.

OUR NEW BELL.—Orangeville's big new bell was hoisted to its position in the tower on the waterworks but ding on Thursday and rang for the first time that evening. It has a rich, mellow tone and is a city bell in every respect, but many complain that it does not sound loud enough. We have not heard what decision the T. P. committee have arrived at in the matter, but it is safe to say that the bell will remain where it is.

HE IS DYING.—Chambers Falcon, who has been an inmate in the Orangeville jail for many months, and who was referred to by THE SUN a few weeks ago, is lying at the point of death up in the "castle," and it is only a matter of a few days when the the final summons will come. Sometime ago Chambers fell in the corridor of the jail and hit his head against the stone wall, from which injuries he has not fully recovered.

THE BRIGADE REORGANIZE.—A few days ago the members of the fire-brigade met and the much-needed reorganization took place. The new officers, Capt. Patterson and Lieut. J. W. Aiken, appointed the men to their positions, and the following comprises the brigade: J. Patterson, captain; J. W. Aiken, lieutenant; F. Anthony, 1st branchman; J. H. Hughes, 2nd branchman; A. G. McKenny, 3rd branchman; J. A. Aikin, 4th branchman; B. McGuire, 1st hoseman; R. Wilson, 2nd hoseman; H. Hoffmam, 1st hydrantman; R. J. McConnell, 2nd hydrantman; W. Kearns, captain hook-and-ladder; Dime Stewart, 1st hook and ladder-man; J. H. Hughes treasurer; B. McGuire, secretary.

FELL FROM A TREE.—Last Saturday morning George, the 9 year-old son of Mr. John Cameron, centre road, Caledon, was picking fruit in the orchard and met with a painful accident. The little fellow was up in an apple tree, when he lost his equilibrium and fell to the ground, breaking his left wrist in two places. Dr. T. H. Henry of this town was hastily summoned, and set the injured limb. The boy will be laid up for several weeks.

AN AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.—A movement is on foot to establish an amateur athletic association in this town and we hope it will be carried to a successful issue. It is proposed to form a joint stock with sufficient capital and secure control of the old G. V. R. station grounds and erect buildings, etc. Everything is to be fitted up in good style and water for bathing purposes can be procured from Ketchum's lake near by. Orangeville is away behind other towns in this respect, but we sincerely trust this state of affairs will not last long.

NEARLY DROWNED.—On Wednesday morning the 3 year old child of William Nelson had a narrow escape from being drowned in the millrace in the rear of the Globe hotel, and had it not been for the presence of mind of a little girl we would be chronicling a fatality instead of an accident. The child, with several playmates, were playing on the bank and the little toddler fell into the stream and remained there some time before being noticed. When it was taken out the little thing was unconscious, but a doctor was sent for and under his treatment soon revived.

PICNIC.—The farmers of Erin, East Garafraxa, Caledon, Amaranth and Mono purpose holding a picnic at Dufferin lake. For the accommodation and justice to all the proprietor suggests that each township have a gala day for themselves, viz:—Caledon on Tuesday, Sept. 22, Erin Thursday, the 24th, Garafraxa Saturday, 26, Mono Tuesday, 29, and Amaranth Thursday, the 1st of Oct. Stables are being erected and will be ready in time and plenty of feed will be on hand. Good boats which now deck the lake are in readiness and old and young should take advantage of the big days.

LITERARY REORGANIZED.—The High School Literary Society reorganized for the season on Thursday and much enthusiasm was manifested at the meeting. A large attendance of pupils was present and the following officers were elected. Mr. Parker, B. A., president; W. F. Seymour, B. A., vice president; Miss Nina Smith, secretary; A. McKitrick, treasurer: Misses Ewing and Skelton, librarians; Misses Thompson and Love and Messrs. Atkinson, Wright and Cotton councillors; W. F. Seymour, leader of glee club; for THE SUN, E. Foley; Advertiser, H. Crozier; Post, F. McKitrick.

HOW PROPERTY DEPRECIATES.—Some years ago the Alton flour mills, at Alton Ont., a property then valued at $35,000, was mortgaged by the David McKinnon estate to the estate of William Knox, of Toronto (Mrs. Catharine Knox, executrix) for $7 500. At the time of the recent flood which devastated Orangeville and Alton this particular mill was damaged to the extent of $12,000, and injuries not being properly nor promptly attended to the property ran rapidly into ruin until now it is only worth about $3,500. The Knox estate got an order this morning at Osgoode Hall for the foreclosure of the mortgage.—Toronto Telegram.

TOGETHER AGAIN.—Our readers will remember that some time ago Ward the photographer deserted his wife and family, and went away with Ida Kennedy, who was professedly learning the photographing with him. He went to Orangeville, and worked there under an assumed name, the two living together as man and wife. The child that was born died, and the couple removed. Last Thursday Constable Paterson got track of them and going to Markham arrested Ward under the Christian name, and the girl as a witness. They were brought here on Friday and after a preliminary hearing, before C. Palmer, Ward was committed for trial, and Miss Kennedy as a witness. At present they are in the same stone house in Owen Sound, but are not allowed to occupy the same room.—Dundalk Herald.

SPORTSMAN TAKE A TUMBLE.—Saturday morning three local sports conceived the idea of going out shooting and they carried out their intention to the letter and a little to spare. A livery rig was engaged and the trio started for a neighboring bush in great glee, but their joyful thoughts were knocked silly, as the phrase goes, before the happy sports got outside the city walls. In descending a hill on one of the back streets in the South ward some part of the harness gave way and the horse struck up a 2:30 gait. The buggy struck an obstruction and two of the sports were thrown out on their heads, and the wheels of the vehicle ran over of them. The horse continued its mad race for several hundred yards, but was captured by two other sports who happened to be in the vicinity. The damaged rig was returned to the stable and another one procured and after a physician dressed the wounds they went their way rejoicing. We are not in a position to tell what game they bagged, but as we have not heard any tremendous stories it is safe to say they had pretty poor luck, at least our sporting editor inclines to that belief. We sincerely trust a libel suit will not be the penalty for publishing the above. Next!

GALL, GALLY GALL.—One day last week we received a pamphlet from a dye manufacturing firm saying they would esteem it a favor if you would kindly notice our dye competition scheme which is open to all ladies in Canada." Well! I declare, if this don't knock out all other deadhead advertisers in one round we don't know whereof we speak. Some quack medicine firms promise to pay their bill, but never do. But this beats anything we have ever seen for pure, genuine, unadulterated gall. We decline to comply with this gally request, and do not give a fig for the firms "esteem"—it's the cold cash we're after. We exist on something more substantial than the atmosphere and we don't sleep in a hayloft and, moreover, we don't run THE SUN for the fun of the thing. If these deadbeats want to make an announcement of their competition, why don't they advertise it in an honorable way and not try to rob the newspaper men of Canada? The competition is not for the people's benefit, but is got up solely for the purpose of enriching the firm and advertising their goods. We hope all newspaper proprietors will follow THE SUN's example and let such sharks go harmlessly by or make them pay regular advertising rates.

A TRADING TROUBLE.—On fairday William Hunter of Amaranth came to town to see that everything passed off in the usual way. William had no reason to walk—and neither he did—for a pretty good horse, attached to a buggy, sped him towards home. During the day William got himself outside of too much bad whiskey and, of course, he or any other man could not help being under the aforesaid bad whiskey's influence. Suddenly the bright idea of trading horses struck him and he had not much trouble in getting up a trade. Wm. Menary, jr., deals in that line sometimes, and the man who can beat Bill in a horse exchange has to get up pretty early in the morning. The two exchanged animals and as Hunter's horse was a little better than Menary's the latter gave "boot" to the amount of $5. Hunter's friends saw that he had been beaten and the matter was referred to P. M. Pattullo. Chief Shields was instructed to take possession of the horse, and he did it. Menary gave bonds to produce the animal when required and it was left in his keeping. Later on Judge McCarthy gave an order for Hunter to get possession of the noble animal and he secured boudamen and went off triumphantly. Hunter says he didn't trade and Menary strongly affirms a trade was made. Bill says he will enter an action to recover the horse.

YOUNG MILLOY'S DEATH.—Mr. R. Donaldson of Reading dropped into our office on Monday and made an explanation concerning the death of young Archibald Milloy, who was found dead in the former's barn a couple of weeks ago. Mr. D. found fault with THE SUN's report of the unfortunate occurrence. He says the boy's mother was aware of her son's illness, as her daughters heard him in the barn, and that it was a common thing for young Milloy to take such spells and remain all night in barns. He further said that the Sunday previous to Milloy's demise the young fellow had been eating choke cherries, green plums and raw turnips, and to these were attributed his death. Mr. D. also said his son remained with the unfortunate fellow until midnight when Milloy told him he was getting better and for him (Donaldson) to go home. Before going young Donaldson took off his coat and spread it over Milloy. It was on Wednesday morning, the 4th inst., that young Milloy's lifeless body was discovered in the barn, and it was about 4 o'clock in the afternoon before the news reached Orangeville. A SUN reporter hunted up and interviewed some people from that neighborhood and based the report on their stories. Mr. Donaldson was in town at the same time, but we were not aware of the fact. If he had come to the office or asked that a reporter be sent to where he was stopping, his version of the lamentable affair would be included in the report. Mr. D is an old friend of ours and we would not charge him with any wrong doing unless we had facts to substantiate what we said. Our reference to the affair probably led some to believe he was uncharitable, but those who are acquainted with him know that he is a different stamp of a man from that.

TEACHERS IN TRAINING.

A Large Number Attending the Orangeville Model School.

Since the reopening of the Orangeville model school quite a large number of pupils have gone in training under the supervision of Principal Armstrong, and favorable progress is reported. The following is a list of those in attendance:

BOYS.—H. Cotton, F. Atkinson, J. Atkinson, W. Hawkins, J. McDonald, E. Boggs, J. R. Stanton, A. Rowan, H. Duke. GIRLS.—E. Armstrong, M. Gordon, L. Delaney, L. Clegg, B. Hunwicond, B. Lessum, A. M. Kinton, M. White, S. Crisp, E. R. V. Mills, Sprott, H. Reid, S. Turnbull, B. Rintoul, Miss McDonald, Miss Reid.

GRAND VALLEY.

GREAT KICKERS.—The Grand Valley football team journeyed to Belmont last Friday and "did up" the club of that place by a score of 1 goal to 0. They have now won three matches this season and lost none.

PERSONAL.—Miss Hinde of Harrington is visiting her sister, Mrs. R. R. Hopkins.....Mr. and Mrs S. Graham visited Eton friends this week.....Mr. T. H. Hamilton returned from Manitoba on Saturday.....Miss Sarah Gibson of Kingston is visiting her sister, Mrs H. Crozier.

A SUBJECT FOR JUDGE LYNCH.—Some evil disposed person at Waldemar has been laying out poison in the village ostensibly for the purpose of poisoning a much prized canine. A large piece of bread liberally spread with butter and strychnine was picked up on the street last week. About six months, twice a year, in the central prison would do some people a lot of good.

A BRASS BAND.—A meeting in connection with the Mechanics' Institute was held on Wednesday evening in the reading-room for the purpose of making a movement in the organizing of a brass band for the village. A committee was appointed to canvass the village to see what can be done towards this worthy object. In the way of subscriptions, The township council, probably, will not object to the scheme and give a liberal donation. We all know the necessity of such an institution as a band, as well as being an ornament to the town. We hope that the committee will meet with success in this scheme.

MONO.

FAST THRESHING.—A few days ago Mr. James Coulter of Coulterville made a rapid threshing record with his new machine on the farm of Mr. Jos Foster, lot 6, con. 1, east. He threshed nearly 700 bushels of oats in about two and a half hours. Let us hear of the beater of this.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills remove all obstructions, purify the blood, and give to the skin that beautiful clear and healthful look so greatly admired in a beautiful and healthy woman. At certain periods these Pills are an indispensable companion. From one to four should be taken each day, until relief is obtained. A few doses occasionally will keep the system so healthy, and the blood so pure, that disease cannot enter the body. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all medicine dealers.

DIED IN JAIL.

TWO OLD WOMEN BREATHE THEIR LAST BEHIND PRISON BARS.

Not Criminals; Poverty Was Their Only Crime.

Last week two deaths occurred in the Orangeville jail and two more names are added to the roormous list of those unfortunates who have ended their days in that institution. There are no criminals in the jail at present, but twelve unfortunate vagrants, the majority of whom are too old and feeble to work, occupy cells at the "castle" and to the uninitiated appear to be "doing time" the same as convicted criminals.

92 YEARS OLD.

The first to be released from prison last week was Elizabeth Hill, who had reached the great age of 92 years. The angel of death turned the key early Friday morning, and the woman who had spent so many years in public institutions was free forever. Years ago Mrs. Hill was sent to the Fergus poorhouse from the township of Amaranth and a decade ago was removed to the prison here, and remained there until her death. It is said she has relatives in comfortable circumstances living in Amaranth, but as is too often the case they never once visited their unfortunate relation. A coroner and jury viewed the remains and held an inquest, the ancient verdict of "death from natural causes" being returned. The remains were interred at 5 o'clock the same evening in the potters field in the Town cemetery. Rev. A. Henderson of St. Mark's held services in the jail and at the grave.

A COMPANION FOLLOWS.

The grim messenger did not remain long away from the "castle," for at noon the following day, Saturday, a woman named Nancy Gillespie was called away. Mrs. Gillespie was committed to jail from the vicinity of Relasey, Mono, in June 1890. She has relatives, but they are not her friends. Her former neighbors were very kind to her and used to go to the jail and see her, but relatives never troubled themselves about her. It is said a brother of Mrs. Gillespie resides at Rosemont and is pretty well off, but was too stingy to support his unfortunate sister. He was visiting in Orangeville for two weeks this summer, but never once went to see her! The coroner and a jury repeated Friday's proceedings, and at 6 o'clock the remains of poor Mrs. Gillespie were laid beside those of her late companion-in-poverty. Rev. A. Henderson also held services in the jail and at the grave.

T. Stevenson, issuer of Marriage Licenses. A large supply of Blanks kept constantly on hand. Pure Paris Green at the Medical Hall, Broadway, Orangeville.

OF COURSE THEY HAVE.—"Why is it," asks a citizen, "that newspapers make misstatements?" "Well, said a reporter of twenty years experience, "the papers have to tell stories that men tell them, and it is a moral impossibility for nine out of ten men to tell a thing as it really was. Some may tell it as it seemed to them, but what one man will swear to as the truth the next man will characterize as a lie."

You cannot be too particular about the medicines you use. When you need a blood purifier, be sure you get Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and no other. It will mingle with, purify, and vitalize every drop of blood in your body. It makes the weak strong.

"Like Magic,"

THE effect produced by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Colds, Coughs, Croup, and Sore Throat are, in most cases, immediately relieved by the use of this wonderful remedy. It strengthens the vocal organs, allays irritation, and prevents the inroads of Consumption; in every stage of that dread disease, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral relieves coughing and induces refreshing rest.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children have been subject."—Capt. U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"From an experience of over thirty years in the sale of proprietary medicines, I feel justified in recommending Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One of the best recommendations of the Pectoral is the enduring quality of its popularity, it being more salable now than it was twenty-five years ago, when its great success was considered marvelous."—B. B. Drake, M. D., Beliot, Kans.

"My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine; saying that he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with the most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This has given me unbounded faith in the preparation, and I recommend it confidently to my customers."—C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind.

TORONTO GOSSIP.

INTERESTING CITY NEWS BY THE SUN'S FAIR CORRESPONDENT.

So much has been said and written concerning the discourteous manner in which the weaker sex receive the proffered seats of the "Lords of Creation," in a street-car, and I have often thought the unthankful recipients have been judged too hardly. For instance—a woman enters a car whose seats are nearly all occupied by men. She stands with a look of mute protest on her face against anyone who may be under the impression that she wants to sit down. After three or four minutes have elapsed, one of the gallant sex seems to have awakened to the consciousness of her presence, and then, in a very slow manner, and with an injured expression, does his action and countenance expressing without the aid of language. "There's my seat, you may have it if you want to. Its a great bore having to get up." And then moves off with the air of a martyr. Now what can the poor woman do? She doesn't want his seat, she would just as soon stand. But she is grateful just the same. And when she sees the seat has been vacated for her, and, in taking possession looks up to say, "Thank you." She sees the donor with his back to her, stalking up to the far end of the car, and she doesn't like to shout after him. Making those remarks to an American gentleman the other day, he quite agreed with me, and further more went on to say, "Now, you cannot imagine the difference in this respect on the "Other Side." There, when a lady enters, every man in the car is on his feet in an instant, with his hat in his hand." And although this was very pleasant to contemplate, I could not help thinking that the speech was only further proof of that a good likeness "Mark Tapley's" picture of the "American Eagle" would have been, could he have painted it the way it appeared to him.

A very remarkable company of actors will make its first appearance before a Canadian audience Monday night, Sept. 14th at the Academy of music. The company, called the Royal Midgets, consists of 50 little people, whose heights range from 36 to 43 inches and their ages from 18 to 42 years. They are Martians, and seem to make up in talent what they lack in stature. The way in which they will appear is entitled "Gulliver's Travels," and is founded on Dean Swift's celebrated work. The play follows in the main the wonderful adventure of Gulliver in the land of Lilliputians. These little people have play before nearly all the crowned heads of Europe. They are undoubtedly a very novel and interesting organization.

Once more the church bells are ringing in hopeful expectation of a good congregation, and a great many sunburnt faces may be seen in pews which have been empty all summer. It is the odd to see the many tanned complexions, especially of little children, the white dresses form such a contrast to their brown faces. But they will soon wear off, and in a few days, when the sun's rays are weaker and the snow is piled high, there will be naught left of the sunny morning and the long, delicious afternoons, but sweet memories and the sorry feeling that Summer's joy is all over until next year.

(From the Star.)

STATE CHANGED.—The Luther agricultural fall fair will now be held on the 20th and 21st instead of 6th and 7th as previously announced. The change was made so as not to conflict with Fergus and Shelburne.

GOOD REPORTS.—Our young friend, J. Finlow, of the Enterprise office, Ashton, B.C., reports wonderful crops there on the Pacific coast. Oats 80 bushels to the acre, cabbages 55 to the inch, potatoes 24 lbs. to the hill, 2 lb. each, etc. The harvest has been gathered in and the farmers out there are not troubled with rain during the summer and harvest season.

TOOK THE WRONG MEDICINE.—Mr. J. Smith, teacher, had a narrow escape from poisoning last Monday. Mr. Smith had been poorly and was taking a powerful nerve sedative mixture in small doses. Mr. Smith, suppose that the bottle contained a harmless headache medicine that he had used before, took a large dose out of the bottle, and as the taste was similar to the medicine he had been taking, he did not notice his mistake. Fortunate he made the mistake in the daytime and the pupils soon noticed the poisonous effects on him and called in assistance. When the doctor arrived he found that the effect of the poison was wearing off, probably owing to Mr. Smith's efforts to continue teaching, and the mixture fortunately contained no laudanum or morphine in any dangerous form was done than to incapacitate our worthy teacher for a few hours. People cannot be too careful to be sure that they are taking what they suppose they are, and should always read the label on a bottle before taking a dose.

HATRED OF EVIL.

National and Political Sins—Corruption in High Places Denounced.

(Toronto Mail.)

Rev. D. C. Hossack, the popular Presbyterian minister of Orangeville, preached a sermon in that town last Sunday, which has since been the subject of conversation by the majority of the residents. Mr. Hossack took for his text, "Abhor that which is evil," Romans xii, 9, and in the most unmeasured terms denounced the wrong doing recently ascertained in Ottawa, declaring that that was an evil which all true Canadians, irrespective of party, should not only abhor but strenuously condemn. We are to hate, said the preacher, everything which corrupts the individual and which injures society, but unfortunately there are those in the community who lack the power of hating, and who hear of a great evil without a feeling of righteous indignation. A nation is better without commerce than devoid of a sense of honour, for what profit is there to a nation which gains commercial intercourse with the whole world, but at the same time sacrifices the purity of national honour? Public opinion in Canada is at a low ebb because the people, at times indignant, have never transmitted their indignation into action, never blasted, as with lightning, the men who, with loyalty on their lips, have had

INFAMY IN THEIR HEARTS.

If Canadians, the rev. gentleman continued, had in the past expressed indignation by action when they felt it they would not behold the sorry spectacle of great corruption revealed, and a public sentiment so low in tone that it barely expresses disgust. Wickedness is great in daring when it knows that it will not be condemned by good men. Canadians may thank God and their fathers that they live in an age when the sword has no rule, and the sternest authority dares not encounter the withering power of public reproach; they may thank themselves that the dishonest politician has been allowed to defy public opinion. We are told that $100,000 have been stolen in Quebec, and $1,500,000 at Ottawa, but we have not heard of any attempt being made to recover it. The people's money has been stolen, and the people should hold their agents responsible for its recovery. Many ministers are prevented from denouncing this corruption for fear of giving offence. The minister who holds his peace when he knows he ought to speak upon a subject, is a bribed slave and poltroon. There is no necessity for pulpit ferocity but ministers should be brave and true, and call things by their right names instead of glossing them over with breezes of rhetoric or beautiful essays. Our pulpits should thunder when the interests of the people are made subordinate to the lusts of political tricksters; when members of Parliament are bribed by contractors; when manufacturers are bribed by the money that has been taken from the poor; when Cabinet Ministers, sworn to serve faithfully the people, are false to their trust; when leading politicians are known to be as black as that which drove Paruell into political gloom; when the hope of the nation is destroyed by lowering the tone of public opinion; when constituencies are systematically debauched with money obtained by placing loves upon people who expect to be repaid by public emoluments out of the public funds or when men of loyalty and integrity break through and steal; then must righteous indignation burn, and then must our pulpits speak. Mr. Hossack then referred to the present wealth of some of the politicians, quoting from a French paper and the suddenness with which it was accumulated. Mr. Mercier, he said, could not pay a sum of $250 in 1886; he now owns a residence in Montreal, another one in Quebec, a handsome villa at Ste. Anne, horses and carriages, and lives luxuriously in all the cities through which he passes. Mr. C. Langelier, lawyer, with an average practice in 1886, now exhibits every indication of wealth. Mr. Pacaud was poor in 1886, but now owns one of the most costly houses in Quebec, and lives in the most luxurious style. Mr. Hossack said the writer from whom he had quoted may have drawn on his imagination, but it was evident there was some groundwork for the structure of words. Quotations from a number of English papers were then made, all of them condemning the corrupt systems of administration in several of the departments at Ottawa. The press was then taken to task for prostituting its influence for party purposes. Melancholy it is said the rev. gentleman, to see a large daily filling its columns with excuses of the sins of its party, and then denouncing with all its energy similar sins, but less in degree, committed by men who are not in Dominion politics, but are in the legislature of a province. There is hope and encouragement, he continued in the fact that a great daily, standing aloof from party, and holding the claims of party in an even balance, maintains the right and hates the wrong.

OUR HOPE.

After referring to some other signs of hope and encouragement, Mr. Hossack said we can not look to the state of our population for comfort. If we cannot turn to great prosperity for comfort in what will we place our hope? We may call on God for mercy, but we may rest assured that He will have mercy on us only when we have mercy on ourselves. The light of virtue has burned low in its socket; let us hope that it will flame anew. Public morality will not sink into endless night in order to gratify the ambitions of these men, who seek to wade through corruption into power. We are not to perish in this manner. God will help us by teaching us to hate in political as in private life everything that maketh a lie.

A MAIDSTONE MAIDEN

MYSTERIOUSLY DISAPPEARS FROM HER PARENTS' RESIDENCE,

And Although That Was On Saturday She Has Not Been Seen Since—The Maggie McVey Mystery Recalled—Her Personal Appearance.

WINDSOR, Sept. 2.—The residents of Maidstone township, in the vicinity of Elmstead station on the C. P. R. are very much excited over the mysterious disappearance of Susan Kerr, daughter of William Kerr, lot 13 on the 8th concession, who retired as usual on Friday night and when Saturday morning came had disappeared as mysteriously and effectually as though swallowed up by the earth.

The young lady occupied a bed with her sister. The two retired together and Susan has not since been seen by any person. Searching parties have scoured the woods and the surrounding country for miles without finding any trace to information of her whereabouts. Her disappearance recalls that of Maggie McVey, who left the house of her father, John McVey, in Yarmouth, Elgin county, one evening in November, 1878, to drive home the cows from a neighboring field, and of whose whereabouts no trace has ever been discovered, although rewards, government, county and private, aggregating $2500 were offered for her body, dead or alive.

Miss Kerr is 22 years of age, has light curly hair, rather short, had on light brown dress with black trimmings, man's coarse straw hat with red band and wide rim, light red woolen stockings without shoes, is about 5 feet 4 or 5 inches in height, of medium build, weighing about 115 pounds.

A Grain Steamer Wrecked.

HALIFAX, N.B., Sept. 2.—The steamer Dunmurray from New York for Antwerp, grain laden, was upset by a hurricane Saturday morning last at 10 o'clock. Eight of her crew were drowned and twenty saved by the life boat. The saved were picked up by the steamers Hans and Kurt from New York for Rotterdam on Monday evening and transferred to a fishing boat this evening off Halifax harbor and brought to the city.

Capt. McMarran looks badly battered after his great fight with fate. He tells a thrilling story of the battle for life when the ship went down. All the men had on life preservers, but there was only one boat left and she was filled. Those who had presence of mind swam to her, and she was baled out with an empty whisky case. The other eight, including the first mate and chief engineer, were never seen after the ship capsized, and were either killed in the wreckage or carried down by the suction. Capt. McMarran says the hurricane was of only a few hours' duration, but raged with great fury while it lasted. The Dunmurry was a new ship on her third voyage. The survivors were semi-naked and penniless.

From China to England in 21 Days.

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—The Canadian Pacific Railway's fast mail train which left Vancouver Saturday last at 1 p.m. on the arrival of the Canadian Pacific Railway's steamship Empress of Japan with the China and Japan mails reached Brockville at 9.03 last evening, having made the run in 76 hours, allowing for three hours lost by changes in time. A special left Morrisburg over the New York Central at 9.45 p.m., which will probably reach New York 4.30 Wednesday morning, making the time from Vancouver to New York about 85 hours and from Yokohama to New York a trifle less than 13 days. If the mails catch the Inman liner steamship City of New York, which sails at 5, they should reach London Wednesday, Sept. 9, making the time from Yokohama to London via the C. P. Railway and New York, just 21 days. The special train on the C. P. R. was delayed about three hours by hot boxes, otherwise the connection with the City of New York would have been made with ease; as it is it may be missed by an hour. In that event the mails will go by the Hamburg American steamship Columbia, sailing at 6 a.m. Thursday.

North Waterloo Election Petition.

TORONTO, Sept. 2.—At Osgoode Hall yesterday, in the matter of the North Waterloo Dominion election Mr. Justice MacMahon delivered judgment on the motion to dismiss the petition which was argued some time before vacation. The motion it will be remembered was to set aside the petition on preliminary objections, the principal of which was that the petitioner, Conrad Knell, was an alien and not entitled to vote therefore not to file a petition. At the same time it was asked that if the petition was found bad, on this ground, that a new petitioner might be substituted. His Lordship holds that the petition, as it now stands, is bad and must be set aside. The order made was that the matter stand for three weeks, and if by that time no new petitioner asks to be substituted in the stead of the present one the petition be dismissed with costs, but if a petitioner comes forward and asks to be substituted he may be so substituted.

"Big Ben" Shot.

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.—Ben Whitworth or "Big Ben," as he is popularly called, the steward of the Beaver Line steamship Lake Ontario, was accidentally shot on the voyage over. Dr. Holden was vaccinating the emigrants, and a Polish Jew took off his coat, saying it crossed his arm, and the doctor was just about to vaccinate him when there was a loud report, and with a cry of "My God, I'm shot," Big Ben fell to the deck. The Polish Jew, in emigrant, had a 42 calibre bull dog revolver in his coat pocket, and this was discharged accidentally, the bullet struck Big Ben in the right chest, plough ing its way right across the chest, and finally lodging in the left shoulder. Dr. Holden cut the bullet out and Whitworth will recover.

The Poet's of the Sea.

HALIFAX, Sept. 2.—A special from Bermuda says: The steamer Dunot Castle, from Halifax, arrived yesterday. She encountered a hurricane Saturday morning, during which two seamen were washed overboard and drowned. Ten horses were killed and her cargo shifted.

The Lusitania Pitt parted her chains during the hurricane and went to sea. She has not yet returned and it is feared she is lost.

Injured by a Runaway.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—A 12-year-old lad name Stonehouse, of London West, was run on Dundas street with a man named Finnigan, a market gardener, when the horse ran away. The lad was thrown out and was run over. Medical aid was procured, and it was found that one rib had been broken and his chest and arm badly bruised.

Crossley and Hunter at Work Again.

NORWICH, Sept. 2.—The evangelists Crossley and Hunter, after vacation spent in Muskoka and Grimsby park, have commenced their fall campaign in this town. The Presbyterian and Baptist churches were favored with their ministrations in Successful Rainmaking.

CHEYENNE, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Melborn's rain-making has been crowned with success. At 2.30 this afternoon a storm suddenly broke forth contrary to all expectations, and two hours later there was heavy rain in accordance with Melborne's predictions. The rainfall extended over a radius 15 to 20 miles around the city and the official measurement was one-half inch.

ENGLAND MUST MOVE.

Russia and the Dardanelles—Germany Enjoys a Smile.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The Standard suggests that the Sultan's action in regard to Russia and the Dardanelles may be due to pique and irritation at England's refusal to reopen the Egyptian question. It says:—"Since that refusal it is reported that the English ambassador has not been received at the Yildiz kiosk. It is for the powers to consider what course to adopt to enforce the observance of existing treaties. Clearly the straits must be either closed to all nations or open to all nations. England cannot alone champion the rights of the powers."

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—The National Gazette argues that the initiative in the Dardanelles matter falls upon England and says:—It would be exceedingly bitter irony of fate if immediately after the Portsmouth reception England should be compelled by Russia, France's ally, to defend her interests.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The Austrian and German newspapers continue their excited discussion of the Dardanelles question, while they profess not to believe the report that Turkey has yielded to Russia. They declare that if the report be true it might induce the most terrible complications for all

SHELBURNE.

(From Free and Resolution.)

FOR MANITOBA.—Messrs. John Lewis, Geo. B. Keys and J. W. Hodgson started for Manitoba on Wednesday with 17 horses and a car load of lumber.

PRESENTATION.—Mr. S. H. McMaster, principal of the Shelburne public schools, was presented with an address on Saturday, accompanied by a plush collar, cuff and jewel case. The testimonial was got up by the successful candidates at the last entrance examination. Their names are Ella Durkee, Annie Hogg, Fanny Morrison, Argie Hogg, Ed. White, John Barber, Dinsmore Medill and John O'Flynn.

AFTER THEIR SCALPS.—The residents of Melancthon and Amaranth west of Shelburne are down on the Amaranth council. It appears that $142 was subscribed in Shelburne towards gravelling the road leading to the west. The parties who got up the list went to the Melancthon council, and they very willingly agreed to give $70 towards the road if Amaranth would give an equal amount. The refusal of the Amaranth council has caused a great deal of talk in the west. The Amaranth ratepayers say they will have their innings at the next municipal election.

HEARD ON TROUBLE.—There was trouble at the "Orphans' Home" on Saturday night. A red-headed tough named Frank Prime undertook to demolish the Cavill homestead with stones and when Cavill and his son interfered he attacked them, inflicting wounds on Cavill that required surgical attention. We understand that a warrant was taken out for Prime's arrest, but before it was executed he skipped out.

THE BAND PREPARED.—The Salvation Army still holds forth at the same old spot, pound the same old drum, and succeeds in knocking the Citizens' band out on Saturday evening. The band generally has time to ably render only two selections, when they have to withdraw. It's utterly impossible for the band to continue their playing with such a racket as the Salvation Army makes. If the Army would only cease their drum pounding—but then, its no use suggesting that. The people should not complain that the band does not play enough until some arrangement is made by them or the authorities whereby the Army is moved a respectful distance from our musicians.

The Best of Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt at every day. A series of experiments has conclusively proved that when cows are denied salt for a period of even one week they will yield from ¼ to ¼ per cent less milk, and that of an inferior quality. Such milk will on an average, turn sour in twenty four hours less time than milk drawn from the same or similar cows receiving salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analysed 99.84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock fine and coarse, at

Sufferers

FROM Stomach and Liver derangements—Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick-Headache, and Constipation—find a safe and certain relief in Ayer's Pills. In all cases where a cathartic is needed, these Pills are recommended by leading physicians.

Dr. T. R. Hastings, of Baltimore, says: "Ayer's Pills are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of my profession."

Dr. John W. Brown, of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I have prescribed Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."

"For a number of years I was afflicted with biliousness which almost destroyed my health. I tried various remedies, but nothing afforded me any relief until I began to take Ayer's Pills."—G. S. Wanderlich, Scranton, Pa.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years, and am satisfied I should not be alive to-day if it had not been for them. They cured me of dyspepsia when all other remedies failed, and their occasional use has kept me in a healthy condition ever since."—T. P. Brown, Chester, Pa.

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills, and deem it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these Pills every night before retiring. I would not willingly be without them."—G. W. Bowman, 22 East Main st., Carlisle, Pa.

"Ayer's Pills have been used in my family upwards of twenty years, and have completely verified all that is claimed for them. In attacks of piles, from which I suffered many years, they afforded me greater relief than any medicine I ever tried."—Thomas F. Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

THE BEYOND.

It seemeth such a little way to me,
Across to that strange country, the beyond;
And yet not strange, for it has grown to be
The home of those of whom I am so fond;
They make it seem familiar and most dear,
As journeying friends bring distant countries near.

So close it lies that when my sight is clear,
I think I see the brightly-streaming strand
I know I feel that those who've gone from here
Come near enough to touch my hand.
I often think, but for our veiled eyes,
We should find Heaven round about us lies.

I cannot make it seem a day to dread
When from this dear earth I shall journey out
To that still dearer country of the dead,
And join the lost ones so long dreamed about.
I love this world, yet shall I love to go
And meet the friends who wait for me, I know.

I never stand about a bier and see
The seal of death set on some well-loved face,
But that I think, one more to welcome me
When I shall cross the intervening space
Between this land and that one over there—
One more to make the strange Beyond seem fair.

And so for me there is no sting to death,
And so the grave has lost its victory;
It is but crossing with abated breath
And white, set face, a little strip of sea.
To find the loved ones waiting on the shore,
More beautiful, more precious than before.

—OR— TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER XV.

MR. HERIOT sat alone in his study, when a servant entered, and laid before him a letter. He was not very eager to open it; on the contrary, he looked at it with much of that disgust with which men, who has worked hard, are apt to regard all written documents. But the servant waited, and this seemed to say it required an answer; so, with a listless hand, he broke the seal, and cast a careless glance, at the contents; then his face changed to sudden interest, and in a sharp, quick voice he asked where the messenger was that waited.

"In the servants' hall, sir," was the reply.

"Show him in here at once," said Mr. Heriot.

The next moment a young man, dressed in laborer's attire, and possessing a shock head of red hair, and a complexion of yellow-ochrish cast, entered the room with an awkward and loutish bow. Mr. Heriot scanned him from head to foot with a scrutinizing glance, not uttering a word till the door was shut, and the footsteps of the retreating servant had died out of hearing. Then he burst into a shout of laughter, which pealed forth again and again as his visitor repeated his clownish bow, and stood with a grave and respectful face awaiting his commands.

"So you want a place in my establishment as under gardener?" said Mr. Heriot, with another burst of merriment.

"Ef your honor will be so good," said the young man.

"And you can bring me no character from your last place?" said Mr. Heriot.

"No," returned the stranger. "I hopes your honor will be satisfied with what Squire Vigo says of me in this letter."

"Then you evidently don't know what Mr. Vigo says," continued Mr. Heriot, with a twinkle of fun in his eye. "He declares you are as obstinate as a pig, and as unmanageable as an Irish man, and you know no more of gardening than king Nebuchadnezzar."

During this speech, Mr. Heriot had crept round to the door and locked it; and this done, he turned with a hearty laugh, and seized the young man by the hand.

"Now, Charlie," said he, "what is the meaning of this comedy?"

"It means, Mr. Heriot, that I have sworn to track the murderer of Eleanor Maristowe to justice," he replied. "It means that I will find him, and hunt him to the gallows, and clear an innocent name from the horrible accusation standing against it."

"By Jove, you are right?" exclaimed Mr. Heriot, his merriment fading before the earnestness of the speaker. "Your skull is not so thick as Sir Anthony Roakelly's, and the other Dogberries, who imagine a child could have done such a deed. But, upon my word, it would go hard with the girl if she were brought to trial. The circumstantial evidence is very strong against her. I am right glad she has escaped."

"So am I," said Charles Vigo, sadly; "because I fear that not even a prison, and the fear of death, would make her speak."

Mr. Heriot had curious thoughts within his own breast respecting the death of Eleanor Maristowe, and these words only strengthened that thought.

"She must be wonderfully strong in her attachment," he said. "But there is Eastern blood in her, and it is only in the East we hear of one person laying down his life for another."

"In the West we sometimes lay down for another all that makes life worth having," said Charles quietly. "Olive has done this; but she is not, I hope, the only one who can do it."

"You are both a couple of Quixotic fools," said Mr. Heriot, snappishly. "If either of you know anything of this crime, clearly you ought to tell it."

"To suspect is not to know," replied Charles. "You yourself, Mr. Heriot, may have suspicions, yet you keep silent."

"And a pretty blundering fool I should be if I told all the world my thoughts," said Mr. Heriot. "But with Olive Varcoe it is different; I consider she was bound to speak."

"I think so, too, Mr. Heriot," observed Charles Vigo; "and yet, for aught I know, the truth may be such a veritable shadow in Olive's mind, that she dares not utter it."

"Then she has told you nothing?" said Mr. Heriot, eagerly.

"Not a word," was the reply.

"Then, by Jupiter, I honor you!" exclaimed Mr. Heriot. "For, without a single asseveration of the fact, you have had brains enough to see she is innocent, and you have had courage—"

"I have acted from the heart, not from the head," interrupted Charles Vigo. "I have defended Olive, simply because I love and honor her more than any other woman in the world."

"Don't tell anybody that but me," said Mr. Heriot, rubbing his dry, little hands together, and laughing heartily. "Love and faith are grand things, but the law ignores them; they don't prove anybody's innocence, or anybody's guilt. To the world they only prove you to be a young man—very young—that's all, lad. Well, I suppose I mustn't ask where this little girl is in hiding?"

It was Charles Vigo's turn to smile, as he replied:

"Ask no questions that I cannot answer, Mr. Heriot."

"At least," said he, "I may ask why you want to be my under-gardener."

"Because I think no one will look for me here, or recognize me," replied Charles Vigo. "I want to lull the suspicions of that smiling owl, Eslick, and quiet the uneasiness of the Trewavas family."

"But I imagined they, like all the world else, concluded you had all gone abroad," said Mr. Heriot.

"So they did for a time," replied Charles; "but John Trewavas has eyes like a lynx; he recognized me, and he spoke of his suspicions to Eslick."

"Why did you creep about the Trewavas woods, and get seen?" asked the little legal mummy, with a strange smile on his parchment face.

Charles Vigo was silent.

"Ah! another question I must not ask," said the lawyer. "Never mind; perhaps I can answer it myself. Let me see, let me perfectly understand why you wish to come here. You deem this a safe concealment, and you think, after a week or two, Eslick will imagine John Trewavas was mistaken, and the hunt for you, and through you for Olive, will slacken."

"That is my idea, Mr. Heriot," he replied.

"And you do not wish to go abroad," continued Mr. Heriot. "You have cogent reasons for desiring to remain in this neighborhood, to remain disguised and unknown, while a belief is impressed on the county generally that you are abroad."

"Yes," replied Charles; "and I thought I had succeeded in making the world think me a scrapegrace and an exile, only unfortunately the dear old governor would defend me so strenuously, and, more unfortunate still, I was bound to fulfil a promise I had made to Olive, to give a letter and packet to Lady Trewavas."

Here Charles Vigo rapidly related the events of the night before, and expressed his joy that his dog had escaped the shot.

"Who told you all this?" asked Mr. Heriot. "You were not near the spot, I suppose."

"Farmer Skews told me," he replied; "I have been lodging with him; he heard the news in the village. Poor Bolster has been walking about in a sheep's skin till last night; then we unsewed him, and sent him to the tree for my handkerchief."

"You ran a great risk for nothing," said Mr. Heriot. "Olive Varcoe assuredly will not keep the money."

"I know she will not," replied Charles Vigo, sorrowfully; "and yet I hope she may."

"Why, it is blood money," expostulated Mr. Heriot; "money paid her to hold her peace."

"I see you think as I do, Mr. Heriot," said Charles, turning very pale. "Our suspicions are the same, I believe, as you say, Olive will not take this money, but it is for their sakes she refuses; she will not let the world at some future day accuse them of having bribed her—"

"To be their scapegoat," interposed Mr. Heriot. "Ah, well, let me send the packet back to Sir Hilton. I'll do it through a London lawyer; that, will puzzle him a little, Miss Varcoe does not want money, I suppose?"

Charles Vigo's honest face flushed vividly.

"I fear she does," he said, gravely; "at all events, she has not accepted a penny from me, although she has promised to be my wife."

Mr. Heriot stared blankly in the young speaker's face for a moment, and then rubbing his dry chips of hands together again, as if he were bent on developing spontaneous combustion in those members forwith, he asked drily what Charles Vigo meant.

"I mean," he responded, "she accepts no pecuniary aid from me, or from any one."

"Do you mean, then," continued Mr. Heriot, "that she is in some workhouse, or that she is starving somewhere in some garret?"

"Oh, Mr. Heriot, do not torture me with these questions," said Charles. "I have cheated her by every way possible into taking money. I have sold her jewels for her; of course buying them myself at three times their value."

"But such aids will not last long," said Mr. Heriot. "Surely, if this girl is innocent—as I believe—our best plan will be to prove it, and so reinstate her in her proper place in the world. Then you can marry her forthwith, if you will; now you can't."

"I can never marry her," replied Charles Vigo, in a tone of sorrow, "never. And as for her innocence, I am as far off as ever from being able to prove that."

"Tush, tush!" exclaimed Mr. Heriot, "what romantic boobies you young fellows are! Never is a long word. And as to proofs—come, lay your evidence before me, and I'll tell you what it is worth. In the first place, what would you have said at the inquest, if you had not run away from it?"

"I avoided appearing because my evidence must have ruined Olive," he replied. "I must have told that I saw her in the wood on the day of the murder, and during the very hours when Lady Trewavas alleged she was in her room. I saw her twice; the first time she was quarrelling fiercely with Miss Maristowe on the very scene of that poor girl's death—the Lady's Bower. The second time she was alone, excited, and weeping bitterly. It was then I spoke to her, and walked with her as far as the edge of the wood, and she entreated me not to betray to any one that we had met. Good Heavens! I cannot think of that day without horror."

As he spoke, Charles Vigo passed his hand over his eyes to shut out the vision that rose before him of that clear, still pond, and the two graceful shadows falling in the water, as with angry and bitter words, Olive swept on to her fate, and Eleanor crept back to the bower to die.

"Hem!" said Mr. Heriot, drily, "if that is what you had to say, I don't wonder you did not attend the inquest. Did Miss Varcoe account for her excitement and her tears, when you met her in the wood?"

"She explained nothing," replied Charles; "she accounted for nothing."

"Then what makes you believe in her?" asked the little man, abruptly.

"The faith and love that you tell me are nothing, Mr. Heriot, in the eyes of the law," replied Charles; "and besides these, a shadow, a something which I will not name, which makes you believe in her also."

"And you have nothing to tell me of this shadow?" asked Mr. Heriot, with a searching eye.

"Nothing that will warrant action," replied Charles, sadly. "There may be a certain conviction in my own mind, but it would answer no purpose to speak it."

Mr. Heriot remained a moment silent and thoughtful, his thin face taking a yellow tinge, and his thin hand shaking a little as he raised it to emphasize the words, which he spoke at last in a low, impressive tone.

"I do not deny there has been a shadow in my mind, too," said he; "but, my dear boy, let us take care that we are not both mistaken. The evidence which you avoided giving at the inquest shakes me a little; and when it is added to all Sir Hilton suppressed, or managed to get suppressed, it makes a weight of facts that seem conclusive Charles Vigo, let us beware how we accuse the innocent, and let the guilty escape. There are very few men, knowing what I know, who would dare venture to acquit Olive Varcoe. You are acting now as a detective in her behalf—"

"But unknown to her," exclaimed Charles, excitedly. "She would hate me if she knew what I am doing."

"Just so," said Mr. Heriot. "And you see, if she is guilty, you are injuring her chances of escape. Now, before you proceed any further in the course you are pursuing, let me make you acquainted with some facts not yet known to you."

Here Mr. Heriot related rapidly the history which Sir Hilton Trewavas had laid before him on the night before the inquest.

"You see," he continued, "she had the phial of chloroform, and she burnt the cord. How did she get that?"

"My dog Bolster took it to her," replied Charles. "I guessed he would take it straight to her room. When I saw the dog depart, I was superstitious enough—if it was superstitious—to think the matter in Providence."

"Ah, Providence has aided her wonderfully," said Mr. Heriot, drily. "Had she been an ugly old woman, I doubt if she would have found a clever retriever, and an enthusiastic young man, quite so ready to help in time of need. Providence has been kind to the Skews family also, I believe. They are helped to a good farm, are they not? But it would not have fallen to their lot, if Tamson Skews had not held her tongue about that phial."

"Certainly not," returned Charles. "Sir Hilton bribes royally."

The thin flexible lips, the whole expressive twitching face of the little legal mummy flashed, as it were, into new life at these words.

"I have not shaken your faith by all I have told you," he cried. "You know something?"

"I know that not even I believe so firmly in Olive Varcoe's innocence as does old farmer Skews," replied Charles. "But no has been well paid to hold his peace, and he holds it."

Mr. Heriot's parchment fingers rattled as he shook them to and fro, and his eyes gleamed as he fixed them on Charles Vigo's face.

"Then Tamson has been paid another way," said Mr. Heriot, "and old Skews is bribed on his own account?"

"I think so," replied Charles Vigo, in the same quiet tone of firm conviction in which he had begun this dialogue, and continued it throughout.

"You say you think so!" exclaimed Mr. Heriot. "Then away goes my belief in circumstantial evidence forever and ever! Young man, I hire you as my under gardener; and in a little while, when those two owls, Roskelly and Eslick, have ceased to hunt blindly for a certain Mr. Charles Vigo, I would advise you again to seek lodgings at the homestead of the intelligent Farmer Skews."

The way in which those dry fingers were shaking the brown hand of the under gardener, it would have done one's heart good to see. But the young man accepted the little skeleton's enthusiasm with the same calm, assured, unchanged expression.

"The task is only begun," he said, sadly. "Shake hands with me when it is finished, Mr. Heriot. But see what faith can do! You have piled fact upon fact to shake my belief, and I have told you nothing; yet I have won you over to my side, heart and soul, and that by force only of my faith."

"Am I such a fool," said the little mummy, half wistfully. "No, I believe I was on your side all along, only I have been trying you a little. Do you know, Charles Vigo, you make me discontented? I am half sorry I never married. I should have liked just such a son as you."

CHAPTER XVI.

On that beautiful line of country between Cork and Killarney, passengers by the express, looking out on either side, can see pictures of loveliness that dwell upon the brain long after, like glimpses of Fairy Land. Among these, as they near the mountains, there is a picture, coming and going like a flash, of an old mansion, with a green lawn—worthy of Erin—sloping down to a river; while above the house the green woods and peaked and purple hills. The river brawls along over huge stones and mimic falls, approaching at one point so near the line, that you would think in another moment it will touch it; but with a sudden bend it disappoints you, dashing away beneath the shadow of huge beech-trees, the wide-spread branches of which hide the sparkling water from view.

Those beeches are on the lawn of that old mansion; and just at the sudden bend of the river, a picturesque foot bridge crosses it, with the shadow of the great royal trees flickering over it, and the water beneath sprinkled with green and gold and crimson, as the sun flashes in and out among the fluttering leaves.

As an express train drew nearer and nearer, slackening speed a little on account of some repairs on the line, two young girls strolled down the lawn, book in hand, and while one seated herself on the grass to read, the other stepped upon the bridge, and looked wearily up the road. She had large, passionate eyes, full now of a wistful dreaminess, but this was not their normal expression, for the brown was one of power, and the whole face would strike even a casual observer with its character of decision and fire. As she stood now on the bridge facing the railway, she heeded not the coming rattle of its many wheels, or the cloud of fleecy vapor creeping through the beech-trees, covering her as with a mantle of mist.

In a corner of a first-class carriage in that express, a gentleman was reclining in the easiest of languid attitudes, half asleep or wholly so, while his well-gloved hand still held lazily an uncut, uncrease copy of the Times.

"Just look out, old fellow," cried his companion. "What glorious scenery!"

"Glorious!—yes," returned the sleeper.

But the speaker's eyes were still shut, for he had not troubled himself to open them, merely to look at mountains and woods.

FISHERY OFFICIALS.

DOMINION Departmental reports, says the Hillsburg Beaver, give some interesting reading. From the report for 1890 of the Minister of Fisheries, we find how well the fisheries are attended to, or at least we find that officials are thick enough in this neighborhood to give as much protection to the trout as any, not too fastidious a fish, could desire. If the officials are too thick it cannot be said that they are kept in their positions for their usefulness to the party during election times, for at least one of them during each recurring election does his best to oust his masters for their useless expenditure of the public money.

The following are the names, territory and salaries of the gentlemen who look after the fish in this neighborhood:

Andrew Hughson, overseer, Orangeville. Territory, about 25 miles of River Credit, extending from Orangeville to Norval, together with the inland waters of Mono, East Garafraxa, Amaranth, Albion, and Luther, comprised within an area of 500 square miles. Salary, $50.00, travelling expenses, $12.75; total $62 75.

Wellington Hull, overseer, Erin. Territory, the inland waters of the township of Erin, Eramosa, Caledon, and Esquesing, comprised within an area of 400 square miles. Salary, $50 00, travelling expenses, $18.00; total, $68.

Robert Stewart, overseer, Claude. Territory, the inland waters of the county of Cardwell, comprised within an area of 400 square miles. Salary and expenses, $92 75.

W. B. Jelly, overseer, Bowling Green. Territory, the inland waters of the North Riding of the county of Wellington, comprised within an area of about 600 square miles. As this gentleman's salary does not appear in the Public Accounts it is probable he does it for the fun and honor.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

OCTOBER 10th has been fixed as the day for the opening of the election trial in this county, in the matter of the protest made by the Conservatives against the election of Jos. Featherston. The trial will be held in Brampton before two judges from the Chancery division.—Brampton Banner.

A LOCAL journal of sensational propensities reads us a lesson on the subject of misrepresentation, and tells us we "should have a sufficient sense of justice to undo the cruel wrong we have been guilty of towards Mr Donaldson," in connection with young Archibald Milloy's death, which occurred in a barn in East Garafraxa several weeks ago. If our esteemed contemporary had held aloof for a few days it would have seen Mr. Donaldson's statement of the case in our last issue, just a day or so after he made us acquainted with the facts, and we took the first opportunity of giving his statement publicity. THE SUN never knowingly wrongs an innocent person, and we never deviate from the course which has made this the most respected journal in the county. Our friend should not feel the least bit annoyed, for we are not going to enter his favorite field of misrepresentation and sensationalism.

The Government has made a change in the method of passing through customs goods sent by express of under $10 in value. In the future all such goods will be entered in a small customs book similar to that in which postal matter is entered, and the consignees of such goods need but to "sign the book," thus doing away with the expense of making out entry papers as in the past.

Mr. Joseph Little, blacksmith, was removing from Richmond to Aylmer, and a load of household goods had been brought and left in front of the residence they were to occupy on St. Andrew's street. Mrs. Little had repaired to the home of her sister, and while there a boy came along and informed her that the goods on the wagon were on fire, at which Mrs. Little started for the scene of the conflagration, but had gone only a short distance when she dropped dead. Deceased was 43 years of age.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The banking world of this city has just been startled by the announcement that an important bank robbery has taken place in the city. The police and bank officials are trying to keep the matter as quiet as possible, so that the entire facts in the case are not obtainable at present. It is known, however, that the institution that has suffered is the London and Westminster (limited), an important establishment having over 15 branch houses in this city. The money stolen consisted of a large parcel of bills remitted from the country banks to the London and Westminster Bank. It is currently reported that the amount stolen is not less than $750,000 and that it may amount to as much as $1,220,000.

THOSE EXTRA LAMPS!

SOME TROUBLE EXPERIENCED IN SUITING EVERYBODY.

NO COW BYLAW YET.

Ald. Youmans Among the Absentees.

J. W. Aiken Appointed Lieutenant of the Fire-brigade—$50. for the Agricultural Society.

Things looked slightly blue in the council chamber shortly before 7:30 o'clock on Monday evening, and the intense quietness of the sacred room was such as to make the unfortunate scribes feel that something terrible was liable to take place at any moment. The imagination of the trio of scribes must have been holidaying at some summer resort, for nothing terrible or appalling came to pass—probably because Ald. Youmans was not there to introduce his great cow bylaw. His worship the mayor is looking after the Alton flood cases which are being tried at Toronto, and as the mayor cannot be in two places at the same time the chief magistrate's chair was vacant. Reeve Lindsey was called to the throne and discharged the duties pertaining to that office with neatness and dispatch. Of course the acting mayor was rendered great assistance by the councillors who happened to be present: Deputy-reeve Endacott, Ald. Osbean, Gillespie, Fiddis, Green, McKitrick, Young and Rutchum, the two latter arriving a few minutes late. After the minutes of the last meeting had been read and adopted these were read: Globe, $6; L. Martin, $0.25; D. Lamont, $1; D. McKenna, $1.50; J. A. McMaster, $1; R. Parkin, $2, ordered to be paid: THE SUN, $45 50, referred to the Printing committee: G. A. Campbell, $2, referred to R. & B. committee.

ASKED AND GOT IT.

President Stewart of the Dufferin Agricultural Society communicated its annual request for a grant to help boom the fair. As $50 is the sum generally given, this year was no exception to the rule and the corporation is that much poorer and the society just the opposite.

A company of Toronto brokers (per letter) told of their facilities for disposing of debentures. We're not in that line just now.

A LIGHT QUESTION.

The event of the evening took place when Ald. Fiddis rung in the S. L. committee's report. It was proposed to place the four extra lights that the town has contracted for as follows: 1 at the stone mill on Mill street, 1 on west Broadway, opposite Crown Attorney Myers' residence; 1 on John street, opposite James Watson's, and the last opposite H. Kearns' on Amanda street, and the lamp on the corner of Zina and Elizabeth will be removed opposite Mr. Temple, on the latter street. The council went into committee of the whole on the report, Deputy reeve Endacott in the chair. Ald. Ketchum fought hard to have one of the extra lamps placed on Second avenue, but nobody helped him and his motion suffered defeat. About half-an-hour was occupied in discussing whether the light on Amanda st. (East ward) should be placed opposite the road leading to the spring that supplies the neighborhood with water or nearer the corner. The corner got it. The illuminator on Sarah street will be transferred a few feet north to the angle of the street. The council rose and the report was adopted.

THAT GROUND.

Deputy-reeve Endacott submitted a plan of the ground behind the waterworks which T. T. King proposes to purchase. The aldermen gazed upon the plan for some minutes, and the T. P. will bring in a report at the next meeting.

THE RIGHT MAN.

Ald. Gillespie introduced a by law to appoint a lieutenant of the Orangeville fire brigade. It was read the necessary number of times and Mr. J. W. Aiken was appointed to the office.

The collector will soon be on his rounds again and according to custom the Assessment committee will see that his bonds are satisfactory.

ATHLONE.

WINDING UP.—Farmers have about finished harvesting and sowing and in many places the fall wheat is up and as green as grass.

BINDING BEE.—On Thursday night Frank Conway had a binding bee and the boys did it up in good style. Quite a large amount of grain was bound.

GOING TO BUFFALO.—We hear that Mr. Divine of Achill is about going to Buffalo for the purpose of undergoing an operation for the removal of a cancer from his face. We hope the operation will be successful.

PERSONAL.—Miss Mary Langley of Michigan is visiting at Mr. Barney Hislen's of Athlone..... Messrs. Tom and Frank Swafield were down to the Toronto exhibition last week.....Mr. Wm. Skelly of Keenansville is home safe and sound from a trip to the Northwest. His health is very much improved.

GONE TO HIS REST.—It is with sincere sorrow that we are called upon to perform the sad duty of announcing the death of Mr. John McGinnis, who died on Friday last. He was suffering for a long time with that incurable disease, consumption. The funeral took place to St. James' church cemetery and was largely attended. May his soul rest in peace!

TORONTO GOSSIP.

INTERESTING CITY NEWS BY THE SUN'S FAIR CORRESPONDENT.

Meadows are bare and brown,
Flowers droop their pale heads down,
Summer is dead.

Grey clouds are drifting low,
Leaves now their crimson show,
Autumn is here.

Quickly the bright hues fade
In valley, wood, and glade,
Winter draws near.

Cheerless the bare earth shows
Till fall the wintry snows,
Thus speeds the year.

The exhibition is all over for another year, and was, as usual, a splendid success. How could it be otherwise? The directors arrange and provide everything in the most efficient manner. No expense or trouble is spared, and the result is a yearly exhibit of which Canadians may well be proud. This year the main building showed its customary fine array of various manufactures of the country. Agricultural hall, an unusually rich supply of fruit and vegetables, and the numerous other buildings contained many first-class exhibits. The admission proceeds showed a decrease of $1,400 under last year, making a total of $66,964.85. In the outside shows, there were many novelties this year. Morris' museum of Wonders, performing seals, and the largest horse in the world, together with many other wonderful and interesting sights. The street cars were the favorite means of transit to the grounds, this year, owing no doubt to the transfers. The transfers are making great fun. They are such a novelty as yet in Toronto, and everyone wants to be transferred. I heard one woman telling, with a triumphant air, how she got right from the North Toronto station to the Fair grounds for 5c. That certainly was a cheap ride.

In what dissimilar ways the Fair appears to different people. For instance—the average school boy looks upon it as one of the best possible places for fun, the greater the crowd, and the rushing and scrambling, the better. And then here are so many who hate a crowd, and get pushed and jostled about, and don't see anything worth looking at anyway, and come home regularly tired out, and determined never to go to the exhibition again. But you'll see they'll all be there next year, just the same. Then to the people who really care to know how the country is prospering, and who are competent judges of industrial and agricultural pursuits, the exhibition is a place abounding in interest and pleasure. The immense crowds are certainly an objection to the real sight-seer, for the interest is greatly deducted from an object, when accompanied by a strained neck, and widely extended eyes, and one cannot help thinking how delightful it would be to examine at your leisure, minus the crowd, some of those interesting corners in the main building.

At the foot of York St. Steamboat dock, Captain Anderson has on exhibition an immense whale, which is 65 ft. long, 35 ft around the body, and weighed 75 tons when captured. His lower jaw seats 25 persons, his mouth having been turned into reception a room. Captain Anderson, who is well up in whaling, readily imparts much interesting information and instruction. It is worth while visiting this wondrous monster of the deep.

The last lacrosse match of the season took place on the Rosedale grounds last Saturday. The opposing teams being the Montreslers (champions) and the Torontos. The match reached that exciting point when the games were three to three, and the 'conqueror' was witnessed with intense excitement. The Montreslers won, and went home jubilant However, the Torontos have nothing to be ashamed of, as the two teams were pretty evenly matched. Next year the Torontos will play on their new grounds, still further north. The grand stand on Saturday was a very charming sight, filled as it was with so many pretty excited faces, set off by their gay colored summer gowns.

SHELBURNE.

(Free Press and Economist.)

NOTICE.—The entry sheet sent out to members of the Melanethon agricultural society says: "All entries must be made on or before Wednesday, Oct 1st." It should read "on or before Monday, Oct. 5th, 1891."

AT LAST.—The Bell Telephone Co. have commenced to string the wires on the line. They are putting on a new wire from Toronto for the Owen Sound line. On Wednesday they were working this side of Bolton village. They will reach Shelburne before many days.

GOOD HILL OF POTATOES.—The other day Mr. J. M. Brimmell, town, dug up a hill of potatoes in his garden containing seven large ones that weighed 8 lbs., one of them weighing 1 lb. 9 ozs., besides some small ones. They were of the Elephant variety, all single potatoes and not very scabby. Who can beat this?

THE LIGHTS WENT OUT.—Last Saturday night the stores and stre ts were in darkness for a few minutes. The cause of the trouble was a wire became loose and dropped out of the lamp at the Royal Hotel, thus breaking the circuit. This is the first mishap of the kind. The company is furnishing pretty good light.

ANOTHER DEATH.—Mr. Storey of Amaranth lost another child by diphtheria or black throat last week. The families of Messrs. Miller, Keys and Cavan are bad with the disease. The health officer of Amaranth does not allow any of the afflicted families to leave their own premises, so we are informed. Such can hardly be the case, as we noticed one of the parties mentioned driving into Shelburne last week. Three schools and the churches adjacent to the afflicted families have been closed for some time.

EXCITING RUNAWAY.—Last Monday as Jas. Fawcett, in the employ of J. Witter, was returning from the station with some beer, the breaking of a rotten whiffletree caused the team to run away, they making extra fast time down Main street. The driver hung on to them and succeeded in turning them in at the Russian Stone yard, the wagon slewing around against the weigh scales with terrific force. Both man and horses got off without being much hurt, only one of the horses being cut on the fore leg, and the beer—there were seen a dozen around to see that the barrel had not even sprung a leak.

CARDWELL.

DUGALD GOT THERE.—Mr. Wm. Jackson feels good and smiles blandly since his renowned stallion "Dugald" carried off the second prize at the Toronto exhibition last week. "Dugald" is well known to the farmers of this vicinity, and he narrowly escaped capturing the red ticket.

HORSES SOLD.—A horse-selling mania struck this hamlet several days ago. Mr. Jos. Jackson disposed of a valuable team of bays—one to cattle dealer Trimble and the other to Thos. Patterson of Mono—both animals bringing good prices. Messrs. W. and J. McMaster sold a 6 year-old heavy draught mare to councillor Jos. Reid, who took her to the Northwest. Edward Jenkins also sold a good general purpose horse to some buyers from Scotland.

BRIEFS.—Nearly all our citizens were away at the Toronto exhibition last week, and it is needless to say enjoyed themselves immensely.....Mr. John Fleming still hangs out on lot 11, con. 1, east. John is a stayer.....Mr. Geo. South, an old and respected resident of Mono, is lying at the point of death and no hopes of his recovery are entertained.....Since that "hard on visitors" appeared in THE SUN a few weeks ago they have given Cardwell a wide berth and none of them are seen here any more. Whoever put that in was a real, bad young man.

UNPARALLELED THRESHING.—Since threshing commenced the various proprietors of machines have been doing some tall talking about the merits of their machine and their threshing—breaking records. Here is one that will puzzle most of them. On Tuesday of last week Wm. White, with his "Toronto Advance" threshed 1,100 bushels of wheat and barley on the farm of Mr. George Leighton in the remarkably short time of 9 hours. Does this not beat Mr. Coulter's record? Who ever can come up to or beat this should let the fact be known at once.

A GREAT BEE.—One of the biggest bees ever held around here took place at Messrs. W. and J. McMaster's on Friday. The men worked for all they were worth and got through about six o'clock, shortly after which dancing commenced in dead earnest and was kept up until a late hour Saturday morning. This is about the first dance this season and the boys and girls were in elegant shape and enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content. The music furnished was away above the standard and Professors James McMaster, his son Wesley, Luke Verrie of Adjala and contractor Dodds of Salem covered themselves with glory and carried off the palm. Too much praise cannot be showered on the floor-managers, who are genuine artists in their calling, and Professors A. K. Henry, Mono Centre, J. S. Armstrong, J. R. Bracken and S. Island officiated in this respect. Before dispersing the gallant youths and lovely belles declared this was the best assembly they had ever attended, and one and all hoped it would not be the last time they would enjoy the hospitality of the Messrs. McMaster.

To Dress Well is Economy.

Well-made and perfect fitting garments are not only pleasing to the eye, but they are much more serviceable than cheap and poor fitting garments, and therefore cost less in the long-run.

In purchasing apparel of any kind every man should seek a reliable guarantee of quality; and there is no guarantee better than that of long established success. We are alive to the fact that our prosperity depends on your good will; on your satisfaction with OUR GOODS and METHODS; and if you are not already a customer, we desire to make you one by proving to you that we know how to meet your wants, by pleasing you with our goods and prices, and fully informing you of the respective qualities of the goods we offer, and always giving you the best possible value for your money.

☞ We claim superior workmanship, uniformity and elegance of style which cannot be produced by others.

Local Intelligence.

Monday was hot!

Tuesday was hotter!!

Wednesday was hottest!!!

Sickness is decreasing in town.

How does the weather catch you?

The Orangeville market reopens today.

Saturday was a very busy day in town.

The new fire-hall is just about completed.

The firemen want a new hose reel—and they need it.

Look out for Crozier & Fleming's change of ad. next week.

The sound of the new town bell is becoming more powerful.

Endacott Bros. announce their fall millinery opening in this issue.

A new barber shop will open up for business on west Broadway in a few days.

A. & W. Johnston announce the arrival of their fall stock in another column.

The annual sports in connection with the H. S. convocation take place a week from to-morrow.

Lovely assortment of Dinner, Tea and Toilet Sets—new goods—just arrived at MACADAM'S. 2

If you do not receive THE SUN regularly let us know at once and we will attend to the matter.

Our new fall stock of Boots & Shoes just in, and are great value. Be sure and see them at MACADAM'S 2.

Hughes Bros., the artistic merchant tailors, have something to say to you in another column of this paper.

Dufferin's great exhibition takes place on Thursday and Friday, Oct 8 and 9. Don't forget to give it a call.

If your subscription to THE SUN has expired renew it at once, and those in arrears should pay up immediately.

Very few of our exchanges gave publicity (gratis, of course) to that dire "competition." Most of them "caught on."

Leave your order for exhibition printing at THE SUN'S Job Rooms. We have the best equipped office in the county.

Mr. John McKim advertises in an other column a farm for sale in Caledon and a residence on First avenue, Orangeville.

One of our Cardwell correspondents sent in his budget just as we were going to press and it will appear in our next issue.

Rev. Mr. Tracy, a rising young divine Toronto, will probably succeed Rev. J. L. Gilmour as pastor of the Baptist church.

Mr. B. J. Collins, who ran the Orangeville pottery for many years, is proprietor of a big painting establishment at Gano, Ill.

Rev. T. E. Emery is erecting a double tenement house on the site of Cronox house, which was destroyed three months ago.

Cardwell Reformers are holding a meeting at Mono Mills to-day for the purpose of reorganizing and the transaction of other business.

Hand in your exhibition ad. and let the public know you are doing business at the old stand. Everybody reads Dufferin's favorite local paper.

An unknown man fell in a fit at the C. P. R. station on Friday morning and had to be carried to Mrs. Oliver's restaurant, where he soon revived.

The evening mails from Toronto have been late every evening for some time past, but as the great Industrial is over we hope things will be different in this respect.

The Cosgrove family gave a good entertainment in the town hall on Thursday evening in aid of Maple Leaf lodge No. 57, I. O. O. F. The attendance was fair.

The Dufferins have failed to get up any lacrosse matches with the clubs of neighboring towns, although they offered great inducements. Every team seems to be afraid of the Duffs.

W. Still has the negatives made by Adair, Gale & Co., also the views of farm houses and schools made by Ward. Copies can be had at any time at his Gallery next to the Bank of Hamilton.

Mr. A. Clarke, proprietor of the Erin Advocate, turned out a very creditable prize list for the township of Erin in fair. Bro. Clarke is an artistic printer and deserves the support of his fellow citizens.

At Monday night's meeting of the town council a by law was passed appointing Mr. J. W. Aiken lieutenant of the Orangeville fire brigade. A better appointment could not have been made, and Jack will be sure to give good account of himself.

NOT IN IT.—The Markham paper announce the rate of assessment of that ambitious town for this year at the modest figure of 32 mills on the dollar. We always thought our rate of 29 mills was something terrific, but when Markham enters the high tax competition we must confess we're not in it.

HER 25TH WEDDING NOW.—A very happy event took place at Delta on Wednesday of last week, when Mr. Charles Bling of this town was married to Miss Martha, youngest daughter of the late Ezra Brown of Owen Sound. The happy couple are spending their honeymoon at Brockville, Kingston and Toronto. THE SUN sends its congratulations.

STREET MUSIC.—The Citizens' band discoursed excellent music on Broadway both Saturday and Tuesday evenings, and lovers of music would incline to the belief that "summer could handle such difficult selections. As we announced last week the band intend to make up for lost time and citizens will get plenty more but for the season closes.

MISS BEATTIE RESIGNS.—A meeting of the public school trustees took place in Mr. J. S. Leighton's store on Tuesday morning to consider the position of Miss Beattie, who has been offered a larger salary elsewhere. The board accepted the resignation and Miss Beattie will leave at once. Her successor has not yet been chosen, but the trustees will hold a special meeting next week to consider applications.

HAVE THAT.—Orangeville has got a new town bell. It weighs half a ton, and is beautifully engraved with the names of the town council. It will likely make a pretty loud noise.—Shelburne Free Press. Our northern contemporary is away out about the weight of the bell. It weighs about a ton, and after viewing it some time we came to the conclusion there was no "beautifully engraved" names thereon. They were cast when the bell was made.

SOME HANDSOME PHOTOGRAPHS.—Among the exhibits in photography that of Mr. William Still of Orangeville is worthy of especial attention. The life-like reproduction of faces arrests the attention of casual spectators, and the graceful pose of his figures receive many favorable comments. Mr Still also shows several excellent landscapes. —Globe, Sept. 10.

When we mention that W. Still carried off two prizes for his Photograps at Toronto it is enough said.

FAREWELL SERMON.—Rev. J. L. Gilmour, the esteemed pastor of the Baptist church, who is about removing from Orangeville, will preach his farewell sermon on Sabbath next. The rev. gentleman will leave on Monday morning for Montreal, where he will take passage for the Old Country. It is Mr. Gilmour's intention to spend three or four years in study at Edinburg. His many friends regret his leaving Orangeville, but hope he will meet with even more success than during his comparatively brief stay in town.

OF INTEREST TO LANDLORDS.—Every inn-keeper, boarding-house keeper, and lodging-house keeper, under section 2 of chapter 154 of the Revised Statutes of Ontario has a lien on the baggage and property of his guest, boarder or lodger for the value of food or accommodation furnished, and in case the same remains unpaid for three months, has the right to sell the baggage and property on giving one week's notice in a newspaper published in the place, of the name of the guest, boarder or lodger, amount of his indebtedness, a description of the baggage or other property, the time and place of sale, and the name of the auctioneer.

AN OLD RESIDENT GONE.—About 9 o'clock on Monday evening an old resident of Mono in the person of Mr. George South passed away at the ripe age of 71 years. Mr. South had been indisposed for some time previous to the sad visitation, and, therefore, death was not altogether unexpected. Deceased resided in Mono for many years and was highly respected by everybody who was favored with his acquaintance. Yesterday the funeral took place from his late residence, lot 12, centre road, to the Forest Lawn cemetery, and was numerously attended. The bereaved family have the heart felt sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

RIGHT YOU ARE.—The Tottenham Sentinel of last week has the following to say about deadheads, and we are with them every time: "A practice, honored by age if on no other account, should cease. We refer to asking journalists to publish free notices of coming church socials, picnics etc., especially when posters are not got out. The publisher looks to his advertising columns as the principal means of supplying bread and butter, and to ask him to give this away for nothing is not less unfair than to ask a farmer to give away a bag of flour. The reason that so many otherwise fair minded people do this thing is simply because they don't think over it, and it is popularly understood that it doesn't cost anything to run a newspaper.

PRESENTATION.—On Tuesday evening Miss Kate Sutherland, daughter of Gov. Sutherland, was presented with a handsome diamond ring and an address by St. Andrew's Y. P. A. and Sunday school, previous to her departure for Toronto where she intends to study for a nurse in the general hospital. The address was read by Miss Jennie Lamont and Miss Ruth Aikin made the presentation. Miss Sutherland has been teaching a class in the Sabbath school for some time and has been connected with the Young People's Association for a number of years, consequently her associates could not let her depart without expressing their appreciation of the many services the young lady has rendered those bodies. Miss Sutherland made a very touching reply and regretted leaving her many friends. We join with them in wishing the young lady every success in her chosen profession.

GOT THREE MONTHS.—Ward, the photographer, who was committed for trial last week, has received his sentence, if not the due reward of his deeds. He elected to be tried by the judge and the trial came off on Friday last in Owen Sound. The sentence passed on him was three months in Owen Sound gaol, while his paramour goes free. As she was witness in the case, her fare will be paid to Markham, but as she will probably stay in Owen Sound, she can utilize the fare, to commence housekeeping again, when her darling's sentence expires. The exceeding lightness of sentence is a matter of much comment. If a man can leave his family in a destitute condition, elope with another woman and get off with only three months incarceration in comfortable quarters, it is questionable whether the law in that case is any "terror to evil doers". A sentence of three years, with hard labor, would be more likely to have a deterrent influence on others, who might be so disposed. —Dundalk Herald.

DEATH OF MRS. MCQUARRIE.—The remains of Mrs. McQuarrie (Bessie McMillan) accompanied by her husband and by Messrs John Carmichael, Arch. Currie, and Angus McMurchy, Mrs. Isaac Green, and Mrs. Brown, of Nottawa, arrived at the station here this morning, where they were met by numerous friends and relatives and taken to the residence of Mr. John Carmichael to await interment. Mrs. McQuarrie, who had not been in her usual health for some time back, left her home in Brockville last Wednesday for a visit to friends in Toronto and here. While at Mr. Archibald McMurchy's, Toronto, she was taken ill, and, although attended by two of the most eminent physicians in the city, yesterday passed quietly away. Mrs. McQuarrie was well known and liked by all our citizens, and her sudden death has cast a gloom over our community.—Hillsburg Beaver. The young lady referred to in the above and her husband, Mr. James McQuarrie, were well known in Orangeville, he having been employed in Gilchrist & Kent's store here for a number of years.

FIREMAN LANG'S DEATH.

The Coroner's Jury Returns a Sensible Verdict.

Coroner Johnson held an inquest at Fergus on Monday evening of last week to inquire into the cause of Charles Lang's death, a report of which appeared in THE SUN of last week. A jury was empanelled and several witnesses were examined, after which the following verdict was brought in:—

"That the said Charles Lang, of whose body we have had the view, came to his death by being accidentally killed by the fore wheels of the tender of the engine falling upon his body when the engine, tender and cow were thrown off the Grand Trunk railway track in the village of Fergus on the morning of the 12th September, 1891, by a cow falling on the railway crossing, and being caught and carried along the track by the engine till the engine and cars left the track and upset, the tender falling on the deceased Charles Lang, and would recommend that the Grand Trunk and all railways post notices stating the law which prohibits cattle running at large near railway tracks, and impose a penalty for the same. And further recommend that instructions be given employees to be more careful in keeping cattle away from railway tracks and crossings. And further recommend that a subway be placed at the railway crossing on St. George street in the village of Fergus as the present crossing is very dangerous."

THE VILLAGE BY-LAW.

It would appear from the foregoing that there is a by-law in force in the village of Fergus permitting cows to run at large during certain months in the year. No reference is made to railways in the by-law and consequently cows are allowed to run on the track, endangering the life of the employees and the travelling public.

The statutes strictly forbids cattle running at large in the vicinity of railway tracks or crossings, the clause bearing on this subject being as follows:—

"No horses, sheep, swine or other cattle shall be permitted to be at large upon any highway within a half mile of the intersection of such highway with any railway on grade, unless the cattle are in charge of some person or persons to prevent their loitering or stopping on such highway at such intersection."

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Morgan of Regina, N. W. T., is a guest at Mayor Walsh's.

Miss Annie Mowry of Toronto is spending a few weeks holidays at home.

Mrs. B. Sailinger of New York is visiting her mother, Mrs. McKenney, west Broadway.

Miss Maggie Foley left Friday for a visit to friends at Detroit, Mackinaw and other places.

Mr. James C. Henry, son of Dr. Henry, left on Thursday for Toronto, where he will attend the military school.

Mrs. John Canaan, Miss Clara Canaan and Mr. Frank Canaan of Gahon, O., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mowry.

Miss Kate Sutherland, eldest daughter of Gov. Sutherland, left on Tuesday morning for the Toronto general hospital, where she will take a three years course as nurse.

CONNOR.

FARM RENTED.—Mr. Geo. Howard has rented one of Mr. Daniel Ward's farms on the 1st line, Adjala.

POTATOES.—Some of the farmers have commenced digging their potatoes. We have'n't heard any of them speak about "rot," and the crop seems to be fairly good.

RAPIDLY INCREASING.—Our population is rapidly increasing, and to mention the almost innumerable "rosebuds" would occupy too much space, but we really believe had the census not been taken for another year the present government would have had a better chance of being sustained. What do you think?

PERSONAL.—Miss Bertie McCoy, accompanied by her little sister Mary, is visiting friends at Owen Sound, Markdale and Walter's Falls.....Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Mercer of Orangeville, paid friends in this vicinity a visit last week.....Mrs. Charles Lee and son arrived home from the Northwest on Saturday last and their health was greatly benefited by the trip. They speak very highly of the country.

MORE CANNIBALISM.—Joe Reid's name has appeared in THE SUN many times during the past three years, but it was not associated with any honorable or manly act. Joe has gained notoriety by being mixed up in drunken brawls, street fights, etc., and although he has committed many offences he has always been lucky enough to escape imprisonment in the "castle." He has received many warnings from P. M. Pattullo, but the cadi might have addressed Joe in Greek for all the good his advice has done. Joe's latest break is the most serious offence he has been guilty of for some time, and if the case is not settled before to morrow morning Joe will probably be safely housed for many months. Between 7 and 8 o'clock last Wednesday night Joe and a boister ous chum were making things lively in Mrs. Oliver's restaurant at the C. P. R. station, when a young man named Alfred Wise, employed at Donner's grocery store, went in to receive an order for some groceries. Just about this time Joe was in excellent fighting humor, and without the least provocation assaulted young Wise in a most brutal manner. After flooring the unoffending clerk the brute got Wise's thumb in his mouth and mauled away, lacerating it in a horrible manner. The thumb nail could not be found and it is supposed Reid appeased his appetite with it. As soon as Joe saw that his brutal work was well done he lit out and could not be found. Young Wise laid an information against Reid and a warrant was placed in Constable Hubbard's hands for execution. The cop drove over to Reid's residence in Caledon, but the cannibal was not at home, and after scouring the country for several hours the constable found Reid and arrested him at 4 o'clock Thursday morning. All day Thursday the peeler and the culprit walked around town hunting up boodsmen, and towards evening a Caledon farmer named Reynolds went Joe's bail and he was liberated. The case is called for to morrow and the result will be awaited with interest.

A street showman and the Pride of the Valley Medicine man struck town one day last week and opened out on one of the main corners in the place. The "freak" had just nicely got to work making a pin cushion of himself swallowing swords, etc, when a boy in the crowd became so sickened at the sight that he fainted away and had to be carried home. The collapse of the boy had such a dispiriting effect upon the "freak" and the medicine man that they at once put up the shutters as it were, and took the first train out of town the next morning. A vote of thanks is due that boy from the people of the town.—Mt. Forest Rep.

The foundry was not sold on Wednesday; it was not expected that it would be. There were no outside buyers and those who did bid on it were local men who knew nothing about a foundry and would only want it if it could be got for a song. There is no doubt of the fact that the business would be a snap for a practical man with money enough to run it, but while it is easy enough to find men capital is extremely shy in this protected to death county. The highest bid was $13,500, although Mr. Smith worked hard for over half an hour to coax the bidders to do something reasonable. As the price fixed by the court was higher "no sale" was declared.—Brampton Banner. If Canada had no protective policy there would have been no foundry to sell. See?

"By Jove, what a lovely face!" said the other.

The sleeper roused himself now, and the Times fell rustling to the ground, while half dreaming still, he opened his cloudy eyes, and saw flashing by him the vision of a face. Was it a dream or a reality? Had his half awakened brain shaped a form, round which so many thoughts had hovered, or did she really stand there in the flesh upon that bridge?

"Where are we?" he asked. "Is this a station?"

"A station!" said the other. "No. What's the matter, man? The sight of a pretty face seems to have frightened you out of your wits."

"A face!" said he. "Am I mad?—am I dreaming? Chadwick, I must get out at the next station. I must put myself in communication with the police."

"Put yourself in communication with a straight waistcoat, you mean," observed his companion. "Are you going to give me in charge for letting you snore through the loveliest scenery on earth?"

"Don't jest," said the young man; "this is serious. What is the next station?"

"How can I tell?" returned his friend. "I only know we don't stop at it. We don't stop anywhere for miles to come; the express never stops at these little places!"

As they talked they dashed by a station, and neither read the name.

"There, my dear fellow," said Chadwick, bursting into a laugh, "that was clever of us! Now, if you had not bribed the guard to leave us this carriage to ourselves, we might run to some obliging traveller for information; as it is, I believe your thirst for knowledge will not be gratified till you get to Killarney."

"Can we find out there?" asked the other. "Can you describe the place? I did not see it. I saw nothing but her."

"Describe the place?" said Chadwick. "Yes, two lanterns and a shanty with a mountain behind like a cocked hat."

"And wasn't there a bridge?" said the other.

"The deuce a bit," said Chadwick. "There was a duck-pond, but no bridge."

"Chadwick, don't bully!" cried his friend. "There was a bridge!"

"Beg pardon, old fellow," said Chadwick. "If you won't stand chaff, I stop. The duck pond was at the station; the bridge was—I don't know where."

"And what besides?" was the next enquiry. "Was there no road no house no salient points in the scenery which we can describe?"

"Ah, Damerel, you are caught, are you?" said Chadwick. "Your mind is running on that bewitching face. But suppose I want to find out who she is for myself? Is that case hadn't I better keep the 'salient points' of the scenery for my own benefit? You should have kept your eyes open, and looked at them for yourself."

"Chadwick, I am in no mood for jesting," replied Vivian Damerel, gravely. "Read that, and then tell me if this matter is serious."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Notable Facts.—Intense heat augments the annoyances of skin disease, and encourages the development of febrile disorders, therefore they should, as they may, be removed by these detergent and purifying preparations. In stomach complaints, liver affections, pains and spasms of the bowels, Holloway's Ointment well rubbed over the affected part immediately gives the greatest ease, prevents congestion and inflammation, checks the threatening diarrhœa and averts incipient cholera. The poorer inhabitants of large cities will find these remedies to be their best friend when any pestilence rages, or when from unknown causes, eruptions boils, abscesses, or ulcerations betoken the presence of taints or impurities within the system, and call for instant and effective curative medicines.

TEN YEARS WOOD.—The following taken from an exchange, will interest all first class judges of the article named. "In July, 1881, the steamer, City of Winnipeg, with several barrels of prime whiskey in her hold, was sunk in Lake Superior, just opposite Duluth. Capt Lloyd is now raising the vessel, and he has invited a party of bosom friends to be on hand when she reaches the surface, in order to sample the whiskey that has been in cold storage at the bottom of Lake Superior for ten years. No doubt Capt. Llyod could scare up any number of bosom friends all over the Dominion

It is said that the fumes of kerosene, when the lamp is turned down, are liable to cause diphtheria. The New York Board of Health a few years ago decided that to this more than any other cause the prevalence of this disease was to be attributed. A turned down kerosene lamp is a magazine of deadly gas that the healthiest lungs cannot be exposed to with safety.

THAT FINE "ARCHITILLERY."

A Southern Darkey Graphically Entertained a Toronto Guest.

Toronto Telegram.

During Mr. W. G. Murdoch's recent visit to Washington he was inquiring for a carriage to see the various places of interest in the U. S. capital.

"Boss, war d'yo want to go?" asked a darkey of polite manner and of the genuine "old Virginny" type.

Being employed to drive the Toronto barrister about the city, he ventured the information that he 'had bin in slabery thirty eight years, bin all tro' de wah," and knew all about it.

"Wha do you cum from?" he asked Mr Murdoch.

"I am from Toronto, Canada," was the reply.

"You is? Did you ebber heah ob a cullud niggah upodar named Adam Moss? He was de man wot flew de town down Souf and got into trubble wid a boss car conductah. He raised —— down dar. De cullud people was all aroused about him."

"Yes, I know Adam Morse. I am the lawyer who happened to defend him.

"For God's sake!" cried the astonished darkey, taking off his coat and looking upon the Toronto man with feelings of awe staring from his wide open eyes.

"I wish we had more men like you. De darkies down heah haven't have half a chance."

The man was so much pleased to meet Mr. Murdoch tha the insisted upon his being a guest for two evenings. He drove him all about the city and its beautiful suburbs interlarding his information about different places and buildings, with quaint remarks in pure Southern negro dialect not to be expressed in cold type.

When they visited the pension building, the largest brick building in the world, noted for its magnificent architecture, Mr. Murdoch expressed his surprise and admiration in strong language.

"Yes, sah," said the hospitable driver, "it am de finest piece of architillery in de world."

Timely Wisdom.

Great and timely wisdom is shown by keeping Dr. Fowles's Extract of Wild Strawberry on hand. It has no equal for cholera, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, cramps, and all summer complaints or looseness of the bowels.

THEY WENT DIFFERENT ROADS.

It has been the custom of Barnum & Bailey for many years to mail circulars signed by Mr. Barnum to the clergymen and ministers of any town the greatest show on earth was coming to, calling the attention of these reverend gentlemen to the moral nature of the exhibition and discounting any objection that existed to a frivilous circus. Shortly after Mr. Barnum's death one of these circulars was received by the minister of the First Congregational church of Hartford, Conn., addressed to the Rev. Dennis Hawes. Now it happened the Rev. Mr Hawes' has been dead for ten years. The gentleman who received it glanced at the audience and then at the signature: "They do not seem to have met!" he said.

Dr Morse's Indian Root Pills remove all obstructions, purify the blood, and give to the skin that beautiful clear and healthful look so greatly admired in a beautiful and healthy woman. At certain periods these Pills are an indispensible companion. From one to four should be taken each day, until relief is obtained. A few doses occasionally will keep the system so healthy, and the blood so pure, that disease cannot enter the body. Dr Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all medicine dealers.

A GAMBLER A VICTIM.

John Daly, the king of New York gamblers, the man who has won more bets over a faro table than any other keeper of a gambling house in that city, the man who has been able to deal faro when all other faro banks have been compelled to close, the man known far and wide a "high roller," has been "done."

"Done," is an expressive sporting term. Used in this connection it means that John Daly is poorer to day by many thousands than he was ten days ago. "Robbed" is the word that is spoken by those who talk of the matter who are not included in the class known as "sporting men."

From the safe in Daly's gambling palace, was taken last Friday night, a sum of money estimated at from $60,000 to $100,000. It was in bills—in cold, hard cash. The man who is alleged to have taken the money was William S. Hollingsworth, Daly's manager, a man living a double life. Church member and seeming respectable citizen twelve hours in the day, custodian of the money of gamblers, and interested in a resort where thousands of dollars have changed hands, the other twelve. Hollingsworth claims that he is rightly entitled to the money, and dares Daly to go into court. Daly is helpless in the matter, as the courts will not consider the loss of gambling boodle, and can do nothing but mourn his loss.

What Say They?

In popularity increasing. In reliability the standard. In merit the first. In fact, the best remedy for all summer complaints, diarrhœa, dysentery, cramps, colic, cholera infantum, etc., is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. All medicine dealers sell it.

The St. Clair tunnel under the river between Sarnia and Port Huron was opened on Saturday with great eclat and amid general rejoicing on both sides of the line. The proceedings were presided over by Sir Henry Tyler, president of the Grand Trunk Railway, of which system the new tunnel forms a part.

W. A. Miller, late of Stratford, was killed yesterday while braking on the Montana Central Railroad.

Just how an alterative medicine cleanses the system is an open question; but that Ayer's Sarsaparilla does produce a radical change in the blood is well attested on all sides. It is everywhere considered the best remedy for blood disorders.

People Wonder

WHEN they find how rapidly health is restored by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The reason is that this preparation contains only the purest and most powerful alteratives and tonics. To the sick, it is a priceless boon; to the healthy it proves a veritable elixir of life.

MRS. JOS. LAKE, Brookway Centre, Mich., writes: "Liver complaints and indigestion made my life a burden and caused me great suffering my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an in my condition, my appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life, and I cannot thank you too much."

"We, the undersigned, citizens of Brookway Centre, Mich., hereby certify that the above statement, made by Mrs. Lake, is true in every particular and entitled to full credence."—O. P. Chamberlain, G. W. Waring, C. A. Wells, Druggist.

"My brother, in England, was, for a long time, unable to attend to his occupation, by reason of sores on his foot. I sent him Ayer's Almanac and the testimonials it contained induced him to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using it a little while, he was cured, and is now a well man, working in a sugar mill at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia."—A. Attswell, Sharbot Lake, Ontario.

Could Scarcely See.

Mrs John Martin, of Montague Bridge, P. E. I., writes:—"I was troubled last summer with very bad headaches and constipation and sometimes could scarcely see. One bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters made a complete cure of my case, and I wish you every success.

An Unfortunate Explorer.

Poor Mrs. French Sheldon has paid dearly for her courageous attempt to penetrate into mysterious Africa. She arrived on Saturday afternoon at Charing Cross a veritable shadow of her buoyant, cheerful self. The same ghastly pallor which made Mr. Stanley look so prematurely old the first few weeks after his return from his last expedition has spread over her face, and as she stepped out of the carriage it seemed as if she could only walk at all by leaning on her tall alpenstock. Jack, the collie, who has accompanied his mistress on her adventurous journey, and about whose well-being before she set out, Mrs. French Sheldon was far more concerned than about her own, has come back in excellent condition, and appeared extremely pleased with himself and with all the world as he received the congratulations of the little friendly crowd that had assembled on the platform. But though broken in health, "the lady Stanley" is by no means dissatisfied with the results of her enterprise, which she hopes to publish as soon as her health is restored.—Pall Mall Gazette.

We are all Gleaners.

Elihu Burritt learned many things while toiling in a blacksmith's shop. Abercrombie, the world renowned philosopher, was a physician in Scotland, and he got his philosophy, or the chief part of it, while, as a physician, he was waiting for the door of the sickroom to open. Yet how many there are in this day who say they are so busy they have no time for mental or spiritual improvement; the great duties of life cross the field like strong reapers and carry off all the hours and there is only here and there a fragment left that is not worth gleaning. Ah, my friends, you could go into the busiest day and busiest week of your life and find golden opportunities, which gathered might at last make a whole sheaf for the Lord's garner. It is the stray opportunities and the stray privileges which taken up and bound together and beaten out, will at last fill you with much joy.—Dr. Talmage.

Women in the Ministry.

In just a decade after its refusal to admit a woman, it Meadville, Pa., theological school Unitarians opened its doors to women students. Since that time it has received about twenty. About one-third of these have graduated, while others have left to become the wives of ministers. Among the graduates every woman stood above the average. An certainly incident in the domestic life of one of these women pastors may indicate a pleasant city of growth in the woman minister likely to startle conservative minds. A little boy and girl, the children of a mother whose work as a minister evidently constituted no barrier to them, were discussing plans for their own future. "I shall help mamma preach," said the little girl. "I shall preach, too," stoutly said the small brother. His sister looking thoughtfully and doubtfully at him, said slowly, "Yes, means to preach sometimes."

The Great Question.

The influence of modern scientific investigation marks the present time; a time when man is prone to cast off faith in God. But to deny the existence of an after life is like building an endless ladder and then setting men to climb it. There is something more eternal than space. It is no more difficult to believe mind eternal than to believe matter so. We are accustomed to see a preparation end in some results. Can the immense preparation, evinced in the evolution of the world, have no other aim than the production and absolute death of man? Even Herbert Spencer acknowledges the existence of an infinite and eternal energy, from which all things proceed. Prof. Grey says, "if we find anywhere an order, we must find back of that an orderer. The things that are seen are temporal, and the things that are unseen are eternal."—Rev. V. E. Parsons, Washington, D. C.

King James' Bible.

The revision of the Bible now in use by Protestant churches was brought out by King James' authority in 1611. Fifty-four learned men were employed to accomplish the work of revising it. From death or other causes seven of them failed to enter upon it. The remaining forty-seven were ranged under six divisions, and had different portions of the Bible assigned to them divisions. They commenced their task in 1607. After some three or four years of diligent labor the whole was completed. This version was generally adopted, and the other translations fell into disuse.

From Scriptural Sources.

In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.—(Gen. iii. 19.

A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast.—(Prov. xii. 10.

Owe no man anything, but to love one another."—(Rom. xiii. 8.

International Affair.

Smart Youth (to hand-organ man)—Garibaldi, how's business this morning? Don't you need a cashier?

Hand-Organ Man (grinding away)—No. One monka 'nuff.

Regina Ripples.

"I took six bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters for liver complaint, headache and dull stupid feeling, but now I am entirely well and healthy, having also a good appetite which I did not have previously."—Mrs. T. Davis, Regina, N.W.T.

THE BEST FAMILY PILL IN USE

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

Keep the Worlds in good order.

Hanover, Ont., January 19, 1891.

W. H. Comstock, Brockville, Ont.

Dear Sir,—For "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best laxatives; they do cleanse the system most thoroughly and leave no bad effects to follow their use; full and sufficient for every ill to which they are adapted. A large portion of foreign substances adhere to the intestines, which in the north, and what is thought to be, only a slight deformity is perceptible in the constipated, but both pain and the obstruction arising, the use of "Morse's Pills" prevents greater, until at last, what could have been remedied with little trouble, in the beginning, will never yield to remedy except by the knife. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, inappreciably at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify their system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours faithfully,

H. F. ATWELL.

Dear Sir,—For many years I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills." Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an actual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling outfit complete without a box of Morse's Pills.

The Restof Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are double salt for a period of even one week they will yield from ½ to 1½ per cent. less milk, and that of an inferior quality. Such milk will, on an average, turn sour in twenty four hours instead of being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analysed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. What's the matter, man? The sight of a pretty face seems to have frightened you out of your wits."

"A face!" said he. "Am I mad? —no I dreaming? Chadwick, I must get out at the next station. I must put myself in communication with the police."

"Put yourself in communication with a straight waistcoat, you mean," observed his companion. "Are you going to give me in charge for letting you snore through the loveliest scenery on earth?"

"Don't jest," said the young man; "this is serious. What is the next station?"

"How can I tell?" returned his friend, "I only know we don't stop at it. We don't stop anywhere for miles to come; the express never stops at these little places!"

As they talked they dashed by a station, and neither read the name.

"There, my dear fellow," said Chadwick, bursting into a laugh, "that was clever of us! Now, if you had not bribed the guard to leave us this carriage to ourselves, we might cure to some obliging traveller for information; as it is, I believe your thirst for knowledge will not be gratified till you get to Killarney."

"Can we find out there?" asked the other. "Can you describe the place? I did not see it. I saw nothing but her."

"Describe the place?" said Chadwick. "Yes, two lanterns and a shanty with a mountain behind like a cocked hat."

"And wasn't there a bridge?" said the other.

"The dence a bit," said Chadwick. "There was a duck-pond, but no bridge."

"Chadwick, don't bully!" cried his friend. "There was a bridge!"

"Beg pardon, old fellow," said Chadwick. "If you won't stand chaff, I stop. The duck pond was at the station; the bridge was—I don't know where."

"And what besides?" was the next enquiry. "Was there no road, no house no salient points in the scenery which we can describe?"

"Ah, Damerel, you are caught, are you?" said Chadwick. "Your mind is running on that bewitching face. But suppose I want to find out who she is for myself? In that case hadn't I better keep the 'salient points' of the scenery for my own benefit? You should have kept your eyes open, and looked at them for yourself."

"Chadwick, I am in no mood for jesting," replied Vivian Damerel, gravely. "Read that, and then tell me if this matter is serious."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Notable Facts.—Intense heat augments the annoyances of skin disease, and encourages the development of febrile disorders, therefore they should, as they may, be removed by these detergent and purifying preparations. In stomach or plants, liver affections, pins and spasms of the bowels, Holloway's Ointment well rubbed over the affected part immediately gives the greatest ease, prevents congestion and inflammation, checks the threatening diarrhœa and averts incipient cholera. The poorer inhabitants of large cities will find these remedies to be their best friend when any pestilence rages, or when from unknown causes eruptions boils, abscesses, or ulcerations betoken the presence of taints or impurities within the system, and all for instant and effective curative medicines.

TEN YEARS WORTH.—The following taken from an exchange, will interest all first class judges of the article named: "In July, 1881, the steamer, City of Winnipeg, with several barrels of prime whiskey in her hold, was sunk in Lake Superior, just opposite Duluth. Capt Lloyd is now raising the vessel, and he has invited a party of bosom friends to be on hand when she reaches the surface, in order to sample the whiskey that has been in cold storage at the bottom of Lake Superior for ten years. No doubt Capt. Llyod could scare up any number of "bosom friends" all over the Dominion

"Wha de you cum from?" he asked Mr Murdoch.

"I am from Toronto, Canada," was the reply.

"You is? Did you ever heah ob a cullud niggah preacher named Adam Mom? He was de man wot flox de town down Sonf and gets into trubbis wid a hoss car conductah. He raised ——down dar. De cullud people was all aroused about him."

"Yes, I know Adam Morse. I am the lawyer who happened to defend him.

"For God's sake!" cried the astonished darkey, taking off his coat and looking upon the Toronto man with feelings of awe staring from his wide open eyes.

'I wish we had more men like you. De darkies down heah haven't have half a chance.'

The man was so much pleased to meet Mr. Murdoch tha he insisted upon his being a guest for two evenings. He drove him all about the city and its beautiful suburbs interlarding his information about different places and buildings, with quaint remarks in pure Southern negro dialect not to be expressed in cold type.

When they visited the pension building, the largest brick building in the world, noted for its magnificent architecture, Mr. Murdoch expressed his surprise and admiration in strong language.

"Yes, sah," said the hospitable driver, "it am de finest piece of architillery in de world."

Timely Wisdom.

Great and timely wisdom is shown by keeping Dr. Fowles's Extract of Wild Strawberry on hand. It has no equal for cholera, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, cramps, and all summer complaints or looseness of the bowels.

THEY WENT DIFFERENT ROADS.

It has been the custom of Barnum & Bailey for many years to mail circulars signed by Mr. Barnum to the clergymen and ministers of any town the greatest show on earth was coming to, calling the attention of these reverend gentlemen to the moral nature of the exhibition and discounting any objection that existed to a frivious circus. Shortly after Mr. Barnum's death one of these circulars was received by the minister of the First Congregational church of Hartford, Conn., addressed to the Rev. Dennis Hawes. Now it happened the Rev. Mr. Hawes has been dead for ten years. The gentleman who received it glanced at the audience and then at the signature: "They do not seem to have met!" he said.

Dr Morse's Indian Root Pills remove all obstructions, purify the blood, and give to the skin that beautiful clear and healthful look so greatly admired in a beautiful and healthy woman. At certain periods these Pills are an indispensible companion. From one to four should be taken each day, until relief is obtained. A few doses occasionally will keep the system so healthy, and the blood so pure, that disease cannot enter the body. Dr Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all medicine dealers.

A GAMBLER A VICTIM.

John Daly, the king of New York gamblers, the man who has won more bets over a faro table than any other keeper of a gambling house in that city, the man who has been able to deal faro when all other faro banks have been compelled to close, the man known far and wide as "high roller," has been "done."

"Done," is an expressive sporting term. Used in this connection it means that John Daly is poorer to day by many thousands than he was ten days ago. "Robbed" is the word that is spoken by those who talk of the matter who are not included in the class known as "sporting men."

From the safe in Daly's gambling palace, was taken last Friday night, a sum of money estimated at from $60,000 to $100,000. It was in bills—in cold, hard cash. The man who is alleged to have taken the money was William S. Hollingsworth, Daly's manager, a man living a double life. Church member and seeming respectable citizen twelve hours in the day, custodian of the money of gamblers, and interested in a resort where thousands of dollars have changed hands, the other twelve. Hollingsworth claims that he is rightly entitled to the money, and dares Daly to go into court. Daly is helpless in the matter, as the courts will not consider the loss of gambling boodle, and can do nothing but mourn his loss.

What Say They?

In popularity increasing. In reliability the standard. In merit the first. In fact, the best remedy for all summer complaints, diarrhœa, dysentery, cramps, colic, cholera infantum, etc., is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. All medicine dealers sell it.

The St. Clair tunnel under the river between Sarnia and Port Huron was opened on Saturday with great eclat and amid general rejoicing on both sides of the line. The proceedings were presided over by Sir Henry Tyler, president of the Grand Trunk Railway, of which system the new tunnel forms a part.

W. A. Miller, late of Stratford, was killed yesterday while braking on the Montana Central Railroad.

Just how an alterative medicine cleanses the system is an open question; but that Ayer's Sarsaparilla does produce a radical change in the blood is well attested on all sides. It is everywhere considered the best remedy for blood disorders.

RICHARD K. FOX, Editor & Proprietor, Franklin Square, New York.

By that time I was almost in my grave. I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could do so in my condition, my appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after several months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life, and I cannot thank you too much."

Improvement

"We, the undersigned, citizens of Brockway Centre, Mich., hereby certify that the above statement, made by Mrs. Lake, is true in every particular and entitled to full credence."—O. P. Chamberlain, G. W. Waring, G. A. Wells, Druggist.

"My brother, in England, was, for a long time, unable to attend to his occupation, by reason of sores on his foot. I sent him Ayer's Almanac and the testimonials it contained induced him to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using it a little while, he was cured, and is now a well man, working in a sugar mill at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia."—A. Attswell, Sharbot Lake, Ontario.

Could Scarcely See.

Mrs John Martin, of Montague Bridge, P. E. I., writes:—"I was troubled last summer with very bad headaches and constipation and sometimes could scarcely see. One bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters made a complete cure of my case, and I wish you every success.

An Unfortunate Explorer.

Poor Mrs. French Sheldon has paid dearly for her courageous attempt to penetrate into mysterious Africa. She arrived on Saturday afternoon at Charing Cross a veritable shadow of her buoyant, cheerful self. The same ghastly pallor which made Mr. Stanley look so prematurely old the first few weeks after his return from his last expedition has spread over her face, and as she stepped out of the carriage it seemed as if she could only walk at all by leaning on her tall alpenstock. Jack, the collie, who has accompanied his mistress on her adventurous journey, and about whose well-being, before she set out, Mrs. French Sheldon was far more concerned than about her own, has come back in excellent condition, and appeared extremely pleased with himself and with all the world as he received the congratulations of the little friendly crowd that had assembled on the platform. But though broken in health, "the lady Stanley" is by no means dissatisfied with the results of her enterprise, which she hopes to publish as soon as her health is restored.—Pall Mall Gazette.

We are all Gleaners.

Elihu Burritt learned many things while toiling in a blacksmith's shop. Abercrombie, the world renowned philosopher, was a physician in Scotland, and he got his philosophy, or the chief part of it, while, as a physician, he was waiting for the door of the sickroom to open. Yet how many there are in this day who say they are so busy they have no time for mental or spiritual improvement; the great duties of life cross the field like strong tempers and carry off all the hours and there is only here and there a fragment left that is not worth gleaning. Ah, my friends, you could go into the busiest day and busiest week of your life and find golden opportunities, which gathered might at last make a whole sheaf for the Lord's garner. It is the stray opportunities and the stray privileges which taken up and bound together and beaten out, will at last fill you with much joy.—Dr. Talmage.

Women in the Ministry.

In just a decade after its refusal to admit a woman, Meadville, Pa., theological school Unitarian opened its doors to women students. Since that time it has received about twenty. About one-third of these have graduated, while others have left to become the wives of ministers. Among the graduates every woman stood above the average. An amusing incident in the domestic life of one of these women pastors may indicate a possibility of growth in the woman ministry likely to startle conservative minds. A little boy and girl, the children of a mother whose work as a minister evidently contained no surprises for them, were discussing plans for their own future. "I shall help mamma preach," said the little girl. "I shall preach, too," stoutly said the small brother. His sister, looking thoughtfully and doubtfully at him, said slowly, "Yes, mama do preach sometimes."

The Great Question.

The influence of modern scientific investigation marks the present time; a time when man is prone to cast off faith in God. But to deny the existence of another life is like building an endless ladder and then setting men to climb it. There is something more eternal than space. It is no more difficult to believe mind eternal than to believe matter so. We are accustomed to see a preparation end in some results. Can the immense preparation, evinced in the evolution of the world, have no other aim than the production and absolute death of man? Even Herbert Spencer acknowledges the existence of an infinite and eternal energy, from which all things proceed. Prof. Grey says, "if we find anywhere an order, we must find back of that an orderer. The things that are seen are temporal, and the things that are unseen are eternal."—Rev. V. E. Parsons, Washington, D. C.

King James' Bible.

The revision of the Bible now in use by Protestant churches was brought out by King James' authority in 1611. Fifty-four learned men were employed to accomplish the work of revising it. From death or other causes seven of them failed to enter upon it. The remaining forty-seven were ranged under six divisions, and had different portions of the Bible assigned to them. divisions. They commenced their task in 1607. After some three or four years of diligent labor the whole was completed. This version was generally adopted, and the other translations fell into disuse.

From Scriptural Sources.

In the sweat of thy face shall thou eat bread.—[Gen. iii. 19.

A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast.—[Prov. xii. 10.

Owe no man anything, but to love one another.".—[Rom. xiii. 8.

International Affair.

Smart Youth (to hand-organ man)—Garibaldi, how's business this morning? Don't you need a cashier?

Hand-Organ Man (grinding away)—No. One monka 'nuff.

Regina Rippler.

"I took six bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters for liver complaint, headache and dull stupid feeling, but now I am entirely well and healthy, having also a good appetite which I did not have previously."—Mrs. T. Davis, Regina, N.W.T.

Thirty-five cases of cholera and eighteen deaths are reported on board British men-of-war in Bombay harbor.

AMID THE PURPLE HEATHER.

Thy life shall o'er be bright and gay,
As on this fair October day.
Oh, darling, you will not say nay!
Amid the purple heather.

When summer's past, in winter's snow,
Our love shall still as warmly glow
As on this day, when sunshine's glow
Lights up love's perfect weather.

When age shall place us in life's glade,
We'll never regret its sun or shade
The kiss we gave, the vow we made
Amid the purple heather.

So my true heart thine arms enfold,
Sweetheart, dear heart, with closer hold;
Thus—thus we'll smile at growing old
And journey on together.

CHAPTER XVI.

He drew from his pocket a gazette of small size, and handed it to his friend. The young man read rapidly the paragraph pointed out to him, and then returned the paper.

"It was her face that I saw," resumed Damerel, excitedly. "What do you say—you saw her too? Does the the description tally? Give me your advice."

"Here, my dear fellow, this is a deuce of a thing, you know," said Chadwick. "We can't be knocking at strange houses, and accusing people of murder, you know—now, can we? The girl was a splendid girl; upon my word she was. She didn't look like that sort of a thing at all—not a bit. Description tally? The girl seemed to my mind no more like that confoundedly unpleasant little newspaper than I'm like—like paper shirt-collars. You ask my advice. Well, I say, go to sleep again; that's my advice. You looked uncommonly comfortable when you were asleep just now, and I don't see why you shouldn't be comfortable again. Or try a weed; that does it sometimes."

As Vivian Damerel smoked, he took out his watch, and counted the minutes that intervened between him and the next station at which the train stopped. And when at last the puffing monster drew up, like a fiery serpent out of breath, he opened the door, and sprang out leaving his friend gazing after him in blank dismay.

"I never saw a fellow so altered as Damerel—never," said Chadwick to himself. "Once he never worried about anything, now he bothers about like an adjutant or a drill sergeant—give you my honor he does. Wonder, if there's any time here to taste the whiskey."

There was time; and, as the whiskey was very good, Lieutenant Chadwick tasted it twice, and goodnaturedly filled his case bottles beside, with a view to bestowing the golden fluid upon Damerel, when he should reappear. But the porter shut the door, the guard whistled, and the train started, with Lieutenant Chadwick's puzzled head, and the larger half of the body thereunto appertaining, stretched from the window in a vain, bewildered, and dismal search for his missing friend.

"Opal," said Florian Langley, "how that impertinent simpleton in the train stared! Why, you are as white as a ghost! Do you know him?"

"The young man with the light moustache?" she asked. "No, I never saw him before in my life. I did not remark that he stared."

"Then it was the other—the dark man," said Florian. "Have I caught you, Miss Vansittart?"

"The dark gentleman is no friend of mine," she replied, quietly. "What are you reading Florian? 'Hero Worship?'"

Miss Vansittart had crossed the bridge and standing by her friend's side she took the book from her hand.

"Scarcely worthy of worship, any of them," said Florian. "A wicked lot these heroes were."

"The noblest heroes leave no record of their lives behind them," returned the other. "Destroy the human race, and they will honor you; save them, and you will find the cross and the nails."

"Opal, do you say those wise things to me because you are my governess?" asked Florian; "and do you think it is in the bond to preach on the wickedness of the world, or do you really believe them?"

"I believe them," was the reply. "Try to do any good or great thing, Florian, and you will quickly discover you have made yourself, not a hero, but a martyr. You will be stoned or crucified, slandered or hated—this will be your reward, even from those you love best."

"But you will have the strength of your own heart, the joy of your own soul, to comfort you," said Florian. "Surely these are a great reward?"

"The heart is very weak, Florian," she replied, "and the soul at times is sorrowful exceedingly."

"My dear Opal, there are tears in your eyes," said Florian. "What are you thinking of?"

"I was thinking of a hero," replied Opal, "a man so brave, so noble, so true, that he is worthy of all happiness and all love; and yet there will be none given to him."

"That's nonsense, Opal," said Florian. "Every one will love a good man."

"Except the perverse, the passionate, and the wilful," said Opal. "Love is not a slave Florian; he is a master and he never obeys reason. He turns either from the wise and the true, to adore the foolish and the fickle."

"In that case, reason would have her revenge in a bitter repentance," returned Florian. "Miss Vansittart, although you are my senior and my governess, I am wiser than you."

"Because you have never loved," said Opal. "Wait till your day comes, and then boast of your wisdom. It will be sad, indeed, if you are not wiser than I, Florian."

"Then you don't love this hero of yours!" returned Florian. "Surely to give one's love and one's trust to such a man would be wise?"

Miss Vansittart's face burnt with a sudden glow of crimson, and she turned her head away from her companion's gaze.

"It would be wise, indeed," she said, in a low voice; "but perhaps it would be selfish, also; it would give one to much peace so much joy. It is more generous to love where the return is ingratitude, mistrust, neglect. Florian, the prodigal son needed love more than his dutiful brother, who had never wasted his inheritance, never flung away the best gifts of his fathers."

"True," returned Florian, as a shade of thought deepened her blue eyes; "but mine is not the nature to give such generous love. I would never worship an idol half clay, half gold. I must respect, before I can adore. Evil and folly would soon disgust me, and I should turn away in anger, not in sorrow. I can understand a mother or a father, as in the parable, forgiving again and again, but I cannot comprehend a woman forgiving a fickle or a prodigal lover."

Deeper and deeper grew the crimson on Miss Vansittart's face, as she listened, and when she spoke her voice was agitated and broken.

"All you say, Florian, only proves that you have yet to learn what love is" she said. "You do not know how much of the mother there is in every woman's heart. Greater, intellectually and physically, as man is to herself, yet in many respects he seems to her as a child, because her clearer instincts cause her to understand much, to which his reason, his learning, or perhaps his passions blinds him."

"That sounds presumptuous," observed Florian, "and, if true, it would never suit my nature to forgive a lover out of motherly pity to his sins."

"Not sins—I said, blindness," returned Opal, mournfully; and circumstances after cases so much, Florian. It might be so cruel, to take the scales from his eyes; it might be so unjust to be angry, because he returned love with loathing; it might be more unjust still to trample out one's love, and despise it, because it was nursed by vanity, unrewarded by hope; and it might be most unjust, most cruel of all, to wish that it should ever be triumphant and happy."

She finished with flushing cheeks, and eyes bright with tears, but in a tone of such touching sadness and hopelessness, that Florian regarded her a moment in curious, earnest silence.

"The more I listen to you, the more certain I feel that I have not your nature or your sad experience," she said. "There shall be no blindness, no presumptuous self sufficiency in my hero; he shall be one entire and perfect chrysolite."

Miss Vansittart smiled and drew her arm through Florian's.

"That can never be," she answered; "but you are right to say it, because your lover will come to you as a stranger and you will rightly be jealous and quick to see faults; but there are cases where people love each other from childhood, and know all the little defects and flaws that mar the soul, just as brother and sister know each other. Then, Florian, if pain, or separation, or even crime, came between these two, it is possible to love still, even though the sin that parted them be open to the ken of each."

"That would be a terrible fate," said Florian. "It would be loving a man, not for himself, but in spite of himself."

There was a little impatience, a little fire in the other's voice, as she replied, "Yes, yes; perhaps so; perhaps not; but a proud woman must keep her love entire, unchangeable, let the man be what he will. Florian, I must show you my hero one day," she added, abruptly.

"Don't, Opal," said the young girl. "I shall be so angry with you for not being in love with him. It is my belief you love that languid, indifferent, dark, cold man, that glared at you from the railway carriage. You have done nothing but talk of love ever since the express passed."

"I don't talk much like a governess, Florian, I confess," said Miss Vansittart, laughingly. "I'm afraid I shall never have the proper governess look, nor their starch manners, and way of speech."

"If you ever do get them, I shall hate you," exclaimed Florian.

"Never fear," said Miss Vansittart.

"I don't fear," returned Florian. "I never yet saw an orange grow into a potato."

"Here is another train," cried the governess, suddenly. "Come away!"

"It is the down express," exclaimed Florian.

But Miss Vansittart did not hear her, she had got within a great clump of laurels, and, crouching down amid the thick branches, she remained completely hidden till the train had passed. But her keen, passionate eyes, gleaming among the leaves, scanned every carriage earnestly, and, flashing by her like a vision of evil, she saw the same languid dark face, that had met hers when she stood on the bridge.

"Opal, Opal!" cried Florian, "come here directly, and explain this, if you can. Here's Doctor Faustus come back—the very same, I declare, who went by in the up express an hour ago. Now I am sure the man is some lover of yours. Confess it Opal—do!"

"You are mistaken, Florian, said Miss Vansittart, as she emerged from the clump of laurels. "The man is neither lover nor friend of mine. How cold it is! Let us go in."

"Cold!" cried the girl. "Opal, you are ill—you are shivering; your face is quite ashen grey."

"Is it, really?" cried Opal. "Well, the truth is I fear I am ill. I have felt strange all day."

"Come in directly and have something, Opal," continued Florian. "You make me feel miserable from head to foot. You look very ill—I am sure you are. I'll ask mamma to prescribe for you."

"I hope you won't, my dear," said Opal. "Do something better for me; let me go to bed at once, and don't let me be disturbed till the morning. Rest is all I want."

"Then you shall go to bed, and I'll bring you some tea myself," said Florian.

For answer, the young governess bent suddenly, and kissed Florian on the cheek. Tears swam in her great dark eyes, and rested on the lashes.

"Florian," said she, "I wish you knew how much I care for you. I never had a sister, I never remember a mother; young as you are, in you I find a little of both. I have only been with you three months. If we were to part, would you believe that I thought of you and loved you always?"

"We are not going to part," remarked Florian. Mamma is only too glad to keep a governess that I like; but of course I believe you. Don't I believe in the warmth of the sun even when I don't see it? You need never give me any assurances to me, Opal, I know you thoroughly."

"Miss Vansittart's hand trembled, and her fingers clutched Florian's tightly.

"Yes inspite of your flashes and changes," continued Florian, "for you are just like your name, there's a dash of fire in you; I can always see the true gem. And do you know, my dear, tiny little bird of a governess, small as you are, nothing would surprise me that I might hear of you? If somebody came to-morrow, and said you were a princess in disguise, I should believe it. Or if they told me that you were hiding away from some rich uncle, who wanted to make you his heiress, I should say that was just like you, not to have sense enough to care for money. Or if——" But here Florian hesitated, and fixed her eyes, half timidly, half earnestly on Opal's face. "Yes, I'll say it: If I were told you loved some one dearly, passionately, hopelessly, and had run away because you could not bear to see him marry a girl fairer, richer, happier than yourself, I would believe that most of all."

The face that Florian watched was very pale, and the eyelid quivered, the lip shook, but the voice that answered her was scarcely more unsteady in its tone than illness might account for.

"You have a wonderful clear sight odness, Florian," said Opal; "a curious instinctive power that reads character at a glance. You know two things of me, that I have not told you. You guess there is some mystery concerning me and you feel that—that I have a nature madly, wickedly jealous."

"Not wickedly, Opal," said Florian; "I do not think that. As to mystery, I saw that the first week you were here, there was something secret and strange about you, but I saw too, it was nothing wrong."

"Nothing wrong!" echoed Opal, sorrowfully. "Ah, Florian, promise me to believe that always. And if among the strange things it would not surprise you to hear of me, there should come one that would make your best friend stand still, listen to no proof, no reason, no evidence, but hear only the voice of your own pure heart."

The voice in which she spoke, so grave, so sad, so heavy with tears, admitted of no reply; and in a moment she herself turned to lighter subjects.

"How is it we stumble on all the trains to day, Florian?" said she. "When we came here at this hour on other days we never saw them."

"It is the first of the month, my most wise governess," replied Florian, "and all the trains are altered."

"Ah, why did I not remember it?" said Opal, similarly. "Florian," she then added, feebly, "I feel one of those fits of sickness coming over me which you hate so much. Apologize to Mrs Langley for me, and let me go to my room. And Florian, dear, if you love me, let me be as solitary as I will till to morrow."

As the train passed into the shadow of the tall, majestic beeches, and flanked by the glittering river, the picturesque bridge, and the old grey mansion, set like a crown above the sloping lawn, a gentleman, who for many minutes had never ceased to gaze from the window, turned with in sane eagerness to his travelling companions, and, pointing out the house, asked who lived there.

"The house belongs to a Mrs. Langley, sir," interposed a traveller. "She is a widow with an only daughter, who is, as this gentleman observes, remarkably pretty."

"Can it be a chance likeness?" said Damerel to himself. "Is Miss Langley dark, with flashing eyes, and remarkably black hair?" he asked.

"There is Miss Langley on the lawn," said an old lady, bending forward. "I don't call her dark, though she has very dark hair and eyes—that is to say, dark brown, for her eyes are quite Irish."

As the train whirled by the bend of the river and past the beech trees, shutting out the view of the mansion, Damerel had just time to catch sight of a tall, graceful figure, standing on the lawn; but this glimpse was sufficient to show him that this was not the vision, whose passionate eyes had met his on the bridge.

"I perceive Miss Langley is tall," he said. "I fancied I saw a young lady there very diminutive in size and yet very beautiful."

"You are thinking of the new governess, or companion, for she is more the latter," said the traveller. "She comes from the Highlands of Scotland; she is very small, and, as you say, very lovely."

"The Highlands!" exclaimed Vivian Damerel.

"So they say," said the old lady again; "but I don't think Vansittart is a Highland name."

There was a shade, a something in her voice that Damerel caught at.

"You don't altogether approve of this beautiful governess?" he observed.

"Well, I think Miss Vansittart is too young to have the care of a girl like Florian Langley," was the reply; "and I believe if Mrs Langley had her health and her eyesight, she would not keep so remarkable a looking person by her daughter's side."

"Is Mrs. Langley blind?" asked Damerel, eagerly. "And may I ask what there is so remarkable about this young lady?"

"Her beauty is remarkable," replied the lady, "and it is of a kind too singular to be desirable in a governess or companion. Then she verges even on the eccentric, in her attempts to hide this lovely face of hers. She is doubtless aware that it is a disadvantage to her, in her position. Still, she need not wear a double crape veil at church, nor go a mile out of her way rather than meet a stranger."

"May I ask how Mrs. Langley got to know the young lady?" continued Damerel. "Pray answer without fear. I do not ask from curiosity. I have a reason for my questions."

"Nothing would surprise me that I heard about Miss Vansittart," observed the old lady, shrugging her shoulders expressively. "I can scarcely tell you how she was induced to take her into her family; but I believe it was through some solicitor in London."

Damerel felt his brain strangely bewildered. Could this Miss Vansittart from the Highlands, who was recommended to Mrs Langley by a London lawyer, be the same girl who had fled with Charles Vigo a few months ago? In answer to this question, there recurred to his memory the look of sudden fear in those wistful eyes, as, startled by the coming train, she had raised them as she stood upon the bridge and met his gaze. Then her face turned ghastly pale; and still as he gazed, half dreaming, he saw the small hands clinging to the railing, and the parted lips trembling in terror. This remembrance was enough; it was Olive; and he must denounce her, cost him what it might.

"Madam," said he, "I fear that young lady's companionship is worse than compromising for Miss Langley—it is a contamination, which must not be permitted a day longer. Will you tell me the name of the nearest magistrate, supposing I alight, as I intend to do, at the next station?"

"Dear me!" exclaimed the old lady in a great fuss; "this is shocking—this will half kill poor Mrs Langley! An adventuress, sir, I suppose—a female swindler, or something of that kind? How dreadful to have a creature of that sort in one's house for three months!"

"You asked for a magistrate, observed the other traveller. "Allow me to inform you that I am one myself. I am also a friend of Mrs. Langley's, and soon we leave the train, I shall be happy to hear in private all you care to say. I imagine you are laboring under a great mistake. I have never observed in Miss Vansittart any but the manners of a perfect gentlewoman."

In another minute the train stopped at a small station, and here Damerel and the magistrate alighted.

"Come with me to my house," said the latter, "and I will hear all you have to say. I am very unwilling to make Mrs. Langley the subject of annoyance and scandal, if I can help it."

Vivian Damerel acquiesced in this arrangement somewhat reluctantly; it seemed to him a waste of time. He longed to put his hand on Olive Varcoe and prove to the world her guilt. Apart from his indignation and horror, he felt that he owed to her the bitterness of having lost his friend Charles Vigo, and his eagerness for justice had something in it that tasted a little of the salt of revenge.

AUTUMN TIME.

Now the sweet gum's leaf turns yellow, and the black gum's leaf turns red, and red and yellow fall together and make a beautiful carpet where the grass grew green but yesterday. Now the serene skies of September are blue and bright above the fertile fields that feed and clothe the world. The lengthening nights are growing cooler, and in the woods there is a melancholy murmur among the boughs that were so still in the sultry summer days; but the song of the harvesters is glad while they gather the year's increase.

The seed is in the fruit, and so every harvest provides for another. Nothing in nature is more significant than the abundance in which seeds are produced and the care with which they are protected. Life is not left to chance. Nature strives to perpetuate the the type of every species of plant and animal, and the law impressed upon every living thing is that it shall bring forth after its kind. The universality of this providence, the manifold arrangements by which it is maintained, suggest the presence of an intelligent power in and over nature. There is no life save from a seed.

We trace the history of the tree back from oak to acorn and from acorn to oak. In the order of nature which came first, oak or acorn? If a learned botanist were consulted he would probably say that the oak was not always an oak, but has been evolved through changes in its environments from some more ancient form of vegetable life. But this answer would not solve the problem of a tree without a seed, or a seed without a tree.

On the other hand, how careless does nature seem to be of the individual, though so careful of the species. Think how many changes the earth underwent, how many suns were busy, to prepare a bed for the weed which blooms in beauty for a day. And so it is with every form of terrestrial life. Nature produces nothing to perfect that she will spare it.

From the most ancient days the changes in human life have been reckoned to those wrought by the four seasons of the year. "Like leaves on trees," says Homer, "the race of man is found, now green upon the bough, now withered on the ground." The workmen die, the work goes on, and it matters not whether the work be kingdom or a coral reef.

These are the suggestions of a mood induced by the fall of red and yellow leaves. Somehow the heart of man takes hope even in these melancholy days. Busy in the field or in the orchard, not brooding in the forest's lonely depths, we rather rejoice over the increase of the year than repine over the evidence of inevitable decay. The brave, wise man has learned not only to labor and to wait, he has learned also to labor and to trust. And now, what he has seen in darkness he reaps in light, and what he has buried in hope he has raised in joy. This is the proper frame of mind through all the changes of the year which teaches that nothing is lost or wasted. In the midst of all doubts duty is certain, and though the long nights of winter are ahead, that light light will never fail.

WHY YOUNG MEN GET ALONG

Young men who complain of hard work and small pay may profitably consider the beginnings of the successful men around them. In 1815 two young pressmen were at work in New York, side by side, printing a quarto edition of Scott's Family Bible. They worked with a will, for both were men of the stamp that naturally lose and rule the world. They were at the office, No. 49 John street, as early on the summer morning as they could see, and did one third of their day's task before breakfast. By their steady industry they each managed to earn twelve or thirteen dollars a week, and before long both were in business for themselves. One of these young men was ex Mayor James Harper, and the other was Thurlow Weed, who became so powerful in the political world.

There were plenty of men in the office as capable, to all appearance as they were. Thurlow Weed explains in a few words, why many of them lived and died poor men, and those few lines can be condensed into a few words, such as: "Eleven o'clock beer," "treating all round," tick at the grocery," and "mortgaging their weekly earnings."

ORANGEVILLE, SEPT. 24, 1891.

CARDWELL REVISION.

The Conservatives Took Time by the Forelock, While the Reformers Let the Golden Opportunity Pass.

The first court of the revision of the Dominion voters' list for Cardwell opened before Judge McCarthy, the revising officer of the district, at Hockley on Monday. The work of revising the lists took place in Mr. John Hackett's house, he having kindly offered it for the occasion. Quite a number of the free and independent electors from the divisions concerned were present. The Conservatives were represented by A. A. Hughson and the Reformers by W. J. L. McKay. The Liberals appealed against fifteen names on the original list and seventeen on the supplementary for division No. 17; twenty one on the original and eleven on the supplementary for division 18. Out of this batch of sixty four names the lists were confirmed with the exception of sixteen, the decision of which were reserved by the judge. On the other side our Conservative friends objected to one name, that of Mr. Wm Still, the Orangeville artist, who was entered as an owner of a 100-acre farm in the east of Mono, to which he had no more title than a seat in the Senate, and his name was stricken from the list. The Conservatives also applied to have five names retained on the original of division 17, which was granted, and to have eleven names added to divison No. 18, out of which they succeeded in having eight names put on. We understand the questions reserved for consideration relate to the sufficiency of notice served on the parties objected to.

The Reformers were very careless about the lists in this part of the township, and, as a result, they will be completely snowed under when the people are next asked to exercise their franchise. The Tories, on the other hand, worked like beavers and can afford to laugh at their political opponents.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The interest on the money voted to the Protestant committee of the Council of Public Instruction in compensation for the vote to the Jesuits in payment for their escheated estates, has been distributed among the schools of the province. Not a school board has refused to accept its share.

The Council of Woodstock have submitted a by-law to the ratepayers to be voted upon on the 12th of October, granting a bonus of $25,000, and exemption from taxation and water rates for a period of ten years, to the Stewart Co., of Hamilton, in consideration of their building and operating in the town a stove factory, to employ not less than 75 male employes every working day in the year.

THE Conservative anxiety about the coming bye elections will be considerably relieved by the incidents in connection with the Sarnia tunnel demonstration. It was feared that Mr. Wiman had gone out of politics. His speech on Saturday shows that he still counts himself a leader of the Liberals and the advocate of their trade policy fad. Mr. Wiman's commercial union speeches are always followed by Conservative election successes.

AMARANTH COUNCIL.

LAUREL, Sept. 26, '91.

The Amaranth council met at the town hall, Laurel, on the above date pursuant to adjournment. All the members present. The reeve in the chair. Minutes of previous meeting read and adopted.

Moved by E. Hamilton, seconded by J. A. Turner, that the commissioners be paid the sum of $5 36, the amount expended over grant made on town line between Melanchton and Amaranth.—Carried Moved by J. Dadgeon, seconded by W. Johnston, that E. Hamilton be appointed commissioner to let the contract of repairing 10th con line, lots 31 and 32.

Moved by W. Johnston, seconded by J. A. Turner, that the account of Rowsell & Hutchinson of $1 80, for municipal stationery, be paid and the reeve issue his order for the same.—Carried.

Moved by E. Hamilton, seconded by J. A. Turner, that the clerk be instructed to notify Mr. G. B. Switzer to have an outlet dug to let the water off road opposite lot 29, con. 9.—Carried.

Moved by W. Johnston, seconded by J. Dadgeon, that J. A. Turner be commissioner to let job of grading on town line, Amaranth and East Luther, opposite lot 18.—Carried.

Moved by E. Hamilton, seconded by W. Johnston, that the reeve issue an order for payment of constables fees for services rendered to prevent the spread of diphtheria.—Carried.

The council then adjourned to meet again on Tuesday, Dec. 15th at the usual hour.

OUR NEW WATERWORKS.

A System That We Should Have Had Years Ago.

The syndicate which is interested in the question of a water supply for Orangeville has broken ground on Thompson's hill in its search for nature's liquid. The spot selected is very near the summit of the Melville range of hills upon the farm of Mr. George E. Thompson. The syndicate has secured the right to excavate and bore for water and if successful in its efforts has an agreement for the purchase of additional land upon which to construct the reservoir. By measurements and levellings made last week by Messrs. C. J. & C. R. Wheelock it was ascertained that the proposed site of the reservoir is 110 feet higher than the corner of Broadway and Bythia streets (above the Presbyterian church) 135 feet higher than the water works corner and 145 feet higher than the Gordon house corner, so that the question of the sufficiency of the pressure for fire purposes is set at rest. The greatest head that the Shelburne system has is 114 feet and that gives pressure enough to throw a stream of water over the town hall which is probably as high as any building in Orangeville. An excavation twelve feet deep and eight feet in diameter has been made on the hill. In this the drill or bore will be placed and is operated by steam. A pipe 5½ inches across will be driven down with the drill through the solid rock until a plentiful supply of good water is found, or the attempt to find it is abandoned. The indications all point to a successful search for the precious fluid, as springs innumerable abound at the base of the hill and water is plentiful all around it. If success attends the efforts of the gentlemen who are risking their means to supply the town with pure water and sufficient encouragement is given to them by the council and private consumers to justify them in going ahead with the venture, they propose to construct their reservoir and put down their pipes before the snow falls. Every citizen who has the the best interests of the town at heart will encourage these enterprising fellow citizens in their laudable desire to provide the town with a complete system of fire protection and a perfectly pure water supply for domestic purposes, and it is sincerely to be hoped that success may crown their venture.

ATHLONE.

A SOCIAL AFFAIR.—A ball is announced to take place at the residence of Mr. Peter McCabe some time this week.

PERSONAL.—Miss Maloney of Toronto Junction is visiting the Misses Divines of Achill.....Miss Mary Langley of Sault Ste Marie is the guest of Miss Kittie Carty this week.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S VISIT. — His grace Archbishop Walsh of Toronto will pay a pastoral visit to this parish next week for the purpose of administering confirmation to the children.

A HAPPY TIME.—On picnic evening not a small number of people repaired to Mr. James Keenan's hotel, Athlone, where they spent a happy time in innocent amusements until late next morning.

DEAD.—We regret to hear that Mrs. Murphy of Loretto has lost her only son by fever. The funeral took place on Wednesday, the 23rd, ult., and was largely attended. The bereaved mother has the sympathy of all.

GOING! — GOING! — GO——. Mr. Michael Barrie of Athlone, and Miss Mary Egan, of Tottenham were called out in the church last Sunday by Rev. Father Killeullen. This should settle the question, "Is marriage a failure?"

FOOTBALL.—Don't forget the great football and baseball matches at Athlone on Saturday. Our boys and Rosemont will engage in a friendly kicking match, and Loretto and "Fortunes of war" will try to out-sting each other with the bat. Two hard games are expected.

WE ARE GETTING THERE.—THE SUN is becoming very popular around this neighborhood since it began enumerating the news of this section, and before long we hope to see it in every house. We send you all the news and let scandal severely alone, which ought to greatly increase your circulation.

A SPLENDID BALL.—A pleasant social event took place at the residence of Mr. John McKenna's, above Loretto, on Friday last. A very large number of persons were present and tripped the light fantastic until daylight next morning, when they departed to their respective homes much pleased with the evening's entertainment.

MARRIED.—Our genial friend Mr. Dick Conway of north Adjala was united in the sacred bonds of matrimony to Miss Christenia Harrigan of Caledon on the morning of the picnic. Rev. Father Whitney of Silvercreek performed the ceremony, and the newly married pair left on the morning train for Toronto, followed by the good wishes of all. We heartily join in wishing them success and happiness.

THE BIG PICNIC.—The great picnic, as announced, took place at Colgan on the 22nd and was a pronounced success. It was a fine day and the favorable weather brought out a tremendous crowd, who enjoyed themselves as they never did before. In the competition for the watches Miss Aggie Gamble was awarded the gold timepiece and Miss Mary Rowan got the silver one. Three clubs entered for the football prizes, Athlone, Achill and Loreto. Achill won the draw and the former and latter clubs battled for supremacy, Athlone winning by 1 goal to 0. The winners then tackled Achill, and even beat them worse than Loreto, there being 2 goals to Athlone boys' credit, while Achill's score showed a blank. Foot racing and jumping were well contested, and a great deal of interest was taken in dancing. The amusement continued until it was dark, and then the happy, though tired picknickers retired to their homes. We have not learned the amount of the receipts, but it is known over $1,000 was taken in.

Wedding, Keeper and Gem Rings, large stock to select from, at Fox's.

AUNTY'S ADVICE.

"My brother had severe summer complaint about a year ago and no remedies seemed to relieve him. At last my aunt advised us to try Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and before he had taken one bottle he was entirely cured."—Adelaide Crittenden, Baldwin, Ont.

An infuriated bull made things lively on the streets of Ingersoll a few days ago, and a dozen people narrowly escaped being killed. The animal was dispatched with a shot from a revolver.

LICKED THE EDITOR!

AND WAS FINED $11 AND COSTS FOR SO DOING.

J. W. Aiken Satisfied with the Result of his Escapade in the Tiger Office.

AFTER THE NEWSPAPERS OUGHT TO MIND THEIR P'S AND Q'S.

Who'll be Next Victim?

Between 11 and 12 o'clock last Wednesday night the office of our esteemed contemporary, the Advertiser, was the scene of a very interesting event, and one which occurs in an Orangeville print shop only once or twice in a lifetime. In pugilistic phraseology the aforesaid event would be designated "a rattling old mill," and from what we can learn it was decidedly interesting while it lasted.

"LICKING THE EDITOR"

is a favorite pastime in many towns in the great republic to the south of us, but up here the comedy is seldom, very seldom, produced. Two or three weeks ago our contemporary called attention to the conduct of certain youths and girls—a couple of young married women included—in the postoffice every night, and went on to give the latters' husbands some advice before their wives received unpleasant notoriety. If the editorial pen had ceased to dash off

THE EDITOR'S THOUGHTS

at this point everything would have gone as merry as a marriage bell, but it did not, and its failure to do so was the cause of a gigantic racket. The gossip society, which has a tremendous membership in this town, started the story that Mrs. J. W. Aiken was one of the ladies referred to, and when Mr. Aiken heard about the matter he went up to the office and discontinued his subscription to the Tiger. Nothing more was heard about the matter until Wednesday night of last week, when a copy of that issue of the paper found its way into the bowling alley. Mr. Aiken happened to be in there at the time and his attention was called to a local that raised his ire in a remarkable short space of time. Apparently our friends in misery were very sorry to loose a single subscriber or they would not have made the public aware of the fact by utilizing so much "valuable" space in describing the occurrence. Among other things the item said that "one married woman who felt that the cap fitted her rather neatly was indiscreet enough to send her husband up to 'stop this awful paper,' but if she stops making a public nuisance of herself in this connection we are willing to lose the amount of her estimable husband's subscription." Of course such utterances as the above would make any man who thought any thing of his home very angry indeed, and when a man is real angry he sometimes gives way to his passions, and goes about to right a wrong in other than lawful ways, and this is exactly what Mr Aiken did. He left the bowling alley and took up a position near the Tiger office and waited for some time for the proprietors of that sheet to make their appearance on Broadway, but the minutes dragged wearily along and still no put in an appearance. The man who stopped his paper then came to the conclusion that he would go up to the office and punch the editorial head, and how far he succeeded in so doing came out at the police court a few days afterwards. The two proprietors of the paper and an innocent-looking bank clerk were the sole occupants of the print shop, and when Mr. Aiken walked in and requested a copy of the paper the trio, no doubt, plainly saw blood in his eye. After reading the item casting reflections on his wife he announced his intention of "licking" the editor there and then and lost no time in getting down to biz. The battle, though fast and furious while it lasted, was not in accordance with the London prize ring or any other rules, for such weapons as stereotypes, mallets, etc., flew around the room at a terrible rate, but luckily no person was very badly injured in the fray. The editor was hit on the face pretty hard once or twice, and the attacking party slightly injured one of his hands. After the "mill" the participants went home, but early Thursday morning a warrant was issued for the arrest of John W. Aiken, and Chief Sinclair took him in custody the same day. He was immediately released on $200 bail.

GENTLEMEN OF THE FOURTH ESTATE

IN THE CADI'S COURT.

The hour fixed for hearing the charges preferred by W. and R. J. Wallace against John W. Aiken was 2 o'clock Sturday afternoon, and at that hour a large number of people were in the court house. Cadi Puttullo graced the bench and the complainants, the defendant, their counsels and a couple of reporters occupied seats inside the railing. The prosecutors were represented by W. J. L. McKay and Mr. Aiken retained W. L. Walsh. The defendant pleaded "not guilty" to the charge, and the taking of evidence was proceeded with. The senior prosecutor described the fight, but when cross examined by Mr. Walsh he would not disclose the name of the writer of the article, nor would he identify a copy of his own paper. After looking it over for a few minutes Mr. Walsh advised him to turn to the "patent inside" and probably he could identify it by that. None of the witnesses identified the paper, but had it been THE SUN everybody would be only too glad to identify it as the only respectable paper in town. R. J. Wallace, T. J. Bennett and B. McGuire were examined and cross examined, but nothing startling was elicited. For some reason or other the editor of this paper received a summons to appear as a witness, but he was not called to testify; and just now we might say we did not hear anything of the racket until next morning. No witnesses were called for the defence, and after each counsel had addressed the court the magistrate announced his decision, which was that for assaulting Wm. Wallace a fine of $10 and costs was imposed, and for assaulting R. J. Wallace, Mr. Aiken was taxed $1 and costs, the whole amounting to $23 30. The defendant was also bound over to keep the peace.

Of course we cannot sympathise with Mr. Aiken for taking the law into his own hands, but the manner in which certain local papers small respectable citizens of this town is a disgrace to the honorable profession of journalism and should not be tolerated. THE SUN endeavours to give news and it leaves scandal and the like to those who make a specialty of that commodity, and our efforts to conduct a respectable journal are appreciated by the public.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. H. Henderson has resumed his studies at McGill university, Kingston.

Miss Marguerite Marshall has gone to Toronto to resume her studies at the college of music.

Mr. Alex. Aiken left yesterday morning for Toronto University to continue his medical studies.

Rev. J. L. Gilmour left on Monday morning for Peterboro' previous to sailing for Scotland.

Mrs. A. Hill has been seriously ill with typhoid fever at Stayner, but is now on the road to recovery.

Mrs. Lynch of John street leaves to-morrow morning for a two weeks' visit to friends at Chicago, Ill.

Rev. F. Tracy of Toronto, the new pastor of the Orangeville Baptist church will occupy the pulpit in that edifice on Sunday.

Miss Martha Kennedy of this town has accepted the position of head millinner at Gordon's big establishment at Tottenham.

Mrs. P. J. Brazeau of Marquette, Mich., and her sister, Miss B. Culp of Mono, were callers at THE SUN office on Saturday.

Mr. Jos. A Leighton left on Monday for Cornell University, Ithica, N. Y., where he will take a three-years' course in philosophy.

Mr. J. H. H. Hoffman, formerly of Myers & Robb's law office, leaves tomorrow for Bay City, Mich., where he will practice his profession.

Mrs. Myers, wife of Crown Attorney Myers, who has been in Scotland for the benefit of her health for a few months, returned home on Saturday very much improved.

Lord Mountstephen, Lord Elphinstone, President Van Horne and Superintendent Tait and several other C. P. R. magnates passed through Orangeville on Saturday en route to Toronto.

Mr. Alex. Rusk of Orangeville gave us a call on Monday. Mr. Rusk was returning home from a visit to friends at Streetsville.....Miss Lottie McClelland of Orangeville, who has been visiting friends in Toronto, spent a few days this week with her friend, Miss Helen V. Foster, on her way home.—Brampton Banner.

CAMILLA.

(Too Late for Last Week)

HARVEST HOME.—Our Camilla youths are making great preparations for the harvest home at Laurel on the 1st of October. It is reported there has been ten fights already for to see who would have her.

TO THE ASYLUM.—The hum of the thresher is heard in nearly every barn these beautiful days, and the song it and the farmer is singing would (or should) drive Sir Richard Cartwright and his followers to the mad house.

WERE CALLED GALOOTS.—A few weeks ago in the Camilla correspondence to THE SUN the boys of Glenoe were called galoots, etc. Why do they not reply, and what's the matter with starting a Glenoe correspondence to THE SUN? Let H. McKim, R. Brenner, or Dick Forsyth, or any of the many boys act as correspondent.

PROMINENCE ABROAD!—One of our prominent personages occupied an extremely conspicuous position in the colossal exhibit of a dye concern at the Toronto exposition a few days ago. This exalted individual occasionally demonstrated the practical result of dipping a piece of gray tweed into a bason of black dye.

SCHOOL REOPENED.—School has again reopened after the diphtheria epedemic has subsided. The action of the trustees in taking precaution against the spread of the disease is applauded on every hand, and it is good they closed the school in time or the ravages of diphtheria might have been worse. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

GRAND VALLEY.

(From the Star.)

FAT CATTLE.—Mr. T. Durkin shipped a car load of fat cattle to Toronto on Monday evening.

THE FALL FAIR.—The Luther agricultural fall fair will now be held on Oct. 20th and 21st instead of 6th and 7th as previously announced.

RETURNED.—Mr. Robt. Beard returned from Manitoba on Thursday last. Mr. Beard intends moving with his family to Manitoba in a couple of weeks.

WANT BETTER MAIL SERVICE.—A petition was circulated through the town receiving signatures for securing twice a day mail service each way on the C. P. R.

COMPLETED.—Mr. W. J. Langrill has his conservatory adjoining his residence about completed. It is a handsome glass structure, ahead of anything in that line in the country.

HIGHLY CREDITABLE.—Miss Jennie Crozier of Grand Valley won the second prize in the Messenger Bible competition, Witness office, Montreal, for best Bible story or short account of the lives of David and Jonathan in their relations to one another. When it is taken into consideration the large number of stories sent in from all over the Dominion it speaks very highly of the ability of Miss Jennie.

MRS. GEO. RENDLE.

Mrs. George Rendle, of Galt, Ont., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for it is a sure cure for all summer complaints. We are never without it in the house." Fowler's Wild Strawberry, price, 35c.

Thursday, Nov. 5, has been accepted as thanksgiving day.

Local Intelligence.

Business is booming on the C. P. R.

The high school students' annual picnic takes place to-morrow.

Judge Chapman & Co. have a spicy ad. in this week's issue of THE SUN.

Mr. Walker Smith has started a tonorial establishment on west Broadway.

Choice wines and brandies for medicinal purposes, call at J. M. BENNETT'S.

In this issue the C. P. R. advertises cheap excursions to many cities in the U. S.

It is said a number of "raised" bills are in circulation in this part of the country.

Miss Moir, assistant H. S. teacher, took sick on Friday and was unable to attend school.

Kincardine ratepayers will pay 19 mills on the dollar in taxes this year, while we are 1 better.

The best value in Sugars and Teas, and the finest stock of Groceries in Town, at MACADAMS. 2.

The new waterworks syndicate are most sanguine over their prospects of obtaining plenty of pure water.

For pure Rye and Family Proof Whisky, see J. M. Bennett's trial and bottled. It is a fact.

The market opened on Thursday, but was rather slimly attended. Everybody should boom the market.

The grain market is beginning to get lively and four firms have buyers on the market. This is one more than last year.

We want good correspondents at Mono Mills, Alton, Charleston and Credit Forks. Drop us a post card for terms.

The Alton flood cases were argued at Toronto last week, but judgment was reserved and will not be given for several weeks.

The exterior of Turner's drug store has received a coat of paint which is in keeping with the tasty appearance of the interior.

Friday, Oct. 30th, is the date fixed for the Centre Wellington election protest trial, which will take place at Guelph.

The fact that Photographer Still carried off two prizes at the Toronto exhibition since I place him in the front rank of his profession.

Two citizens had a little misunderstanding on west Broadway last Thursday afternoon, but the P. M. will not be asked to settle the case.

The Shelburne Economist entered upon its ninth volume of publication last week and Bro. Smith will please accept THE SUN's congratulations.

The Times prints a more attractive sale bill than any other office in the county, and those who leave their orders there receive a local gratis.

St. Andrew's church, Hillsburg, will be reopened on Sunday next and Rev. D. C. Hossack of this town will occupy the pulpit at the morning service.

The American hotel is being thoroughly renovated and repaired, and Mr. John Hewitt, the obliging host, is bound to have his hostelry in the front rank.

Mr. J. F. Doyle of Toronto, who practised law in Orangeville several years ago, is applied to parliament for a divorce from his wife, Agnes L. Doyle.

Nothing further has been done about forming one of an amateur athletic association in this town, but it is certain the element will not sink into oblivion.

Monday evening the Citizens' band serenaded several citizens. Broadway and the music was admired by everybody. We are a great band at serenading.

Several engines have complained to us about not getting plenty of beans this year. We think the fault is with the proper parties, who should attend to the matter.

It seems to have taken the Indians and men who were never seen to fight are just aching for a chance. Anything by the exhibitions that may take place during the past few days.

After a few days' illness Beatie, the nine year old daughter of Mr. A. McGowan died last Sunday evening. The remains were interred in the Protestant cemetery on Monday afternoon.

The Methodist church choir was reorganized last week with Mr. Thos. Wright as leader. It is scarcely necessary to say that the services on Sunday were greatly enjoyed by the large congregations.

Saturday and Sunday evening the boys in blue can be seen keeping a sharp look out at the bar rooms of the hotels, but so far he has not caught any of the dispensers up to anything rough.

The Union exhibition takes place at Hollowday next Thursday and Friday, and judging by the entries this year's show will be one of the best ever held. All that is needed to make the exhibition a success is fine weather.

FOR GALE & KERR.—Good Piano tuning. Gale & Kerr's music house from Oct. 6 to 11th.

CARDWELL REVISION.

The Conservatives Took Time by the Forelock, While the Reformers Let the Golden Opportunity Pass.

The first court of the revision of the Dominion voters' list for Cardwell opened before Judge McCarthy, the revising officer of the district, at Hockley on Monday. The work of revising the lists took place in Mr. John Hackett's house, he having kindly offered it for the occasion. Quite a number of the free and independent electors from the divisions concerned were present. The Conservatives were represented by A. A. Hughson and the Reformers by W. J. L. McKay. The Liberals appealed against fifteen names on the original list and seventeen on the supplementary for division No. 17; twenty-one on the original and eleven on the supplementary for division 18. Out of this batch of sixty-four names the lists were confirmed with the exception of sixteen, the decision of which were reserved by the judge. On the other side our Conservative friends objected to one name, that of Mr. Wm Still, the Orangeville artist, who was entered as an owner of a 100-acre farm in the east of Mono, to which he had no more title than a seat in the Senate, and his name was stricken from the list. The Conservatives also applied to have five names retained on the original of division 17, which was granted, and to have eleven names added to divison No. 18, out of which they succeeded in having eight names put on. We understand the questions reserved for consideration relate to the sufficiency of notice served on the parties objected to.

The Reformers were very careless about the lists in this part of the township, and, as a result, they will be completely snowed under when the people are next asked to exercise their franchise. The Tories, on the other hand, worked like beavers and can afford to laugh at their political opponents.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The interest on the money voted to the Protestant committee of the Council of Public Instruction in compensation for the vote to the Jesuits in payment for their escheated estates, has been distributed among the schools of the province. Not a school board has refused to accept its share.

The Council of Woodstock have submitted a by-law to the ratepayers to be voted upon on the 12th of October, granting a bonus of $25,000, and exemption from taxation and water rates for a period of ten years, to the Stewart Co., of Hamilton, in consideration of their building and operating in the town a stove factory, to employ not less than 75 male employes every working day in the year.

THE Conservative anxiety about the coming bye-elections will be considerably relieved by the incidents in connection with the Sarnia tunnel demonstration. It was feared that Mr. Wiman had gone out of politics. His speech on Saturday shows that he still counts himself a leader of the Liberals and the advocate of their trade policy fad. Mr. Wiman's commercial union speeches are always followed by Conservative election successes.

AMARANTH COUNCIL.

LAUREL, Sept. 26, '91.

The Amaranth council met at the town hall, Laurel, on the above date pursuant to adjournment. All the members present. The recve in the chair. Minutes of previous meeting read and adopted.

Moved by W Johnston, seconded by J. Dudgeon that J. W. Rayfield be paid the sum of $1 for repairing road scraper, and the reeve issue his order for the same.—Carried.

Moved by E. Hamilton, seconded by J. A. Turner, that the commissioners be paid the sum of $5 36, the amount expended over grant made on town line between Melancthon and Amaranth.—Carried Moved by J. Dudgeon, seconded by W. Johnston, that E. Hamilton be appointed commissioner to let the contract of repairing 10th con line, lots 31 and 32.

Moved by W. Johnston, seconded by J. A. Turner, that the account of Rowell & Hutchinson of $1 80, for municipal stationery, be paid and the reeve issue his order for the same.—Carried.

Moved by E. Hamilton, seconded by J. A. Turner, that the clerk be instructed to notify Mr. G. B. Switzer to have an outlet dug to let the water off road opposite lot 29, con. 9.—Carried.

Moved by W. Johnston, seconded by J. Dudgeon, that J. A. Turner be commissioner to let job of grading on town line, Amaranth and East Luther, opposite lot 18.—Carried.

Moved by E. Hamilton, seconded by W. Johnston, that the reeve issue an order for payment of constables fees, for services rendered to prevent the spread of diphtheria.—Carried.

The council then adjourned to meet again on Tuesday, Dec. 15th at the usual hour.

reservoir is 119 feet higher than the corner of Broadway and Bythia streets (above the Presbyterian church) 135 feet higher than the water works corner and 145 feet higher than the Gordon house corner, so that the question of the sufficiency of the pressure for fire purposes is not at rest. The greatest head that the Shelburne system has is 114 feet and that gives pressure enough to throw a stream of water over the town hall which is probably as high as any building in Orangeville. An excavation twelve feet deep and eight feet in diameter has been made on the hill. In this the drill or bore will be placed and is operated by steam. A pipe 5½ inches across will be driven down with the drill through the solid rock until a plentiful supply of good water is found, or the attempt to find it is abandoned. The indications all point to a successful search for the precious fluid, as springs innumerable abound at the base of the hill and water is plentiful all around it. If success attends the efforts of the gentlemen who are risking their means to supply the town with pure water and sufficient encouragement is given to them by the council and private consumers to justify them in going ahead with the venture, they propose to construct their reservoir and put down their pipes before the snow falls. Every citizen who has the best interests of the town at heart will encourage these enterprising fellow citizens in their laudable desire to provide the town with a complete system of fire protection and a perfectly pure water supply for domestic purposes, and it is sincerely to be hoped that success may crown their venture.

ATHLONE.

A SOCIAL AFFAIR.—A ball is announced to take place at the residence of Mr. Peter McCabe some time this week.

PERSONAL.—Miss Maloney of Toronto Junction is visiting the Misses Divines of Achill.....Miss Mary Langley of Sault Ste Marie is the guest of Miss Kittie Carty this week.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S VISIT.—His grace Archbishop Walsh of Toronto will pay a pastoral visit to this parish next week for the purpose of administering confirmation to the children.

A HAPPY TIME.—On picnic evening not a small number of people repaired to Mr. James Keenan's hotel, Athlone, where they spent a happy time in innocent amusements until late next morning.

DEAD.—We regret to hear that Mrs. Murphy of Loretto has lost her only son by fever. The funeral took place on Wednesday, the 23rd, ult., and was largely attended. The bereaved mother has the sympathy of all.

GOING! — GOING! — Go——. Mr. Michael Barrie of Athlone, and Miss Mary Egan, of Tullenham were called out in the church last Sunday by Rev. Father Killeallen. This should settle the question, "Is marriage a failure?"

FOOTBALL.—Don't forget the great football and baseball matches at Athlone on Saturday. Our boys and Rosemont will engage in a friendly kicking match, and Loretto and "Fortunes of war" will try to out-slug each other with the bat. Two hard games are expected.

WE'RE GETTING THERE.—THE SUN is becoming very popular around this neighborhood since it began enumerating the news of this section, and before long we hope to see it in every house. We send you all the news and let scandal severely alone, which ought to greatly increase your circulation.

A SPLENDID BALL.—A pleasant social event took place at the residence of Mr John McKenna's, above Loretto, on Friday last. A very large number of persons were present and tripped the light fantastic until daylight next morning, when they departed to their respective homes much pleased with the evening's entertainment.

MARRIED.—Our genial friend Mr. Dick Conway of north Adjala was united in the sacred bonds of matrimony to Miss Christenia Harrigan of Caledon on the morning of the picnic. Rev. Father Whitney of Silvercreek performed the ceremony, and the newly married pair left on the morning train for Toronto, followed by the good wishes of all. We heartily join in wishing them success and happiness.

THE BIG PICNIC.—The great picnic, as announced, took place at Colgan on the 22nd and was a pronounced success. It was a fine day and the favorable weather brought out a tremendous crowd, who enjoyed themselves as they never did before. In the competition for the watches Miss Aggie Gamble was awarded the gold timepiece and Miss Mary Rowan got the silver one. Three clubs entered for the football prizes, Athlone, Achill and Locton. Achill won the draw and the former and latter clubs battled for supremacy, Athlone winning by 1 goal to 0. The winners then tackled Achill, and even beat them worse than Locton, there being 2 goals to Athlone boys' credit, while Achill's score showed a blank. Foot racing and jumping were well contested, and a great deal of interest was taken in dancing. The amusement continued until it was dark, and then the happy, though tired picknickers retired to their homes. We have not learned the amount of the receipts, but it is known over $1,000 was taken in.

AUNTY'S ADVICE.

"My brother had severe summer complaint about a year ago and no remedies seemed to relieve him. At last my aunt advised us to try Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and before he had taken one bottle he was entirely cured."—Adelaide Crittenden, Bakwin, Ont.

An infuriated bull made things lively on the streets of Ingersoll a few days ago, and a dozen people narrowly escaped being killed. The animal was dispatched with a shot from a revolver.

Sunday night the office of our esteemed contemporary, the Advertiser, was the scene of a very interesting event, and one which occurs in an Orangeville print shop only once or twice in a life-time. In pugilistic phraseology the aforesaid event would be designated "a rattling old mill," and from what we can learn it was decidedly interesting while it lasted.

"LICKING THE EDITOR"

is a favorite pastime in many towns in the great republic to the south of us, but up here the comedy is seldom, very seldom, produced. Two or three weeks ago our contemporary called attention to the conduct of certain youths and girls—a couple of young married women included—in the postoffice every night, and went on to give the latters' husbands some advice before their wives received unpleasant notoriety. If the editorial pen had ceased to dash off

at this point everything would have gone as merry as a marriage bell, but it did not, and its failure to do so was the cause of a gigantic racket. The gossip society, which has a tremendous membership in this town, started the story that Mrs. J. W. Aiken was one of the ladies referred to, and when Mr. Aiken heard about the matter he went up to the office and discontinued his subscription to the Tiser. Nothing more was heard about the matter until Wednesday night of last week, when a copy of that issue of the paper found its way into the bowling alley. Mr. Aiken happened to be in there at the time and his attention was called to a local that raised his ire in a remarkable short space of time. Apparently our friends in misery were very sorry to loose a single subscriber or they would not have made the public aware of the fact by utilizing so much of valuable "space in describing the occurrence. Among other things the item said that "one married woman who felt that the cap fitted her rather neatly was indiscreet enough to send her husband up to 'stop this awful paper,' but if she stops making a public nuisance of herself in this connection we are willing to lose the amount of her estimable husband's subscription." Of course such utterances as the above would make any man who thought any thing of his home very angry indeed, and when a man is real angry he sometimes gives way to his passions, and goes about to right a wrong in other than lawful ways, and this is exactly what Mr Aiken did. He left the bowling alley and took up a position near the Tiser office and waited for some time for the proprietors of that sheet to make their appearance on Broadway, but the minutes dragged wearily along and still no put in an appearance. The man who stopped his paper then came to the conclusion that he would go up to the office and punch the editorial head, and how far he succeeded in so doing came out at the police court a few days afterwards. The two proprietors of the paper and an innocent-looking bank clerk were the sole occupants of the print shop, and when Mr. Aiken walked in and requested a copy of the paper the trio, no doubt, plainly saw blood in his eye. After reading the item casting reflections on his wife he announced his intention of "licking" the editor there and then and lost no time in getting down to his The battle, though fast and furious while it lasted, was not in accordance with the London prize ring or any other rules, for such weapons as stereotypes, mallets, etc., flew around the room at a terrible rate, but luckily no person was very badly injured in the fray. The editor was hit on the face pretty hard once or twice, and the attacking party slightly injured one of his hands. After the "mill" the participants went home, but early Thursday morning a warrant was issued for the arrest of John W. Aiken, and Chief Shields took him in custody the same day. He was immediately released on $200 bail.

IN THE CADI'S COURT.

The hour fixed for hearing the charges preferred by W. and R. J. Wallace against John W. Aiken was 2 o'clock Sturday afternoon, and at that hour a large number of people were in the court house. Cadi Pattullo graced the bench and the complainants, the defendant, their counsels and a couple of reporters occupied seats inside the railing. The prosecutors were represented by W. J. L. McKay and Mr. Aiken retained W. L. Walsh. The defendant pleaded "not guilty" to the charge, and the taking of evidence was proceeded with. The senior prosecutor described the fight, but when cross examined by Mr. Walsh he would not disclose the name of the writer of the article, nor would he identify a copy of his own paper. After looking it over for a few minutes Mr. Walsh advised him to turn to the "patent inside" and probably he could identify it by that. None of the witnesses identified the paper, but had it been THE SUN everybody would be only too glad to identify it as the only respectable paper in town. R. J. Wallace, T. J. Bennett and B. McGuire were examined and cross examined, but nothing startling was elicited. For some reason or other the editor of this paper received a summons to appear as a witness, but he was not called to testify; and just now we might say we did not hear anything of the racket until next morning. No witnesses were called for the defense, and after each counsel had addressed the court the magistrate announced his decision, which was that for assaulting Wm. Wallace a fine of $10 and costs was imposed, and for assaulting R. J. Wallace, Mr. Aiken was taxed $1 and costs, the whole amounting to $23 30. The defendant was also bound over to keep the peace.

Of course we cannot sympathise with Mr. Aiken for taking the law into his own hands, but the manner in which certain local papers assail respectable citizens of this town is a disgrace to the honorable profession of journalism and should not be tolerated. THE SUN enjoyed the hospitality of Orangeville friends.

Mr. R. Jackson of Sleswick gave THE SUN a pleasant call on Monday.

Miss Anna M. Miller of Detroit, Mich., is a guest at Dr. Henry's.

Mr. J. H. Henderson has resumed his studies at McGill university, Kingston.

Miss Marguerite Marshall has gone to Toronto to resume her studies at the college of music.

Mr. Alex. Aiken left yesterday morning for Toronto University to continue his medical studies.

Rev. J. L. Gilmour left on Monday morning for Peterboro' previous to sailing for Scotland.

Mrs. A. Hill has been seriously ill with typhoid fever at Stayner, but is now on the road to recovery.

Mrs. Lynch of John street leaves to-morrow morning for a two weeks' visit to friends at Chicago, Ill.

Rev. F. Tracy of Toronto, the new pastor of the Orangeville Baptist church will occupy the pulpit in that edifice on Sunday.

Miss Martha Kennedy of this town has accepted the position of head-milliner at Gordon's big establishment at Tottenham.

Mrs. P. J. Beaun of Marquette, Mich., and her sister, Miss B. Culp of Mono, were callers at THE SUN office on Saturday.

Mr. Jos. A Leighton left on Monday for Cornell University, Ithica, N. Y., where he will take a three-years' course in philosophy.

Mr. J. H. H. Hoffman, formerly of Myers & Robb's law office, leaves tomorrow for Bay City, Mich., where he will practice his profession.

Mrs. Myers, wife of Crown Attorney Myers, who has been in Scotland for the benefit of her health for a few months, returned home on Saturday very much improved.

Lord Mountstephen, Lord Elphinstone, President Van Horne and Superintendent Tait and several other C. P. R. magnates passed through Orangeville on Saturday en route to Toronto.

Mr. Alex. Rusk of Orangeville gave us a call on Monday. Mr. Rusk was returning home from a visit to friends at Streetsville.....Miss Lottie McClelland of Orangeville, who has been visiting friends in Toronto, spent a few days this week with her friend, Miss Helen V. Foster, on her way home.—Brampton Banner.

CAMILLA.

(Too Late for Last Week)

HARVEST HOME.—Our Camilla youths are making great preparations for the harvest home at Laurel on the 1st of October. It is reported there has been ten fights already for to see who would have her.

TO THE ASYLUM.—The hum of the thresher is heard in nearly every barn these beautiful days, and the song it and the farmer is singing would (or should) drive Sir Richard Cartwright and his followers to the mad house.

WERE CALLED GALOOTS.—A few weeks ago in the Camilla correspondence to THE SUN the boys of Glenoe were called galoots, etc. Why do they not reply, and what's the matter with starting a Glenoe correspondence to THE SUN? Let H. McKim, R. Brenner, or Dick Forsyth, or any of the many boys act as correspondent.

PROMINENCE ABROAD!—One of our prominent personages occupied an extremely conspicuous position in the colossal exhibit of a dye concern at the Toronto exposition a few days ago. This exalted individual occasionally demonstrated the practical result of dipping a piece of gray tweed into a bason of black dye.

SCHOOL REOPENED.—School has again reopened after the diphtheria epedemic has subsided. The action of the trustees in taking precaution against the spread of the disease is applauded on every hand, and it is good they closed the school in time or the ravages of diptheria might have been worse. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

GRAND VALLEY.

(From the Star.)

FAT CATTLE.—Mr. T. Durkin shipped a car load of fat cattle to Toronto on Monday evening.

THE FALL FAIR.—The Luther agricultural fall fair will now be held on Oct. 20th and 21st instead of 6th and 7th as previously announced.

RETURNED.—Mr. Robt. Beard returned from Manitoba on Thursday last. Mr. Beard intends moving with his family to Manitoba in a couple of weeks.

WANT BETTER MAIL SERVICE.—A petition was circulated through the town receiving signatures for securing twice a day mail service each way on the C. P. R.

COMPLETED.—Mr. W. J. Langrill has his conservatory adjoining his residence about completed. It is a handsome glass structure, ahead of anything in that line in the country.

HIGHLY CREDITABLE.—Miss Jennie Cromer of Grand Valley won the second prize in the Messenger Bible competition, Witness office, Montreal, for best Bible story or short account of the lives of David and Jonathan in their relations to one another. When it is taken into consideration the large number of stories sent in from all over the Dominion it speaks very highly of the ability of Miss Jennie.

MRS. GEO. RENDLE.

Mrs. George Rendle, of Galt, Ont., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for it is a sure cure for all summer complaints. We are never without it in the house." Fowler's Wild Strawberry, price, 35c.

Ivan Gonsharow, the Russian author, is dead, aged 63.

VICTORY AT VIVIAN.

IN our finally faithful work has been done by Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in cases and quick cure for diarrhoea, dysentery, and all summer complaints. I can recommend it to all as a family friend, always true and faithful.—Mrs W. Bishop, Vivian, Ont.

The earthquake shocks on Saturday night were felt through a large section of the Northwestern States.

If you are suffering from a feeling of constant tiredness, the result of mental worry or overwork, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will promptly cure you. Give them a trial

T. Stevenson, issuer of Marriage Licenses. A large supply of Blanks kept constantly on hand. Paris Green at the Medical Hall, Broadway, Orangeville.

PURSUANT to the Judgment of the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice for Ontario, made in the matter of partition between Thomas James Hughson, plaintiff, and Elizabeth Hughson, Archibald Hamilton, Caroline Hughson, Esther Marie Hughson, Hugh Edward Hughson, Alice Mary Hughson and Mary Ann Hamilton, defendants, all creditors or other persons who have specific liens on the west half of Lot Number 13, in the 3rd Concession, in the Township of Amaranth, in the County of Dufferin, or upon any undivided estate or interest therein of any of the above-named parties by means of any mortgage or other lien or security sufficient to bind lands according to the law of this Province are hereby required to produce to me at my Chambers in the Court House, in the TOWN OF ORANGEVILLE, on or before

at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, full particulars of such liens or encumbrances, together with satisfactory evidence of the amount due thereon. Immediately after the said date, the sale of said land will be proceeded with under such judgment, and only such liens or encumbrances as I may then have notice of, pursuant to this advertisement, will be entitled to rank upon the proceeds thereof.

Pursuant to the said Judgment the creditors of James Hughson, late of the Township of Amaranth in said county, who died on the 9th day of January, 1890, are, on or before the said 19th day of October, 1891, to send by post pre paid, to W. L. WALSH, Orangeville, their Christian and Surnames; addresses and descriptions, full particulars of their claims, statements of their accounts and the nature of the securities held by them (if any) and in default thereof they will be peremptorily excluded from the benefit of the said Judgment.

All creditors holding any securities must produce the same before me at my Chambers, aforesaid, upon the 21st day of OCTOBER, 1891, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, being the time appointed for adjudicating on the claims

Dated this 29th day of September, 1891.

A DISTINGUISHED PREACHER.—Rev. Wesley Carson, secretary of the Guelph Conference will preach missionary sermons in the Methodist church next Sunday morning and evening. The rev. gentleman is a preacher of pleasing address and his sermons are highly appreciated. Both collections in aid of mission fund.

CONGROVES COMING.—The Congrove Concert Co. will again visit Orangeville on Friday, Oct. 9, the second day of Dufferin's fall fair, and a full house should welcome this first class aggregation. The company is too well known around this part of the country to need any reference here. Popular admission prices will be charged.

SPINSTERS' HIGH TEA.—This novel and interesting event will take place in the Methodist church on Tuesday, the 13th inst., and will be well worth attending. No gentlemen will be permitted to take any part in the program and the chair will be taken by a young lady. The refreshments will consist of fowl and the best the county possesses. Tickets only 25cts.

VISITING BRETHREN.—D. McMorris, D. D. G. M.; D. Campbell, J. H. Collier, Jas. Milloy, T. G. Scott, Jas. Walker, T. R. Aitken, Jas. Broddy and Wm Justice, of Credit lodge, Erin, visited their Orangeville brethern of Maple Leaf lodge No. 57, I.O.O.F., on Thursday evening. The visitors were banqueted at the Elgin house, where a pleasant time was spent in speechmaking, etc.

ACCEPTED THE CALL.—Rev. F. Tracy, B. A., of Toronto has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Orangeville Baptist church and will commence his duties on Sunday morning next. Mr. Tracy is a young man of great ability and our Baptist friends are very fortunate in securing the services of such a talented gentleman. We welcome him to our town and sincerely trust he will never regret accepting the unanimous call of his brethren to Orangeville.

DETECTIVES AT WORK.—The C. P. R. officials seem determined to enforce the rules prohibiting their employes drinking liquor while on duty, and two of the company's detectives have been in town for several days looking into the matter. As a result of their visit couple of the men have been dismissed and it is said many more will receive their walking ticket. The rule is a good one, and the sooner railway men realize this the better it will be for themselves and the travelling public.

NOT AT THE "CASTLE."—Last week one of our contemporaries said that when Constable Hubbard took Joe Reid to P. M Pattullo's residence early Friday morning before the latter was out of bed, the magistrate, in reply to the cop's query as to where he would take Reid, said to "take him to the devil out of here," and the officer yanked him up to jail. The officials at the "castle" were not a little angry to think that a "devil" was connected with that institution, but they inform us that the Caledon cannibal was not even near the cooler. All's well that ends well.

WHO IS HE? - It has leaked out that a case of stealing occurred at Mulmur Lake a few days ago. A young lady, son of respectable parents in Orangeville, was on a visit to Mrs Purkering's for the past month. It is said that he broke into the boathouse of The Shelburne Aquatic Club once or twice during his visit and before leaving he stole the lady's purse with money he had been stealing. We are informed that the boy was brought to Orangeville and had to disgorge the stolen funds. A few months in jail won't teach the young thief a lesson.—Shelburne Free Press.

WEDDING BELLS.—On Wednesday afternoon the residence of Mr Jas Keys, Centre street, was the scene of a pleasing incident, it being the marriage of his daughter, Miss Annie to Mr. Josiah D. Gilman. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. D. Hossack in the presence of the immediate friends of the contracting parties. The bridesmaid was Miss Louie Keys, a sister of the bride, while Mr. Burt Pinkerton acted as groomsman. After a splendid supper had been partaken of the happy couple, amid showers of rice, slipped off by the evening train for Detroit and elsewhere to spend the honeymoon.

KICKED BY A HORSE.—About 5.30 o'clock Monday evening a young lad named William Laidlawe, employed at Clayton & Fleming's, was seriously kicked by a horse in front of the store. The young fellow was in the act of entering the animal by the head when it suddenly turned round and let fly its heels, striking the unfortunate boy in the face and side. The force of the kick was sufficient to knock the boy several feet away and render him unconscious for fifteen or twenty minutes. It was fortunate the horse was not shod for had it been, in all probability, young Laidlawe would have been instantly killed or very badly injured.

TAKING HIS FAREWELL.—In the Baptist church on Sunday last Rev. J. L. Gilmour, after a residence of three years in Orangeville, preached his farewell sermon, previous to his going to Edinburgh, Scotland. The sacred edifice was crowded to the doors at both morning and evening services, and the morning sermon was one of the best the departing pastor ever delivered. The rev. gentleman left on Monday morning for Peterboro,' where he spent a few days, and is at present at Montreal. During his stay in Orangeville Rev. Mr. Gilmour became very popular with the people, irrespective of creed, and THE SUN joins in wishing him every success in Auld Scotia.

WOULDN'T PAY THE FINE.—A couple of months ago an elderly man named Calvin Peters, who resides in town, was fined $10 and costs by P. M. Pattullo for peddling without a license. Peters would not pay the fine and said he would appeal the case, but since that day nothing has been done in the matter. Tuesday afternoon Constable Hubbard took out a warrant for the peddler's arrest and soon had his man in the "castle." Mr. Peters says he will not pay the fine, but will remain ten days in jail, which will even things up. There are many men in town who would remain behind the bars for ten or twenty days if they got $1 every twenty-four hours for so doing, but the moment they gained their liberty they would make it highly interesting for the bars of the Broadway hotels.

AN EARLY BLAZE.—About 5 o'clock on Monday morning the ringing of the fire-alarm disturbed our citizens from their pleasant slumbers and told them plainer than words that a fire was in progress. Upon investigation it was found that a small frame building on east Broadway was not very rapidly falling a prey to the devouring element. The firemen were on hand in very quick time and had to wait several minutes for water, but when pressure was on it was something grand. Shoemaker Hazlett was going to occupy the building the following morning, and previously had made extensive repairs. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary, but there is no disposition on the part of the officials to run the "criminal" to earth.

ARE YOU ONE OF THEM? — Our book keeper has been busy the past week making out the accounts of subscribers to THE SUN who are in arrears for their subscription, and the number is not by any means small. In this case we are charging only $1 a year, but those who do not take this opportunity of settling their indebtedness will be charged the credit price of $2 per annum. It is our intention to strictly adhere to the above, and we would advise delinquent subscribers to pay promptly and save further trouble. We intend adding a new power press and other machinery to our plant, and we can't buy these things for nothing, consequently we must have the money that we honestly earned. Remember, if the accounts are not promptly settled $2 per year will be charged and collected.

THE "RAISER" GOT AWAY.—During the past couple of weeks Detective Joe Rogers of Toronto has been hanging around town, but up to a few days ago nobody knew what he was after. It appears the detective was lying in wait for the man who has been making it a profession of passing "raised" bank notes. The name of the culprit, who hails from Charleston, is withheld for the present. He is charged with passing a 'raised' bill on a Campbell's Cross storekeeper, the details of which appeared in THE SUN three or four weeks ago. Last Friday evening the "raiser" was located in town and a couple of constables were dispatched to effect his arrest, but when they arrived at the hotel where the guilty man was supposed to be they found the bird had flown. Besides swindling the Campbell's Cross grocer, there are other charges against the fugitive of passing "raised" notes. The officers say his apprehension is only a matter of a few days.

A JUVENILE THIEF.—Eighteen-year old Anson Moore, who hails from East Luther, got himself into a nice fix on Monday, and now finds himself in jail as a result of his folly. On the the 3rd of July last young Moore was engaged by Mrs. McPherson of Caledon, and the boy conducted himself in a becoming manner until a few days ago. Last Monday Mrs. McPherson went to visit her brother-in-law in East Garafraxa and left Moore at home to see that nothing went wrong. The lady returned in the evening expecting to find things as she left them in the morning, but was greatly astonished when she could not discover the boy about the premises. Her curiosity was greatly aroused and a thorough search was instituted, when it was found the dishonest youth had taken all his clothes and some articles that did not belong to him, a horse included. It appears the boy mounted the animal and took a jaunt through Caledon, and finally held up in town. The facts of the case were laid before P. M. Pattullo and Constable Hubbard was detained to arrest the reckless youth. This he did at 12 o'clock the same night, having located him at Wm. Irwin's residence in the South ward, and later on found the horse in the Baptist church shed. The juvenile thief appeared before the cadi on Tuesday, and was remanded to jail until yesterday in order to communicate with his father. The youthful prisoner was in the police court twice yesterday and in the afternoon was sentenced to two months' imprisonment in the "castle." Crown Attorney Myers prosecuted, but Moore was unrepresented by counsel.

HE'S NOT IN IT

And Wishes the Camillia Citizens to Make a Note of the Fact.

To the Editor of THE SUN:

DEAR SIR,—There are numerous correspondents here for THE SUN and the Post, and I think the people appear to be under the mistaken idea that I am mixed up among them. Some are making free use of my name in a slanderous way, but you know I have not written anything for THE SUN for several years, neither have I written for the other paper. I have been taking THE SUN for 22 years, and still wish it success.

Yours truly,
W. J. MORRISON.

Camilla, Sept 29, 1891.

[What Mr. Morrison says above is correct, as he has not sent us a line for the past two or three years, and those who imagine or say he has anything to do with our Camillia correspondence do that gentleman a gross injustice. We have a newspaper representative at Camilla, but it will take something more than a Pinkerton detective to discover his identity. However, our friends up there should not deceive themselves by imagining that Mr. Morrison is our correspondent.—ED.]

After Many Days.

Bloomfield, Man., Feb. 14, 1890.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—For 12 years my wife was a martyr to that dreaded disease, Dyspepsia. Nothing relieved her; physicians were consulted and medical skill tried, without avail. One doctor advised a change of climate, suggesting Manitoba as a desirable place. We acted upon this advice, coming here two years ago. The change of climate wrought a change indeed, but for the worse, as she was soon confined to bed, and under the care of two doctors, who asserted she could not live but a month longer. A neighbor came to see her one day who had been reading your Almanac. She told her of the testimonials she read in it, of the great amount of good the were doing, and advised her to try a box of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. She did so, was relieved, kept improving, and is now able to do housework, and continues the use of Morse's Pills.

Yours gratefully,
GEORGE DUNN.

JOE REID COMMITTED

To Stand His Trial Before Judge McCarthy at the Quarterly Sessions.

WISE WAS WILLING TO SETTLE FOR $20.

WILL JUSTICE BE BALKED OR WILL JOE GO TO JAIL?—THE FORMER THOUGHT SURELY.

The case against Joseph Reid of Caledon, who was charged with chewing the thumb off young Alfred Wise's right hand, came up in the police court on Friday afternoon. P. M. Pattullo thought his office would be too small to accommodate the crowd, so he announced that the trial would take place in the court house. Shortly after two o'clock proceedings commenced, and a large number of people listened to the evidence attentively. The report of the case appeared in THE SUN of last week and our readers are quite familiar with the details of the row. Reid was represented by counsel, and in the absence of Crown Attorney Myers his partner, Mr. Geo. Robb, looked after the prosecution. Reid elected to be tried by a jury, and the complainant, Alfred Wise, was called upon to give evidence. He explained the details of the row, which was as we reported it last week. During his cross examination Wise said the Sons of England were interested in the prosecution, and admitted that at one time he would have settled the case if Reid had given him $20, pay for the time he lost and settle the costs of the court. The complainant said he would have done this on account of Reid's wife and family, if he thought he had power to do so, but he would not have done it on Joe's account. Wise was the only witness called and after he had given his evidence the cadi committed Reid to stand his trial at the quarterly sessions on the 2nd of December. This suited Joe's taste to a knock down, and will give plenty of time to arrange a settlement—if one can be made. Joe was released on bail to the extent of $800, himself for $400 and two sureties for $200 each, John Black of Caledon and R. Ferns of this town being the bondsmen. Two or three witnesses gave recognizance for their appearance when wanted, after which the court adjourned.

CARDWELL.

(Too Late for Last Week.)

GONE TO HIS REWARD.—How uncertain is human life! How few and fleeting are the days of man! "He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down; he fleeteth also as a shadow and continueth not!" We are often reminded of this solemn truth by the sudden removal of some of our acquaintances, and such was the case with the subject of this brief sketch. Death came with suddenness; he died, as it were, in the harness, enduring the hardships of farm life until stricken with severe illness which lasted but a few short days. George South was born in England about seventy years ago, and emigrated to this country when a young man, settled on a farm in the township of Scarborough, Ont., from which place he came to lot 12, centre road, Mono, where his subsequent life was passed, and where his death occurred on Sept. 21st last. We are all as mortals faulty, but whatever his failings may have been he possessed more of the vital religion than many of our clerical advisers. Wherever known he was respected. His life was characteristic of honesty, integrity, and uprightness, and our whole community mourns its loss as no common one. He has fallen asleep, but we should not be overcome of sorrow knowing that we shall meet again when the shackles and imperfections are all gone, and when the traditions of men are no more taught forever. We do not grieve as others which have no hope, knowing that earth and earth's people will be re-created and re-made, and the whole family of mankind restored to holiness and happiness, each in his own order, through the good Saviour "Who gave Himself a ransom for all." The funeral took place on the 23rd inst. to Forest Lawn cemetery and was attended by a large number of people. The service was conducted at the late gentleman's residence, Rev. P. Burt officiating. Deceased leaves a wife and grown up family of seven to mourn him. May the widow and the fatherless ever find grace to trust Him whose ways, though mysterious and past finding out by short sighted mortals, are nevertheless mercy and peace to such as keep His covenant and his testimony.

SPERO.

WHY COUGH,

WHEN a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will relieve you? Try it. Keep it in the house. You are liable to have a cough at any time, and no other remedy is so effective as this world-renowned preparation. No household, with young children, should be without it. Scores of lives are saved every year by its timely use.

Amanda B. Jenner, Northampton, Mass., writes: "Common gratitude impels me to acknowledge the great benefits I have derived for my children from the use of Ayer's most excellent Cherry Pectoral. I had lost two dear children from croup and consumption, and had the greatest fear of losing my only remaining daughter and son, as they were delicate. Happily, I find that by giving them Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, on the first symptoms of throat or lung trouble, they are relieved from danger, and are becoming robust, healthy children."

"In the winter of 1885 I took a bad cold which, in spite of every known remedy, grew worse, so that the family physician considered me incurable, supposing me to be in consumption. As a last resort I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, in a short time, the cure was complete. Since then I have never been without this medicine. I am fifty years of age, weigh over 180 pounds, and attribute my good health to the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."—G. W. Yeaker, Salem, N. J.

"Last winter I contracted a severe cold, which by repeated exposure, became quite obstinate. I was much troubled with hoarseness and bronchial irritation. After trying various medicines, without relief, I at last purchased a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. On taking this medicine, my cough ceased almost immediately, and I have been well ever since."—Rev. Thos. J. Russell, Secretary Holston Conference and P. E. of the Greeneville District, M. E. C., Jonesboro, Tenn.

WOULD RESIGN HIS CROWN.

The King of Roumania Desirous of Abdicating the Throne.

VIENNA, Sept 23.—It is stated that the King of Roumania, upset by the Queen's illness and court intrigues, has imparted to the Roumanian Premier and others his desire to abdicate the throne.

A CHIVALROUS KING.

It has long been seen that affairs in Roumania are drifting toward a serious crisis. The country is kept in a state of feverish excitement by the newspapers, some of which adhere to anti monarchical principles, while others are notoriously in foreign pay, and the rest are too weak to resist the temptation to publish sensational news in connection with the Queen's illness and the so called romance. The most absurd rumours, in fact, are being circulated. The Queen is publicly accused of crimes, and the strongest pressure is being brought to bear on the King to put an end to an intolerable situation by taking proceedings who is lying in a prostrate condition, and, in fact, alarmingly ill in Venice. Not only is her Majesty denied the comfort which would be enjoyed as a matter of course by every peasant woman in similar circumstances—that of seeing those she loves around her—but she is even pestered with demands which at any other time might have formed a subject for discussion, but which at present cannot but be felt by her as cruelty.

Three times has the King been on the point of leaving for Venice, but his entourage would not let his Majesty go before Milo. Vacaresco had left the Queen. So daring have the courtiers in Bucharest become, that they have spoken of the necessity of a divorce, to which the King has replied that he would rather abdicate if that be what is desired, toward a lady who has nothing whatever to reproach herself with, who had always been to him a true, loving wife, and to the country a real mother, and who, moreover, is now seriously ill and deserves sympathy from all sides.

THAN COMMIT SO COWARDLY AN ACT

Dr. Theodri, the Queen's Roumanian physician, believes that her Majesty is suffering from concussion of the spinal cord, accompanied by weakness of the heart, while other doctors state that, in their opinion, the malady is spinal meningitis, and all agree that excitement of any sort ought to be avoided for fear of a paralytic stroke, which might cause sudden death.

As matters stand at present the King and queen are surrounded by intriguers, and the Question suggests itself, who has an interest in bringing on a crisis in the Roumanian Royal House which might end in the King's abdication? With past experience as a guide the answer would be easy.

HENRY G. JAMES.

Henry G. James, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, writes:—"For several years I was troubled with pimples and irritations of the skin. After other remedies failed I used four bottles of Burdock Bitters and since then I have been quite free of my complaint. B. B. B. will always occupy a place in my house."

MILLINERY NOTES.

Bindings of a narrow ostrich trimming are chic.

Jet nail-heads or cabochons are sure of being in style.

Pompons are very good, also bird of Paradise aigrettes.

Felt hats are noticeable for their quantity and quality.

There are many jet and chinelle combination frames on view.

Hats trimmed only with ribbon demand a generous quantity.

Among the novelties are jet bonnets, chinelle and ostrich frames.

Fancy stiff wings and birds are extensively brought out by the importers.

Several pattern hats are trimmed with five-inch ribbon and jet ornaments.

Black hats will be greatly worn, and jet promises to be a fad of the season.

Plain tips and plumes do not promise well, but ostrich feathers in fancy effects do.

THE READING HABIT.

Of all the habits that can be cultivated, none is more productive of pleasure and improvement than that of reading, provided the books be well chosen.

Reading is a recreation—the rest and refreshment that make one feel like a new being—but it is much more. It is not only the wine of mental life, it is its daily bread. The study of text books will by no means take the place of general and varied reading. One may be master of several languages and yet not be well read. One may have many accomplishments, and even be proficient in one or more branches of science and yet be unintelligent on general subjects for lack of a habit of judicious reading. The quantity of reading that may be done in a year by the employment of even small portions of time is surprising to those who have not observed the matter.

The many remarkable cures of catarrh effected by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is conclusive proof that this loathsome and dangerous disease is one of the blood, only needing such a searching and powerful alterative to thoroughly eradicate it.

KANSAS PHILOSOPHY.

No man or woman ever had a friend that they could depend on under all circumstances.

The longer a man has been dead the less positive his friends are that he is with the angels.

How much the men admire a woman who does not expect a man to be better than men can be.

There is no greater misfortune that can befall a woman than to let a man marry her believing she is an angel.

When you hear a great deal of one side of a story, the other side receives from you a great deal of sympathy.

A friend is more apt to believe a bad story of you than an enemy. In hoping it is true, an enemy fears it is not; but a friend, hoping it is not true, believes it is.

Cotton Root Compound.

Composed of Cotton Root, Tansy and Pennyroyal—prepared by an old Physician. Is successfully used monthly by thousands of women and has been prescribed in a practice of over 30 years. Price, $1. Will be mailed to any address in Canada and U. S. Doctor's consultation hours, 9 to 11 and 2 to 4. Diseases of women treated only. Sealed particulars, two stamps. Ladies only, address Pope Lilly Company, No. 8, Fisher Block, 121 Woodward Avenue Detroit, Mich.

FASHION NOTES.

Necklaces are coming into fashion again.

Scotchia plaid will be considerably worn later on.

Black chiffon frills are worn with white dresses.

Diagonal or serpentine stripes are a Parisian fad just now.

Beads and metal fringe from 4½ to 18 inches in depth, are used as trimmings.

Nothing will be as standard in colors as brown for fall and winter dress goods.

Dress goods fabrics are now made in which scallops are woven in the material itself.

Sleeves are put in as high on the shoulders as ever, and are made very full about the top.

Flannelettes will be much used in England for drapery goods the coming fall and winter.

In Paris waistcoats are now being substituted for the prevalent loose chemisette or blouse.

Rough fancy cloths promise to be very fashionable throughout the autumn for long cloaks and mantles.

Jackets, which have been worn rather plain of late, are for the next few months to be heavily laden with gimp arabesques, richly braided or embroidered.

An American authority on the subject of dress decrees that jewelry shall be eliminated from the daylight toilets of fashionable women. Neither ear rings, bangles nor brooches are allowable, the only permissable thing being very tiny gold stick pins to fasten the bonnet strings, and a long, slender flower pin to pin on the bunch of field or other flowers now so much worn to hold down the numerous ruffles worn about the neck of wash dresses. The usual number of rings are worn during the day as the hand is supposed to be gloved while on the street. It is correct to wear the watch, with a very light chain and a small ornament attached. It is considered an indication of vulgarity to mix the flash and glitter of jewels with the sombre street costume of to day. They destroy all harmony in a toilet. The imitation jewel passementerie has grown very common indeed and spoils the effects of real jewels. Women of means and taste reserve their diamonds for evening wear, as they show to best advantage then.

It is not good form to kiss your relatives or friends on the street, or at any kind of a formal gathering. Only shake hands cordially and smile at them. In anyone happens to be sensitive enough to take offence, you can afford indifference, for an infringement of this rule is underbred.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—A frequent cause of gout and rheumatism is the inflammatory state of the blood, attended with bad digestion and general debility. A few doses of the Pills taken in time are an effectual preventive against gout and rheumatism. Any one who has an attack of either should use Holloway's Ointment also, the powerful action of which, combined with the operation of the Pills, must infallibly effect a cure. These Pills act directly on the blood which they purify and improve. Having once subdued the severity of these diseases, perseverence with the Ointment, after fomenting the affected joints with warm brine, will speedily relax all stiffness and prevent any permanent contraction.

TRUE FAITH.

"I have great faith in Burdock Blood Bitters as a blood purifier. I have taken three bottles for bad blood and find a perfect cure. It is a grand medicine, and I recommend wherever I go."—Ida Sanders, Toronto, Ont.

Mr Coatsworth on Sir Hector

The debate on the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections was continued by Mr. Coatsworth. He pointed out that the Quebec Harbor Commission had more to do with the details of the Quebec harbor works from day to day than had the Public Works Department, and yet it was not claimed that the commission was guilty of complicity in these frauds. Mr. Boswell was the resident engineer of the works, under whom worked the inspectors, who received the sum of $3000 in bribes; yet no one thought of charging Mr Boswell with complicity in the frauds, but it was claimed that it was impossible that frauds, the result of a deep laid conspiracy, could be carried on without the knowledge and connivance of Sir Hector Langevin.

He reviewed the evidence and declared after a three hours' speech in favor of the majority report.

Mr Irvine followed condemning Sir Hector Langevin severely, and concluded by moving an amendment the minority report.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

The Whitlock Company Had to Pay Commissions on Press Sales.

OTTAWA, Sept 23. At a sub-committee meeting of the Public Accounts Committee on Peter Mitchell of The Montreal Herald was examined in regard to a press he had purchased for his newspaper. It could be remembered that Mr Patterson, who was examined before the committee, stated that Peter Mitchell got a commission on the press purchased for that paper from the Whitlock Machine Company, Binghamton, N.Y. On Monday Mr. Mitchell, who was sworn, replied to Mr. Lister that there was no truth in the statement. Along with the manager of The Herald, Mr. White, he in the fall of 1887 went and purchased three presses, one costing $2205, another $2700 and another $3150 and another for $140. After making the negotiations and having gone to the company down to what they said were bottom prices, Mr. Ablatom, the manager of the company, asked if he (Mr. Mitchell) would take the commission or if he had a confidential man who would do it for him. Mr. Mitchell replied that he thought they had got bottom prices then. Yes, replied Mr. Ablatom, "but we generally allow a commission." "That is not customary on our side of the line," replied Mr. Mitchell. "I think you are wrong," was the answer. "The Printing Bureau took a commission on their press." Mr. Mitchell then asked The Herald manager to arrange with the company's manager and get the commission taken off the price of the amount, so that the newspaper would get the benefit of it. This was done. The presses were reduced in price by the amount of the commission, while those of the bureau would be increased by the amount of the commission, owing to its being diverted to another purpose by the parties who made the purchase.

This concluded the evidence and the committee adjourned.

Canadian Officers.

ALBANY, Sept. 23.—General J. O. Woodward, commander of the divisions of the Atlantic I.O.O.F., to-day made the appointments for division staff for the meeting four years. The appointments include R. B. Butterworth, Canadian banneret, Ottawa, Ont.; aides de camp William Brennan, Kingston, Ont.; F. A. Hutton, Hamilton, Ont., and G. H. Leader, Belleville, Ont.

Two Say Die.

MONTREAL, Sept. 23.—A French-Canadian family named Johin, living at 904 Sanguinet-street, partook of cabbage soup at dinner and shortly afterwards the mother and seven children were taken violently ill. A doctor was called in and pronounced the case one of poisoning. The two youngest children are not expected to recover. It is supposed that the cabbage was sprinkled with Paris green.

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood disease which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 126th Street, New York, certifies:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

TREASURER'S SALE OF LANDS

In Arrears for Taxes

In the County of Dufferin.

BY virtue of a Warrant issued by the Warden of the County of Dufferin, and authorized by the Seal of the said County, bearing date the 31st day of August, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, and to me directed for the collection of the arrears of taxes due for three years and over upon the lands hereinafter mentioned and described, being in the County of Dufferin; these are therefore to give notice that, unless the said taxes, together with all costs and charges, be sooner paid, I shall, on SATURDAY, the FIFTH day of DECEMBER, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, at the hour of TWO o'clock in the afternoon, at the Court House, in the Town of ORANGEVILLE, in the said County, proceed to sell by Public Auction the said lands, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge such arrears of taxes and costs and charges incurred.

Orangeville, 2nd September, 1891.

The Restof Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof. Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has conclusively shown that when cows are denied salt for a period of even one week they will yield from 1 to 1½ per cent less milk and fat of inferior quality. Such milk will on cream raise, turn sour in twenty four hours less than milk from cows receiving salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analysed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock fine and coarse, at

G. R. MONKMAN'S Flour, Feed and Seed Emporium,

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

This Great Household Medicine Ranks among the leading necessaries of life. These famous Pills purify the BLOOD and act most powerfully yet soothingly on the

LIVER, STOMACH,
KIDNEYS AND BOWELS,

Giving tone, energy and vigor to the grand MAINSPRINGS OF LIFE. They are confidently recommended as a never-failing remedy in all cases where the constitution has become impaired or weakened. They are wonderfully efficacious in all ailments incidental to females of all ages; and as a GENERAL FAMILY MEDICINE, are unsurpassed.

HOLLOWAYS' OINTMENT

Its searching and Healing Properties are known throughout the World.

For the cure of BAD LEGS, Bad Breasts, OLD WOUNDS, SORES, SORES AND ULCERS,

It is an infallible remedy. If effectually rubbed on the back and chest as salt into meat, it cures SORE THROAT, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and even Asthma. For Glandular swellings, Abscesses, Piles, Fistulas,

GOUT, RHEUMATISM

And every kind of SKIN DISEASE, it has never been known to fail.

The Pills and Ointment are manufactured only at 533 OXFORD STREET, LONDON.

And are sold by all Vendors of Medicine throughout the Civilized World; with directions for use in almost every language.

The Trade Marks of these medicines are registered in Ottawa. Hence any one throughout the British Possessions who may keep the American counterfeit for sale will be prosecuted.

BEAMAN

All men can't be Apollos of strength and form, but all may have robust health and strong nerves and clear minds. Our treatment makes such men. The methods are our own exclusively, and where anything is left to build upon, the VIGOR OF MEN is easily, quickly, permanently restored. Weakness, Nervousness, Debility, and all the train of evils from early errors or later excesses, the result of over-work, sickness, worry, etc., forever cured. Full strength development, and tone given to every organ and portion of the body. Simple, natural methods. Immediate improvement seen. Failure impossible. 2,000 references. ### Newspaper Decisions

1. Any person or persons who take a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intended fraud.

COW BELLS.

I mind me well, as a barefoot lad,
When the toil of the day was over,
How I dropped the bars by the barnyard path
And walked to the dewy clover,
While far away rose the sound of bells
Faint as the murmur of sea-worn shells—
"Tin, tin, tin," came the echo thin,
And then, as they drifted nearer,
"Tin-a-ling, ling," would the charmering
Through the distance clearer and clearer.

And by the ford where the gray mill loomed
I drove them down to the edges,
And the great round moon peeped over a cloud
As they stood knee deep in sedges;
And the bells kept time in rude rhyme,
Like rain drops dashed on a window pane—
"Clink, clank, clink," as they went to drink
Where the spray from the dam came foaming,
And "clink, clank, clink," as they climbed the bank
In the starlit, shadowy gloaming.

And on through the pastures back we came
Where the cricket's maying shrillness
Sprang up from the roots of the ribbon-grass
And dinned in the twilight stillness;
But the jangling cow-bells drowned his cry
With discords harsh as they hurried by—
"Cling, clang, clong," as they swayed along
With the bats and the night-hawks o'er them.
And "cling, clang, clang," how the music rang
As they surged by the bars before them.

And there as I raised the rough-hewn poles
And pushed them into their sockets,
And lazily sat on the old rail fence
With hands thrust deep in my pockets,
I listened still for a straying note,
And while from the dusk would softly float
"Co-link," and then through the smaze again,
In the hush of the summer weather,
"Co-lank"—'twas all and in God's far hall
The star-choirs sang together.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

Florian Langley was a spoilt child. An only daughter among a family of many sons, she had been petted by father, mother, and brothers, wit out apparently any detriment to her temper, beyond a certain pretty willfulness and sauciness, often seen in those who know they have only to speak in order to please. To her mother she was the dearest of friends, the bird who solaced her blindness, the flower, whose beauty she felt, though it might never be seen. In return, Florian had a curious, wistful, pitiful affection for her mother not often found in so young a heart. She had early recognized the truth, that she could never leave her for the sake of any other love. This silent resolve so colored Florian's manners, when she came in contact with men, that not one of her acquaintances had presumed to declare himself her admirer. Neither was there any jealousy among them, for she showed herself alike indifferent to all.

On the morning after Vivian Damerel's interrupted journey to Killarney, Florian was in her mother's room, when a servant brought a card to the door.

"Mr. Lynher, ma'am, has called, and wishes to see you very particular," said the servant.

"What can he want?" said Mrs. Langley, a little flurried. "Go, Florian dear, and see."

Florian obeyed, and in a pretty morning room she found two gentlemen awaiting her.

"My dear child," said Mr. Lynher, coming forward to take her hand, "it is your mother whom I wish to see. Allow me to introduce to you Mr. Damerel, an English gentleman come to see the lakes."

Florian bowed; and now, for the first time, gazing at the stranger, she saw the dark, cold face that had looked so strangely yesterday at Opal Vansittart. A beautiful bright color rose to Florian's cheeks.

"I think I saw you in the train last evening," she said. "It passes so near our garden that we can distinguish faces quite well."

For the first time under a woman's eye Vivian Damerel felt abashed.

"I believe I saw you on the lawn with—with Miss Vansittart," said he. "I think I know that lady."

"Indeed!" exclaimed Florian, surprised.

"Wait awhile, my dear sir, until you see the lady again," said Mr. Lynher somewhat suddenly. "There is nothing so deceiving, sir, as a chance likeness. Miss Florian, I am sure you will kindly ask your mother to let me see her for a moment."

But here Vivian Damerel interrupted him. He was impatient to divulge the truth; every moment spent by Olive beneath this roof seemed to him a contamination for Florian, a contamination that irritated him most keenly.

"Miss Langley," he said, in a tone of deep respect, "I consider I owe it to you to speak without circumlocution, and to act promptly. Mr. Lynher, with mistaken kindness, delays too long in telling you that in Miss Vansittart I have recognized a woman who is to four a criminal escaped from justice."

Florian's large blue eyes looked at him in wonder, and then turned from him slowly in indignation and disgust.

"Miss Vansittart has been my daily companion for three months, sir," said she; "is that time, I ought to know something of her; and I affirm, that you insult me, not her, when you dare bring against her so cruel an accusation."

Never had Vivian Damerel felt so miserably insignificant in his own eyes as he did now. He lost his calm, gentlemanly ease, at the first sound of Florian's disdainful voice, and rising, he exclaimed passionately:

"Miss Langley, let me see your governess, I entreat you; and, if I am mistaken, if I have done that young lady a wrong, no one shall rejoice as I shall, even though I remain under your displeasure forever."

"Ah! that is best, my dear," said Mr. Lynher. "Let us see Miss Van Sittart; that will settle the matter at once. And, after all, you must not be so very angry with this young gentleman. You know he might have put the affair in the hands of the police, and not have troubled himself to come either to me or to you."

On hearing this, Florian looked at Vivian Damerel coldly, and bowed to him with quiet courtesy.

Florian now folded a tiny note which she had written to Miss Vansittart, imploring her to dress, in spite of her indisposition, and descend to the morning room.

While the servant who took the note was absent the embarrassed trio remained silent. Mr. Lynher was perplexed and anxious, Florian disdainful, Vivian Damerel utterly wretched. He began to hate Olive as he had never hated her before. There was a gleam of savage satisfaction in his heart, as he thought that in a few moments more she would be handed over to the charge of the constable, who sat in the lodge by the park gate; and the beautiful girl, who now looked on him with contempt, must certainly then turn and thank him for ridding her of a murderess.

"If you please, Miss Florian, Miss Vansittart is not in her room at all," said the servant, entering with alarm on her face. "I knocked iver so many times, and niver a word did she spake. Then I spied the key on the door mat and I made bould to inter, and the room is impty, miss, and the thrunk, too—a big bundle she must have carried with her, sure, and the window wide, miss, and this letter on the table."

With a face pale as death, Florian snatched the letter eagerly, tore it open and read:

"DEAR FLORIAN.—I have fled, and I leave behind me no protestations of innocence. I ask you only to judge myself and not to take your opinion from the judgment of another. Yesterday you said you would believe in me still, even if you were told some strange and dreadful history, which might shake the belief of older friends than you. I do not ask you to day to keep your word; it might be too hard a task in one so young, overwhelmed as your mind will be with assertion, hatred and proofs; but I ask a harder thing of you Florian—I ask you not to say that my lips seemed to you truthful, my heart innocent. I ask you not to take my part nobly, as your soul will prompt you to do, but rather hear all that is related to you, and keep silent. Let him who thinks me guilty, think so still. If you shake that belief, Florian, you will do me an irreparable wrong, and all that I have suffered I shall have suffered in vain. Let accusation be heaped on accusation, and proof on proof, till my name falls crushed beneath them. I can bear it, and live still in hope. What I could not bear would be the misery of having endured so much in vain. Therefore, Florian, with all my strength I implore you to be silent. A thousand words could not say more.

"Farewell. Your friend, O. V."

"P. S.—We may never meet again; but if some time in this wide world you meet Charles Vigo, my hero, be his friend for my sake."

Florian's eyes filled with passionate tears as she read this letter. Then she folded it, and, holding it tightly grasped in her hand, she looked up and caught the earnest gaze of Vivian Damerel. His face was sad, but stern and resolute.

"Have you anything to tell us, Miss Langley?" he asked, gravely.

"Nothing; except that Miss Vansittart has fled," replied Florian.

"I understood that at once," said Damerel. "Might it not further the ends of justice if you permitted your friend, Mr Lynher, to see this letter?"

An indignant flush rose to Florian's brow at his words.

"I do not betray the confidence of the unhappy," she said, "even if they are guilty."

"Good heavens!" exclaimed Damerel "what perverted sympathy is this? How is it that this wretched girl is able thus to win noble natures to a belief in her? She has ruined and lost me my dearest friend, Charles Vigo, and now—"

Vivian Damerel did not finish the sentence; he checked himself suddenly as though in the heat of the moment his speech had carried him too far.

"Is Mr. Vigo a friend of yours?" asked Florian, eagerly.

"He was," replied Damerel. "But why do you ask me? Do you know him? Has he been here?"

"I do not know him," returned Florian. "I only ask because it seems strange that a man which Miss Vansittart praises so highly should be a friend of yours."

"We are friends no longer," said Damerel, bitterly. "She has parted us. She has infatuated him even to madness; but for him she could never have escaped the consequences of her crime; but for him she could never have descorated your home with her presence. It is his head that has placed her there. Miss Langley, I cannot find it in my heart even to name her guilt to you, because she has taken advantage of your innocence to gain your friendship; she has dared, through falsehood and cunning, to make herself your daily companion; and it would be an outrage on your feelings to relate to you the story of her crime."

"You are mistaken," said Florian, coldly. "I should simply not believe a word of it."

"You would not believe me!" exclaimed Damerel, a dark flush rising on his face.

"Pardon me," said Florian, hurriedly. "I know you would yourself imagine you were telling the truth; you would believe all you were relating, but I should know you were deceiving yourself, and allowing your judgment to be blinded by circumstances."

She checked herself with sudden eagerness, as the thought of Olive's letter recurred to her mind.

"You speak generously, but you speak in ignorance, do you not?" said Damerel, anxiously.

"In perfect ignorance," replied Florian; "except that Opal Vansittart was my daily companion for three months."

"And that gives you confidence in her?" said Damerel.

"That, and Charles Vigo's love for her," replied Florian, mischievously. "Noble heart finds noble heart, you know."

"Love!" exclaimed Damerel; "it is infatuation, a boyish madness not love. He will wake up from it to bear the shame and pain of it all his life long. Oh, Miss Langley, if you only knew what I would give to save him. But I waste time here with you. Mr. Lynher——"

"Mr. Lynher is gone up to my mother's sitting-room, to speak to her on this matter," said Florian. "He told me so five minutes ago, as he left the room."

Vivian Damerel felt the blood tingle his cheeks at this; he was ashamed that in his eagerness to talk to Miss Langley he had failed to see Mr. Lynher's departure, and he had omitted to urge him to take prompt measures to overtake Olive Varcoe.

"Miss Langley," he cried vehemently. "I trust Mr. Lynher will not forget his duty as magistrate, in his anxiety to save your mother pain."

"My mother will ask nothing of Mr Lynher, sir," she replied; "neither will I ask anything of you. I believe Miss Vansittart perfectly capable of escaping you both."

"It is possible," said Damerel, "for she is full of artifice and cunning. Good heavens! how grieved I am she should ever have poured her poison into your pure mind."

"She is a noble and good woman!" exclaimed Florian, warmly. "You malign her. You know little of her indeed, and you know nothing of me. Yet I hear you constantly giving me credit for numberless virtues. You do this because you see me in a good position, surrounded by love, affluence and care. If you saw me poor, wretched and defenceless, you would give me credit for every vice, as you do her."

"Do you really suppose I reason on such poor logic?" said Damerel.

"Yes," replied Florian. "In the last few minutes you have flattered me often, though you know nothing of me beyond the visible circumstances surrounding me. From your own words, therefore, I judge that you are a superficial observer."

Florian's words struck Damerel sharply, and for a moment he was too abashed to reply. Now, with a sudden self consciousness, he checked his admiration, and wondered at his own eagerness to please.

"Believe me," he cried, eagerly, "I do not form my opinions from externals only. If you were the poorest among the poor, your face would tell me——"

Florian turned from him with a smile, and greeted Mr. Lynher, who at that moment entered.

"Pray go to your mother," said that gentleman; "she is much agitated; she asks for you."

Florian left the room instantly, bowing as she passed to Mr. Damerel, and holding out her hand to her old friend the magistrate.

"It will be a sad thing to ruin the prospects of so beautiful a girl," said Mr. Lynher, as the door closed.

"Why should her prospects be ruined? asked Damerel.

"Have you told her the history of Olive Varcoe?" inquired Mr. Lynher.

"No," replied Damerel.

"That is right," said the magistrate. "She must never know it; she must never be told who was her daily companion for three months. Mrs. Langley never allowed a newspaper to enter her house; so she has seen nothing of this story. Now she has resolved to take her daughter abroad, that she may not be exposed to the scandal this affair will create."

"Abroad!" exclaimed Vivian.

"Yes," replied Mr. Lynher. "Why need the neighborhood know of this?" expostulated Damerel.

"If you go to the police," said Mr. Lynher, "and send a hue and cry after this girl, how can the neighborhood help knowing it? The result will be a dreadful humiliation to Mrs. Langley. Florian is her only daughter. Imagine the anger of her sons, the rebukes of relations, the pity of friends, and the distress and shadow that will be thrown over Florian's young life. It is frightful—frightful!"

The worthy Mr. Lynher paced the room with agitated steps as he spoke. Damerel was silent for a moment. Never had any girl made his heart flutter as this girl had done; and now it seemed he was the instrument chosen to do her an injury. This, too, was Olive's doing; and the hatred long growing in his veins against her, gathered strength at the thought.

"It was a cruel, cruel thing!" he exclaimed, fiercely, "to plant that wicked woman in a house like this. I wish my hand was on the throat of the man who did it."

Good heavens! it was his friend who did it!—that Charles Vigo who had been his school fellow, his college chum, his more than brother.

Vivian Damerel ground his teeth together at the remembrance, and turned gloomily towards Mr. Lynher.

"I have been thinking," said he, "whether, for the sake of these injured ladies, we could let this woman escape; but I do not see how such a dereliction of duty will become either you or me, Mr. Lynher."

"As for me," resumed that gentleman, quietly, "I know nothing of Miss Vansittart; I shall not take upon myself the responsibility of arresting her on the mere assertion of a stranger—of whom I know nothing—that, in passing in a railway train, he fancied he saw a likeness between her and the Cornish girl, who has fled on a charge of murder. The thing is absurd. There is no proof whatever, beyond your word, that Opal Vansittart is Olive Varcoe."

"The fact is, sir, you are determined to screen your friends from annoyance at the cost of justice," retorted Damerel. "You know this governess is the woman we seek, else why has she fled?"

"I know nothing of the kind," replied Mr. Lynher, avoiding an answer to the last question. "There is not a title of evidence to show it, except your fanciful idea of a likeness, which I have not the slightest reason to believe exists. Moreover, the references and letters received with her, leave no doubt on my mind that Miss Vansittart is the person she represents herself to be. Therefore, sir, I decline to have anything to do with this quixotic pursuit of yours—a pursuit of an inoffensive young lady."

"Very well, sir," said Damerel, as his face grew pale with suppressed passion. "I perceive you are resolved to avoid an unpleasant duty; you throw the whole responsibility on me, I take it. I only regret that, by listening to you, I have given this woman a clear four hours' start. I am sorry I cannot spare Miss Langley pain; but I can at least convince her of the true character of the woman whom false friends persuade her to protect."

He took up his hat, bowed, and left the room.

"Faith, and I've done it neatly," replied Mr. Lynher to himself in a vexed tones. "I thought I could manage an Englishman better than that. Well, the young Langley's will twist that London lawyer's neck; that's the only bit of comfort I see in the whole matter."

Vivian Damerel left the house and walked down the park with many bitter feelings swelling at his heart. Why was he chosen to hunt down Olive Varcoe, at the cost of friendship, and perhaps—a voice whispered—of love also? What was Eleanor Maristowe to him, that he should avenge her death? Why had Sir Hilton Trewavas, and Charles Vigo, and the rest, including this idiot magistrate, shuffled off their burden on him, and forced him take up a duty which they either denied or ignored?

Exasperated by his own thoughts, Damerel walked mechanically and swiftly to the police-station, where he lodged his information, and then saying resolutely that he had done his duty, and it was a matter of no consequence what Miss Langley thought of it, he lighted a cigar, and smoked it out gloomily.

HENRY O. JAMES.

Henry O. James, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, writes:—"For several years I was troubled with pimples and irritations of the skin. After other remedies failed I used four bottles of Burdock Bitters and since then I have been quite free of my complaint. B. B. B. will always occupy a place in my house."

An amusing incident happened on Ferry Hill at Windsor on Saturday morning. A French woman had been over the river purchasing, and not wishing to bother the customs officials she carefully placed her purchases in her bustle. She did not tie it securely, and got about half way up the hill when it took a tumble and enough goods to stock a small general store rolled from under her dress. She gave a hurried glance back at the customs office and then gathering the things up she ran behind some the British American Hotel alley.

SHELBURNE.

(From Free and Responsible.)

A BULLET IN HIS LEG.—Willie Fair, aged about 13 years, and some other boys were fooling with a 22 calibre revolver on Tuesday, when the weapon was discharged, one of the bullets lodging in the fleshy part of young Fair's leg. Fair said nothing recording the occurrence to his parents until yesterday, when he was taken to Drs. Berry & Norton and the bullet was extracted. No serious results are anticipated. Some of these boys might have been killed, however.

STRUCK THE RATE.—The chief business dealt with at the last council meeting was that of striking the rate of taxation for 1891:—Following are the amounts required to be raised:—County purposes, $470.72; school purposes, $2185.46; village purposes, $840.56; town hall debentures, $504.33; fire protection debentures, $268.98; waterworks debentures, $773.32; waterworks repairs, $1344.88. The by-law passed calls for a uniform rate of 19 mills in the dollar.

THE REFUGE OF THE UNFORTUNATE.—Of the twelve persons at present confined in the jail at Orangeville, not one of them is serving time for criminal offences. One man and two women are insane and the remainder were committed as vagrants. From this it would seem that there is no distinction made between poverty, misfortune and crime, and that all meet with a common fate at the county town.

THANKING HIS FRIENDS.—The following letter has been received from Rev. Jas. Thompson, formerly of Honeywood:—"I am greatly indebted to my many friends in and around Honeywood. I had intended to revisit the place and personally thank them, but I cannot leave home, even for half a day. Mrs. Thompson remains helpless as a child, from the accidental poisoning in June last. It will be months yet before she is able to help herself. My friends will please accept my sincere gratitude through the medium of your valuable paper."

AT HOME.—Dr. Norton and his bride received a most enthusiastic reception from the inhabitants of Shelburne on their arrival home on Wednesday evening of last week. They were met at the station by the Citizens' band and a concourse of between five and six hundred people and escorted to their residence on Owen Sound street. Dr Norton subsequently entertained the members of the band with a supper at Fead's restaurant. Both Dr. Norton and his wife are greatly pleased with the reception accorded to them. Mrs. Norton being so highly gratified that she thinks the residents of Shelburne must be very pleasant people to live amongst.

KINGSTON Sept. 27.—Last evening's Whig published the following:—

The late Sir John A. Macdonald was a lover of children, and was most tender and gentle when in their presence. He enjoyed their antics and cute sayings. The Whig has recently come into possession of this correspondence, which shows his character in a delightful light. It appears that Miss Lottie H. Prentiss, aged ten, the quick and bright daughter of Mr Howard Prentiss, postmaster at Chelsea, Que., discovered that the birthday of the Premier was the same as her own. She decided to write him a letter and told her father. He jokingly told her to go ahead. She did so and sent the letter to her father's office to be posted. I was put to one side, but Miss Lottie discovering this insisted that it should be despatched, and it was. A copy of the little lady's letter was not kept but it contained passages like this:

Dear Sir John:—I write these few lines to let you know that next Sunday you and I will be the same age. There isn boy in this village named Charlie Church that is the same age as we are next Sunday, and we are going to have a party if ma is well enough. When he is twenty I am ten, Charlie Church I mean.

Last year ma told me you get ever so many letters on your birthday, so I thought I would write early before the crowd came.

"I hope you will answer this letter, because there is a young man in Toronto, going to college, that asked me to write to him, and I did, and he never answered it. Don't you think he was mean?"

In a few days later this reply came:

EARNSCLIFFE, Ottawa, 6th Jan., '91.

"My Dear Little Friend,—I am glad to get your letter, and to know that next Sunday you and I will be the same age. I trust and believe, however, that you will see many more birthdays than I shall, and I trust that every birthday may find you prosperous and happy. I think it was mean of that young fellow not to answer your letter; you see I have been longer in the world than he has and know more than he does of what is due to young ladies.

"I send you a dollar note, with which pray buy some small keepsake to remember me by, and believe me, yours sincerely, JOHN A. MACDONALD.

Miss Lottie was very proud over the reply, and with the gift purchased a picture frame. The photographer of the Premier gave her one of Sir John's latest photographs and it now occupies a prominent place in Mr. Prentiss' home. The reply of Sir John has also been photographed.

"Save who can!" was the frantic cry of Napoleon to his army at Waterloo. Save health and strength while you can, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is advice that applies to all, both young and old. Don't wait until disease fastens on you; begin at once.

—Three Guelph men, who are nearing the end of their term in the Central Prison, were given their third and last flogging Tuesday morning. The three men committed an assault on a girl named Elizabeth Richardson two years ago, were sentenced to two years in the Central Prison and three floggings each with the cat. The three are:—William Turnbull, a small man, aged 27; Sheehy, aged 26; and the only married man of the three; and Leader, aged 23, who has made a good record since being in prison. The two first named moaned and shrieked as the cat fell across their backs, and Leader took his punishment without saying a word, though his was the only case in which the whip drew blood. The three men are to be released October 2nd.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE deposits in the Post Office savings banks in August amounted to $534,073, and the withdrawals to $516,617. This is the first time in several months that the deposits have exceeded the withdrawals.

THE Quebec Telegraph hints that before Count Mercier will allow himself to be turned out he will "shake down the whole tottering fabric of Confederation." It warns the Lieutenant Governor not to worry Mercier too much, as he has not got a child to deal with, and publishes veiled threats of terrible things that may happen if Mercier is pushed too far.

IT should be borne in mind that while ordinary witnesses at courts for the revision of the Dominion voters' lists are entitled to their fees, no fees or expenses are allowed to persons whose right to be on the list is in question, or to persons who have given notice of objection or complaint regarding the names of others. These persons, if summoned, must obey the summons without being tendered or paid any allowance for expenses.

THE Arthur Enterprise says it is not an ardent admirer of Mr. McMullen as a politician, but thinks he should feel flattered as being described by his opponents as the "man of details." Had some other men looked more closely after details there would not have been so many dirty disclosures at Ottawa. Our M. P. probably does annoy the the ...ired helps by nosing about, but the only fault we can see in this is that he never discovers anything worth mentioning. If he perseveres he may find a boodler yet, Tarte and Lister surely left at least one little one or Mac."

The record of business troubles for the third quarter of 1891, as reported by R. G. Dun & Co., show 395 failures with liabilities of $2,762,000. This shows a decrease of 18 in the number and $449,000 in liabilities compared with the same period in 1890, according to this agency. The inference would be that trade conditions had improved in 1891. This should be more satisfactory because the effects of the good harvest would hardly have time to make themselves felt, except by anticipation, before the last quarter of the year. There should be an improvement for the next three months. It has to be said, also, that there is room for one. Canada's record of commercial mortality is far too high.

SNEER not at the cross roads school house, oh most learned Toronto trustee! That typical pioneer house of learning is used mostly as a wood shed now. It has been supplanted by a red faced brick structure with a wooden wart built to hold a bell on the roof. Primitive, painful and inefficient was its old system of heating and ventilation. A hole in the window cooled the scholar at ... he had been warmed by a collision with a blue beech gad. The system was not up to the Toronto standard, but the calisthenic exercise in which the pupil indulged in while he was cooling his brases were more startling than the movements now taught. Sneer not at the cross roads school house. Men who enjoy the memory better than they did the experiences of country life, love it. They love it all the better because it is so far removed from the joys of to day, and they do not enjoy it when their idol is rudely buffeted by the tongue of an able trustee.—Telegram.

IT is positively painful to observe the efforts of the Liberals to blacken the character and memory of Sir John Macdonald. According to these ghoulish the stealings of Seneca and the corruption of Thomas McGreevy are directly traceable to the methods and life of the late Premier. No more dispicable argument could be put forward than this, and we utterly misunderstand the temper of the Canadian people if they do not meet it with the resentment that it deserves. Everyone who cares for the truth knows that Sir John Macdonald had as little to do with any of the misdoings brought to light at Ottawa as had Hon. Alexander Mackenzie. The men who have been guilty of malefeasance would have chopped off their right hands rather than let the Premier know what they were doing. The Liberals in Parliament know this, and are absolutely mum at Ottawa; but out in the constituencies they are reckless in their assertions. We have no doubt that these efforts to slander the dead statesman will recoil upon the men who make them.

Dr. Burchard is dead. He was the minister who tried to help Blaine and elected Cleveland. His speech in which he said the Democratic side was supported by "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion," was made a few days before polling in 1884, and the Republican leaders had not time to repudiate it. It was so apt, so alliterative and so annoying to three dangerous elements in the electorate, and was made so much of by the Doctor's opponents, that it is not an outrage one claim to say that it decided the close contest in New York, which decided the presidency. Dr. Burchard found himself deposed as a foolish one by the Republicans, whom he hurt, without gaining the respect of the Democrats, whom he helped. Canadian ministers who are being urged to take part in the political fight should study Dr. Burchard's case and be sure before they speak that their words are not boomeranged.

The last Indian census shows that in the past ten years the natural growth of India's population has been 27,500,000. The population now numbers 286,000,000. One can hardly appreciate what these figures mean except by comparison. India contains more people than all Europe, exclusive of Russia. Its provinces are as populous as great European States. Bengal contains a population larger than that of the United States and all British North America, and fully one-fifth of the entire human race lives upon this little peninsula jutting out from the coast of Asia into the Indian Ocean.

THE COW BY-LAW!

IT'S NOW ON THE WAY TO BE CARRIED OR REJECTED.

A NEW HOSE-REEL WANTED—KING AND THE GROUND—ACCOUNTS, ETC., ETC.,

Your humble servant was rather late in arriving at the council chamber on Monday evening, but he got there before Reeve Lindsay and, of course, was comparatively happy. All the members were present, except the reeve and Ald. Ketchum, and when the former put in an appearance the council was just in the act of carrying a motion to adjourn. The following accounts run the gauntlet successfully:—Mungovan Bros., $6; I. Collister, 80c; Jas. Graham, 30c.; D McDonald, $310.70; D. McIlride, $31 50; I. C. Baker, $6; D. McDonald, $40 70; A. & W. Johnston, 20 16; R. Irvine, 10.60; D. McDonald, $187.45.

THE T. P.'S OFFER.

Deputy-reeve Endacott, chairman of the T. P. committee, brought down a report from that body, which recommended that T. T. King's request to lease a piece of ground behind the fire hall be complied with, upon condition that Mr. K. cover over the creek from the waterworks, and deposit costs with the clerk. The council went into committee of the whole and adopted the report. A bylaw confirming same will be introduced at the next meeting. The report also announced that the fire hall had been completed, and asked power to take it over from the contractor.

THE COWS.

Ald. Yeomans, for many days, has been threatening to introduce a bylaw to prohibit the running at large of cattle, and sure enough he brought it in on Monday night and had it read a first and second time. Contrary to all expectations it was not a formidable looking document tied up with red tape or anything of the kind. It was only a single sheet of paper containing not over two dozen words, amending a clause in the old cow bylaw to close the bouvines up for twelve months in the year. There was no discussion on the subject, but at the next meeting look out for fun.

WANT A REEL.

Mayor Walsh referred to the second-class hose reel which the firemen have to lug to every fire, and requested Ald. Gillespie to bring in a report from the F. and W. committee on the matter His worship also referred to those snow-shovelling accounts, and said the amount was charged to the proper lots.

Ald. Green moved a resolution of thanks to the pastor and church wardens of St. Mark's church for their kindness in allowing the use of the bell while our new fire hall was in course of construction. It was unanimously carried.

The T. P. committee will build a sidewalk beside the fire hall on John st.

The council then adjourned and the band played "McCarthy's Widow."

CAMILLA.

A DEAD HORSE.—Mr. Wm. Cook lost a very valuable horse one night recently. The animal was all right when put in the field, but next morning was found dead.

TILLING THE SOIL.—Fall plowing has commenced in earnest and the boys are having great fun following the earth's pulverizer. "Would it be designated laziness to purchase a sulky plow?

BOB BREMNER'S ESSAY.—It is rumored that Bob Bremner is writing an essay entitled "An Adventure with a Gorilla." Considering Bob's qualifications for the subject and his former success as an essayist, we expect something good. Bob, please send it to THE SUN for publication.

AROUND AGAIN.—Harry Culp had a relapse, but is again able to sit up .....E. J. Cuboun has recovered from his recent illness and everybody is glad to see "Eddy" around again.....Mr Robt Stevens is laid up with a severe cold which has settled on his lungs. We hope in a short time to report his recovery.

SERIOUSLY KICKED.—On Sunday Mr. Wm. Forsyth received a terrible kick on the thigh from a horse. The force of which sent him rather swiftly against a stone wall. He received severe bruises about the head and was otherwise injured, and remained unconscious for over an hour. He is on the road to recovery.

A COMPLIMENT.—Every day THE SUN is becoming more popular with the people here because it gives all the news of this section; but still there is a number of sponges with us who borrow their neighbor's paper. We would advise those designs to cease their sponging and subscribe for the paper or remain in ignorance. Mr Editor, would it be a good idea to publish their names?

REVISING THE LISTS.—On Wednesday of last week Judge McCarthy of Orangeville held court for the revision of the Dominion voters' lists for the Camilla and Elba districts. There was very little change in the latter, only a couple of Reformers being knocked off In Camilla, however, the bad Tories routed the poor Grits foot, horse and artillery, and it is lucky it stopped when it did. Three Reformers' names were added to the list, but 17 were kicked over the traces. Three Conservatives were left off and 6 added, which puts the latter party far ahead. The Liberals summoned a number of opponents as witnesses, but the latter would not take the oath until fees were paid, which were handed over by the losing party. When the result was known Bremner looked 10 years older; Doney, it is said; turned grey-headed from sheer anxiety. Others took a sneak and hid themselves.

Headache, dizziness, ringing noises in the ears, hawking and spitting are sure symptoms of catarrh. There is no case Nasal Balm will not cure if given a fair trial. Beware of imitations.

The Guelph court house has been thoroughly overhauled and fitted up in first class style.

PERSONAL.

Ex Reeve Foster was in town yesterday.

Mr. Eli Dodds of Chicago, Ill., renewed acquaintances here this week.

Miss Nellie Cavanagh of Alliston is visiting friends at Orangeville and Cardwell.

Miss Nellie Witter of Shelburne was the guest of friends in town this and last week.

Mr. L. A. Baker of Baker's collecting agency, Toronto, called on THE SUN last week.

Miss Lou Bennett returned Friday from Toronto, where she was the guest of city friends.

Contractor Thos. Harshaw of the C. P. R., Toronto Junction, was in town yesterday.

Mr. A. E. Hannalson, B. A., of Broadview, N. W. T., is visiting in town and vicinity.

Messrs. John Rutledge and John Wallace of Fort Dodge, Iowa, are visiting relatives at Caledon.

Mr. Wm. Marshall, town, who has been on the sick list the past few days, we are glad to see, is able to be around again.

Mr. J. D. German and bride arrived home from their wedding tour on Tuesday and will take up their residence on Mill street.

Mr and Mrs. Thos. Dick of Detroit, Mich., who are on a visit to Canadian friends, are in town. Tom's numerous friends here were pleased to see him.

Miss Podlowe, who was said to have accepted a position at the Rockwood asylum, Kingston, is at present in town and intends to remain in Orangeville.

HORNING'S MILLS.

A BLESSED PLACE.—Horning's Mills is a blessed place—from churches and a harmonous community.

THRESHING.—The harvest is a thing of the past and we are in the midst of threshing. Grain is turning out fairly well.

OFFICIATED.—Mr. John Sallows of this place filled an appointment at the Methodist church, Melancthon, last Sabbath.

THE FARMERS' MILL.—The farmers' grist mill will be in operation as soon as circumstances will permit, which we hope will be very soon

ALL RIGHT AGAIN.—Mr. James Fleming, who has been suffering from malarial fever, is, we are happy to state, able to be around again.

THE MINES.—We are afraid the silver mine enterprise will fall through yet, but what a blessing it would be if we could strike a gold mine.

LASSO HIM!—There is a wandering thief or two in this locality, but they may fool around too long and be captured. A stitch in time saves nine.

THE POTATO ROT.—Many of the farmers took advantage of the fine weather last week and raised their potatoes. The spuds, in many instances, are blighted with rot but we think an early raising will tend to preserve them from future damage.

WHAT WE NEED.

A barber shop.
A new pair of boots.
Less gossip in the village.

The big hill cut down and made straight and abandon the old custom of going around the lake. And other things too numerous to mention.

SHELBURNE.

(From the Free Press and Economist.)

HOTEL CHANGE.—Mr. Robt. Gillespie, of Shelburne, has purchased the Fairview hotel at Creemore from Mr. Matchett. The price paid we understand was $6,000.

WATERING MILK.—A Rosebrook patron of the Lavender cheese factory residing near here, has got into trouble by watering and skimming the milk he sends to the factory. The government inspector, being informed of the matter, came and tested the milk, which was found to be lessened in value one half through adulteration. A fine of $15 and costs was imposed, amounting in all to $22, which the patron refused to pay.

A FIENDISH ACT.—During Tuesday night some fiend or fiends took Mr. J. N. Hooper's horse from its stable on Mr. J N Tuck's premises, and after riding it around for a time gave the animal two nasty cuts with a knife. The animal was found on the street in the morning. This is a serious offence in the eyes of the law, and severe punishment can be meted out to the offender. He should be publicly flogged.

OUR OPINION OF HIM.—We are inclined to believe the crippled fellow named Riley, who was around town a couple of weeks recently soliciting the charities of the people, is a fakir pure and simple. He got up a "benefit concert" for himself, in which, (as our contemporary remarked last week) he is remembered, he took no part himself the act of pocketing the proceeds. We understand he had little, if any to pay for his board, and Fakir Riley departed with about $8 in his pocket that might better have been distributed among some deserving people in our town. The sneak never paid for 200 programs he got from us—and we don't reckon to ever get it. (And at his request, we gave him a nine line local gratis) We would recommend the public not to give of their substance to travelling beggars till they know them to be in real need and deserving of assistance.

BEAUTIFUL BANFF, N.W.T.

I WAS induced to use your Burdock Blood Bitters for constipation and general debility and found it a complete cure which I take pleasure in recommending to all who may be thus afflicted.—James M. Carson, Banff, N.W.T.

The trial of the Halton Dominion election petition has been fixed for Nov. 6, at 10 a. m., at the court house, Milton. The East Bruce petition will be tried at Walkerton on Oct. 20.

TRUE FAITH.

"I have great faith in Burdock Blood Bitters as a blood purifier. I have taken three bottles for bad blood and find a perfect cure. It is a grand medicine, and I recommend wherever I go."—Ida Sanderson, Toronto, Ont.

Spectacles, in gold, silver, and steel, properly fitted, 25c., up, at Fox's.

Married.

GREENE—KEYS.—On September 30th, at the residence of the bride's father, Orangeville, by Rev. D. C. Hossack, J. D Greene, of London, to Annie, daughter of Mr. James Keys.

One evening last week when Mr. James Robb, near Camrock, was retiring for the night he copied a partridge sitting on the foot of his bed. He secured the game and expects to make use of it at the Camrock shooting match which, most likely, will be held this fall. —Fergus News Record.

Gen. Boulanger, at one time the idol of France, committed suicide at Brussels last week.

A Mt. Forest citizen grew a squash this season that weighed 110 lbs.

MRS. GEO. BENDLE.

Mrs. George Bendle, of Galt, Ont., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for it is a sure cure for all summer complaints. We are never without it in the house." Fowler's Wild Strawberry, price, 35c.

$50,000 to loan on mortgage security. Interest and expenses low, terms to suit borrowers. F. Irwin, office over Endacott Bros' store, Orangeville.

AUNTY'S ADVICE.

"My brother had severe summer complaint about a year ago and no remedies seemed to relieve him. At last my aunt advised us to try Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and before he had taken one bottle he was entirely cured."—Adelaide Crittenden, Baldwin, Ont.

The [illegible] variety of Clocks north of Toronto, at [illegible].

About thirty hands are now employed at the Mono quarries.

Judge McCarthy is holding a court of revision at Alton today.

Division court sittings were held in the court house on Tuesday.

A report of the last mimmery sparrings is unavoidably held over until next week.

Cosgrove Concert Co. hold the boards in the town hall to morrow (Friday) night.

The billiard parlor has been reopened and is ready for the fall, winter and spring campaign.

Stone of the finest quality is being taken out of the Mono quarries and sent to Toronto.

A new injector has been placed on the waterworks boiler and it gives excellent satisfaction.

The public school board held its monthly meeting in the council chamber on Tuesday night.

Rev. D. C. Hossack officiated at the reopening of the Hillsburg Presbyterian church on Sunday.

Caledon's fall exhibition was held at Charleston on Thursday and Friday and was a great success.

Mail contractor Laverty commenced carrying H. M. mails between Orangeville and Mono Centre on Thursday.

A. G. McKenney is rushing the hardware trade to beat the band and he displays his enterprise by placing his ad. in THE SUN.

THE SUN has secured a representative at Horning's Mills, and the news of that busy hamlet will be found in another column.

Mayor Walsh, revising officer for North Wellington, held a court for the revision of the Dominion voters' lists at Mt. Forest yesterday.

Owing to the crowded state of our columns this week a report of the high school sports and other interesting news is held over until next week.

Delinquent subscribers should bear in mind that if they do not promptly pay their indebtedness our credit rate will be charged in every case.

Several weeks ago a tramp, who at present lies in jail at Guelph, stole a valuable overcoat from Ald. S. H. McKitrick's residence on Church str ct.

Oliver Welsh, the Charleston bank note "raiser," has not been hauled in by the police yet, but it is thought he will give the "raising" business a rest for the present.

Calvin Peters the Orangeville peddler who was committed to jail last week for nonpayment of a fine, was released to liberty after being a few hours behind the bars.

This is the first day of Dufferin's great fair and the weather is "just lovely," as the high school girls say. If it continues to morrow the exhibition will be a great success.

We are not giving quack medical books and jagged pianos, castles in the air or anything else to catch a stray subscriber, but for $1 we give all the reliable news of the town and surrounding country. Try THE SUN for one year.

Are you going to the Erin fair this year? Were the directors prohibited out of it takes on the grounds the principal attraction was taken away and many people think that they will not have a chance to beat the man at his own game.

Some toughs entered the office of the Erin Advance one night last week and piied type, spoiled paper and treated the office furniture to a coat of ink. Bro Clarke has our sympathy in this matter, and we hope the vandals who are disgracing the village's fair name will be caught and punished severely. Such unlawful proceedings should be stopped at once.

HARVEST HOME.—On Sunday next harvest home services will be held in the Methodist church, which will be handsomely decorated for the occasion. Appropriate music will be rendered by the choir, and a fitting sermon will be delivered.

ENTRIES GALORE.—Secretary Parsons informs a SUN scribe that the number of entries for Dufferin's exhibition [illegible] in excess of [illegible] good news, however [illegible] the Dufferin of yore.

SERVICES.—[illegible]rson, the well-bred two year old Methodist "Missions," with the sub[illegible] and won high opinions from the congregation.

THE FIRE-ALARM.—The fire alarm at the new waterworks building can now be sounded from the outside of the fire hall. This is a splendid idea, and it will do away with the custom of awakening the engineer before the alarm could be rung. The rigging, however, does not present a very tasty appearance, but we suppose it is intended for use, not beauty.

GIVE THEM A REEL.—For many months the firemen have been asking for a new hose reel, but the council for some unexplained reason decline to comply with the brigade's request. Time and again the necessity of a new reel has been demonstrated, and at the last fire another instance was pointed out. The present reel cannot carry over 400 feet of hose, and when a fire occurs over that distance from a hydrant the hook and ladder wagon has to be run down, thereby causing a great loss of time. We hope the council will do its duty towards the brigade, and Orangeville will soon have a first class fire company.

A TANNERY CONSUMED.—Early this morning one of the tanneries owned by Messrs. Aiken Bros., a short distance below the C. P. R. station, was discovered to be on fire and as it is out of reach of our waterworks the building was totally destroyed, together with the contents. The fire is supposed to have caught from the boiler, and the loss will undoubtedly be heavy. We understand it is partly covered by insurance.

FIRE IN PROPERTY.—The [illegible] which is connected with the Methodist church at the rear side of the church door and can be operated from thence way. To properly sound the alarm and give the location of the fire, the following instructions will not come amiss: The North ward is represented by 1 stroke; South ward, 2 strokes; East ward, 3 strokes; West ward 4 strokes; Broadway, 5 strokes. Of course, after the location notes have been sounded the bell is to be rung rapidly.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—On Monday evening a missionary meeting was held in the Methodist church at which Sheriff Bowles presided. Addresses were delivered by Revs. Cosson and Parent, the French Canadian missionary, and Mrs. Crossley, a worker of the Woman's Missionary Society. The addresses, which were very instructive, were attentively listened to by those present, and the financial result was in advance of the proceeds of other years. At the close of the meeting Mrs Crossley met the ladies of the church, and after consultation it was decided to organise a branch of the Woman's Missionary Society in connection with the church. Mrs. (Dr.) Smith was elected president.

WHO'LL LEAD NOW?—Since Ald. Youmans has introduced a by-law to prohibit the running at large of cattle within the corporation of Orangeville quite a stir has been created in the ranks of the anti by-law army and they are choosing a leader to cheer them on to victory—or defeat. In days gone by General Barney Collins directed the movements of the anti's forces and was ably seconded by Major Josh Wiggins, and victory always perched on their banners. Times have changed since then and the great general, after many victories, removed from our midst, but if the anti's promote the major, who has always been second in command, there is still some hope that their hitherto victorious army will not be disorganized or annihilated. No promotions have been gazetted, however, and it remains to be seen who'll be chosen as leader of those who are "agin' the by law."

THOSE SCALES.—Mr. John Hicks, keeper of the Orangeville market weigh-scales, writes the following letter to the editor of THE SUN:—"In last week's Post there was an item referring to the weigh scales being out of order, and saying that Messrs. Geo. Robinson and Geo. Dunning bought 106 hogs on Saturday which were weighed on the town scales and shipped to Toronto on the following Monday, where they were again weighed on the west market scales, and their weight was 960 lbs less than the Orangeville weight—the gentlemen thereby losing $43. I wish to state that several of the hogs were not purchased by [illegible] Mr R[illegible] [illegible] make a public statement in the newspapers. Hoping to hear from him not later than then, I remain, yours.

JOHN HICKS.

ATHLONE.

WEDDING BELLS.—Mr. M. Barrie of this place and Miss Mary Egan of Tottenham were married on the 22nd of last month. The happy couple spent their honeymoon at Collingwood, and we all wish them every success in life.

CONFIRMATION SERVICES.—On Saturday at St. James', Colgan, Archbishop Walsh of Toronto administered confirmation to one hundred and three children of both sex. Before the services his grace preached a very eloquent sermon on the subject of "Confirmation." The distinguished divine was presented with an elegantly framed address to which he made a touching reply.

A FORMER MONDITE BLIND.—No doubt many residents of Mono and Adjala will be pained to hear that Mr. Wm. Barnes, who resided at Sheldon until 9 years ago, but is now living at Petoskey, Mich., has been stone blind for the past 4 years. A prominent American doctor has discovered a cure for Mr. Barne's affliction, and we hope to hear of his complete recovery. We believe he intends visiting his old friends around here when he regains his sight.

PERSONAL.—Miss M Langley of the Soo, Mich., who is visiting friends in this part of Adjala, will return home shortly. She thinks this country is pretty dull.....Mr. Charles Maguire of Mono Centre was over paying a visit to Mr. A. F. Dwyer of Ennis last Saturday. Although Charlie arrived too late to see the football games, still we think he had an enjoyable time, and we invite him to visit Ennis again.....Mr. Fred Mercer of Orangeville was a spectator at Saturday's football games.....Miss Hannah Sweeney of Caledon is visiting Miss Kate Keenan of this place.

ENDED IN A TIE.—The football match between the Rosemont boys and our club on Saturday was stubbornly contested. Play was sharp, not rough, all the time, and there was no wrangling, arguing or swearing. Mr George Livingstone acted as referee, and won distinction by the impartial manner in which he discharged the duties of his office. The match ended in a tie, neither side scoring, after which the visitors repaired to Mr Jno Keenan's where a tasty spread was laid out for them. The boys did full justice to the table and then left for home, highly elated with the result of the contest. A return game will be played at Rosemont on Saturday.

A WOMAN KILLED!

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT AT MONO MILLS ON THURSDAY.

MISS HUFFMAN, DR. BONNAR'S HOUSEKEEPER, MEETS WITH A SHOCKING DEATH.

The pretty little village of Mono Mills was thrown into a state of great excitement on Thursday, when it was learned that Miss Huffman of Napanee, who was keeping house for Dr. Bonnar, was instantly killed in a runaway accident near there. The young lady was driving in the doctor's patent buggy—an invention of his own—and some way the vehicle broke down and precipitated the unfortunate young lady over the dash board, when she was kicked by the horse. However, her skull was so badly fractured that death took place 24 hours after the sad occurrence. The remains were taken to her native place for burial. The young lady was very popular here, and the whole community regret the deplorable mishap.

Dr. Bonnar's statement of the case will be published in our next week's issue.

MONO CENTRE.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Andrew McCague who has had another severe attack of inflammation is able to be around again....Mrs. Thos. Turnbull of Boston visited friends here last week.

BRIEFS.—Harvest is over and threshing is the order of the day. The yield of spring crops is splendid, while that of fall is average. Potatoes are an excellent crop, only a small percentage being rotten.....A fashionable wedding is on the boards. Particulars later on.

ACCIDENT.—The Rev. Mr. Ballentyne had a mishap on Tuesday which might have proved more serious than it did. While driving down Turnbull's hill the horse kicked at a fly and got its foot caught in the forepart of the buggy. In the squabble that ensued the buggy containing Mr. and Mrs. Ballentyne and their little daughter was backed down a steep bank and but for the extreme bravery and forethought of the rev. gentlemen all three might have been seriously hurt. As it was they escaped with a few slight bruises a broken strap or two and a dinged hat.

DEATH'S HARVEST.—Death has again visited us and laid low one of our most promising citizens. For the past few months Mrs. Wm. Henry has been slowly sinking under that dread disease consumption, to which she our rendered on Tuesday evening. The funeral takes place on Thursday to the Mono Centre cemetery. Deceased, who possessed an amiable and winning disposition and who was beloved by all her acquaintances, leaves behind her a sorrowing husband who has the entire sympathy of the community in the loss of his young and loved companion.

GRAND VALLEY.

(From the Star.)

BARN BURNT.—The barn and contents of John McAllister, con. 11 East Luther, was destroyed by fire from a spark from the engine while threshing on Tuesday.

ARRIVED.—The band instruments have arrived and it will now be in order to select the best "masters" in the village to handle the same. We trust shortly to have an exhibition on the street and a full turnout.

AWAITING DEVELOPEMENTS.—A new sensation has struck the village. It will be remembered that a marriage took place at Waldemar a short time ago, the contracting parties being Mr. Thos. Moss and Mrs. Jane Wilson, the latter having resided for some time previously in Arthur. This week a man turns up, who claims to be a former husband. How the matter is going to be settled between the parties can not as yet be stated.

After Many Days.

Bloomfield, Man., Feb 14, 1890.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont

DEAR SIR,—For 12 years my wife was a martyr to that dreaded disease, Dyspepsia. Nothing relieved her; physicians were consulted and medical skill tried, without avail. One doctor advised a change of climate, suggesting Manitoba as a desirable place. We acted upon this advice, coming here two years ago. The change of climate wrought a change indeed, but for the worse, as she was soon confined to bed, and under the care of two doctors, who asserted she could not live but a month longer. A neighbor came to see her one day who had been reading your Almanac. She told her of the testimonials she read in it, of the great amount of good the were doing, and advised her to try a box of Dr Morse's Indian Root Pills. She did so, was relieved, kept improving, and is now able to do housework, and continues the use of Morse's Pills.

Yours gratefully,

GEORGE DUNN.

OUR Old Port and Cherry Wines cannot be surpassed. They are really the best in the market.—J. M. BENGLIS.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Important for the delicate. It is difficult to determine which is the more trying to the human constitution the damp, cold days of autumn and winter, or the keen, dry, easterly winds of spring. Throughout these seasons good health may be maintained by occasional doses of Holloway's Pills, which purify the blood and act as wholesome stimulants to the skin, stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys. This celebrated medicine needs but a fair trial to convince the ailing and despairing that it will restore and cheer them without danger pain or inconvenience. No family should be without a supply of Holloway's Pills and Ointment, as by a timely resource to them the first erring function may be rectified, suffering may be spared, and life saved.

The Safest

AND most powerful alterative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the despite disease peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William F. Dougherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child is livelier, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of almost every kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M. D., Wiggs, Arkansas.

INTERESTING CITY NEWS BY THE SUN'S FAIR CORRESPONDENT.

Little May, with pouting air,
Sees the boys all march away,
They'll be gone the whole long day.
Pleas her pretty curls she shook
And with a most bewitching look
Calls out, "May I come?"

Then answer they, with lip a curl
"Can we be bothered with a girl."
Grown up May, with gracious air,
Sees the boys now shy and meek,
Each one for her favor seek,
Begging with an ardent glance
To the opera, rink or dance
"With me, won't you come?"

Asks saucy May with lip a curl;
"Could you be bothered with a girl?"

The occupants of Upper Canada College removed last week to their new building. The position is a great contrast, from the noise and bustle of King St to the freshness and prevailing quiet of North Toronto. The school is in a most flourishing condition, and so crowded that many applicants for admission had to be refused. Every school morning at about half past eight, any number of bright-looking boys may be seen going up Avenue road, bound for the college. Some walking, some driving and others on bicycles. The boys are delighted with their new quarters.

The Amateur Athletic Association of Canada held their sports last Saturday on the Rosedale grounds, and many remarkable feats were performed. Among the participators were the greatest and most famous distance runners, hurdlers and jumpers of America, and also the star athletes of Canada. One celebrity actually jumped over six feet. This is rather hard to believe, I know, from my other witnesses than your own eyes, but its a fact.

The weather every day last week, was most fearfully and wonderfully hot. There were no cool spaces whatever, and the lightest summer gowns made not a speck of difference. People remonstrated with the unreasonable temperature, and said indignantly, "The idea, early the end of September." But the "Clerk of the Weather" didn't mind in the least, and every day the probabilities came out, "Fair and very warm." But although the temperature rightfully belonged to the dog days, still it didn't look, someway, like summer. Perhaps, however, its only imagination, as the trees and grass are still green, and there is very little to show, as yet, that its only three months until Christmas.

The distance between New York and San Francisco has been covered by rail in 4 days 12 hours 28 minutes, the best time on record.

The trustees of the school at Riverview, near Shelburne, allowed the Saturday Saints to hold services in the building, but an indignant ratepayer arrived in time and put a stop to proceedings.

VICTORY AT VIVIAN

"Some family faithful work has been done by Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry as a sure and quick cure for diarrhoea, dysentery, and all summer complaints. I can recommend it to all as a family friend always true and faithful.—Mrs. Bishop, Vivian, Ont.

On Saturday, while some cattle were being driven along Talbot street, St. Thomas, one of them, an infuriated steer, entered the yard of Mr Frank Pringle, whose house is No 67. Mrs. Pringle was in the yard and the animal rushed at her and knocked her down cutting her side and breaking a rib.

The unfortunate man Coutts, whose arraignment a year ago before the coroner as Mr. Forest on the charge of drowning a baby in a rain tub, will be remembered, died the other day at the asylum in Hamilton where he was committed after his trial for infanticide. His body was taken to Hosten for interment.

During the thunder storm of Friday last lightning struck Mr. Outhwaite's house, Metcalfe Station, entering at the chimney scattering the bricks in all directions, knocking down the stoves, upsetting the stove and spitting into pieces the books that held the store up. Mr. Outhwaite and his daughter were the only occupants of the house at the time and escaped injury although standing near the stove at the time.

A Dundee navvy, on awaking one morning told his wife of a curious dream that he had during the night. He dreamed that he saw a big fat rat coming towards him, followed by two lean ones, and in the rear one blind one. He was greatly worried over it, and swore that some great evil was about to fall upon him. He had heard that to dream of rats for bold some dire calamity. In vain did he appeal to his wife, but she could not relieve him. His son, who, by the way, was a bright lad, hearing the dream told, volunteered to interpret it and he did with all the wisdom of a Joseph. Said he: "The fat rat is the man who keeps the public house where ye gang to see after, and the two lean ones are me and mither, and the blind one is yersel, father."

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Sept. 28.—About three years ago Dr. Metcalf, then a school teacher, courted Miss Ella, daughter of Henry Knox, of Sidney township. They were married amid great pomp and given wedding presents by the bride's father worth $1,500. Before this Dr. Metcalf entered into medical partnership with Dr Tiffney, of Detroit. When the latter died Metcalf bought the practice and continued to live in Dr. Tiffney's house, the widow of whom, with her little daughter, kept rooms in their old home.

In the course of time the young doctor became so much infatuated with Mrs. Tiffney that he neglected his wife and induced her to sign an agreement of separation proposing to marry the widow. Mrs. Metcalf returned to the house in Detroit, having visited her father, and found the husband, furniture, widow, and all gone, and the house sold. A draft for $2,000 was left for Mrs. Metcalf. She will prosecute her husband.

AFTER 26 YEARS.

Remarkable Case Before the U.S. Bureau of Pensions.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—One of the most remarkable and pathetic cases that has ever been brought to the attention of the Bureau of Pensions is that of William Newby, a private of Company D, 14th Regiment, Illinois Volunteers. This regiment was commanded by the heroic Colonel Stephen G. Hicks of Illinois and was conspicuous for its gallantry at the battle of Shiloh. Newby was in this battle on April 6, 1862, and was reported killed in action. It seems, however, that instead of being killed he received a severe wound on the head, and was captured and sent to the rear by the Confederate force and imprisoned at Belle Isle, and was afterwards transferred to Andersonville. It seems that Newby was released in course of time and was in poorhouses in various parts of the South. He was finally taken to Key West, Fla., by a gentleman who recognized Newby as a kinsman. Here he remained until some time in 1869, when this relative died.

After Newby was reported as killed in action his wife applied for a pension and it was granted, and she has been drawing a widow's pension from the date of his reported death to the present time. This soldier has filed a claim for a pension, and it is now receiving the consideration of the office, the claim of the widow being suspended in the meantime. No discharge has ever been granted to the soldier, and the consideration of the pension claim is being postponed until such time as the Secretary of War shall grant the man a discharge.

This soldier has been separated from his family for a period of 29 years, they believing all the while that he was dead, and now he turns up a forlorn, demented old man. His case has attracted great attention in the southern part of Illinois, and has excited the sympathy of all who have become acquainted with it. He recently attended a large reunion of old veterans of his country, where the subject was generally discussed. The pension will no doubt soon be granted, and he will receive a sufficient sum to smooth his way to the end of his life.

Newby wandered from place to place and finally turned up at Shreveport, La. While there the colored people made up a purse and he was given passage on a steamboat to Cincinnati. On his way up the river the steamboat landed at Shawneetown, Illinois. Newby, hearing this name called out, seemed to recognize something that was familiar and got off the boat. From here he wandered to Kaskakee, Ills., where he was in the poorhouse for a time; leaving this place, he struck out southward and at last reached McLeansborough, in Hamilton county, Ills., and was sent to the poor house. During three years he was in a demented state, bordering on insanity, as the supposed result of the wound in the head. In wandering about he finally went over into White county, and when he got near his old home was seen and recognized by two of his old comrades who had served in the regiment with him. His wife was sent for, and she identified him, and his relatives and many of his friends and comrades.

HE SAT ON A TACK.

The Old Postal Line and Its New Wants. $2,000 for Its Best Feelings.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 23.—Otto Kraeser sat on a tack while travelling in a traction car a month ago. Yesterday he entered suit against the company in the Common Pleas Court for $2000, that being the figure at which he places the injury done to his dignity, for he was with his best girl at the time, and to his pensive, for the wound inflicted kept him for a week in a hospital.

Otto explains his experience in his declaration filed in court. He says that after seeing his lady friend comfortably seated he sat down himself. There is nothing unusual about that, but the sudden exclamation which Otto gave out to as he jumped from his seat startled all the other passengers.

No one knew what the matter was until they saw his hand reach down to that particularly tender part of his anatomy which would be likely to come in contact with a tack when he was seated. "Ouch!" was the exclamation used, and it was rendered very expressive, indeed, when he was seen to feel for the wounded seat.

An examination was made (just as an examination of the seat was made—and the cause of the sudden rising and expression of agony was discovered. It was a vicious, long pointed, dark tinning member tack, such as upholsterers use.

Otto will testify that the point was sharper than that of the ordinary tack, and he knows for the injury that resulted was powerful in the extreme, finally resulting in an abscess.

Convicts Flogged.

TORONTO, Sept. 23.—Patrick Sheedy, aged 28, William Leader, 35, and William Turnbull, 27, received their third and last flogging at the Central Prison. On Sept. 14, 1891, the three prisoners committed an indecent assault on a woman named Elizabeth Richardson of Guelph. They were tried and sentenced by the late Judge Dren to one year and 300 days imprisonment and to be three whipped with the cat o' nine tails in presence of the prison surgeon. During the first month of their imprisonment each prisoner received 10 lashes, after nine months they received another 10, and now a few days before their release the third and last instalment was administered. Sheedy is a married man, the others single. All the prisoners shrieked during the process of lashing, and the back of each was covered with huge welts.

Failure in Gents' Furnishings.

TORONTO, Sept. 23.—Mr J. J. Findlay, dealer in gents' furnishings, Yonge and Elm streets, has assigned to Mr Henderson, book-keeper for Hyslop, Caulfield & Co. He owes about $7000 and his assets are nominally the same. The business was formerly carried on by Findlay & Cole. It was then an extensive concern.

60,000 Home Seekers

GUTHRIE, O.T., Sept. 23.—A reporter returned from the Iowa Indian reservation yesterday, after a ride of 40 miles. About 30,000 persons entered the reservation from the west promptly at 12 o'clock, and fully that many more went in from the Guthrie side. The wildest excitement prevails.

Mothers, have pity on your pale and suffering daughters. Their system is "run down," and if neglected the consequences may be fatal. Dr Williams' Pink Pills will bring back rosy cheeks and health and strength.

John Anderson, who fell from the third storey window of the Royal hotel at Harriston on the 7th of August, and was supposed to be dangerously injured, has, we are pleased to say, so far recovered as to be able to be around again. A fall of 30 feet and a sudden stop upon a plank sidewalk is something that many would not like to try.

Frederick Harty of Newmarket was poisoned from handling skins in the south end tannery a few days ago, the virus having been conveyed through his system by means of a bruise. Since Sunday he has been confined to his bed and is in quite a critical condition, his medical adviser declaring yesterday morning that he was no better.

Brampton council is kicking because of the poor quality of light furnished by the illuminating company of that town. Owen Sound is agitating for a gravingdock.

Ossman William Beach, the first man who ever defeated Hanlan, will come to America with Stanbury.

MANY A LIFE

HAS been saved by the prompt use of Ayer's Pills. Travelers by land or sea are liable to constipation or other derangements of the stomach and bowels which, if neglected, lead to serious and often fatal consequences. The most sure means of correcting these evils is the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. The prudent sailing master would as soon go to sea without an chronometer as without a supply of these Pills. Though prompt and energetic in operation, Ayer's Pills leave no ill effects; they are purely vegetable and sugar-coated; the safest medicine for old and young, at home or abroad.

"For eight years I was afflicted with constipation, which at last became so bad that the doctors could do no more for me. Then I began to take Ayer's Pills, and soon the bowels recovered their natural and regular action, so that now I am in health."—Mrs. C. B. Clark, Towksbury, Massachusetts.

"I regard Ayer's Pills as one of the most reliable general remedies of our times. They have been in use in my family for affections requiring a purgative, and have given unvarying satisfaction. We have found them an excellent remedy for colds and light fevers."—W. R. Woodson, Fort Worth, Texas.

"For several years I have relied more upon Ayer's Pills than upon anything else in the medicine chest, to regulate my bowels and those of the ship's crew. These pills are not severe in their action, but do their work thoroughly. I have used them with good effect for the cure of rheumatism, kidney troubles, and dyspepsia."—Capt. Mueller, Steamship Palacia, New York City.

"I have found Ayer's Cathartic Pills to be a better family medicine for common use than any other pills within my knowledge. They are not only very effective, but safe and pleasant to take—qualities which must make them valued by the public."—Jules Hauel, Perfumer, Philadelphia, Pa.

TREASURER'S SALE OF LANDS

In the County of Dufferin.

BY virtue of a Warrant issued by the Warden of the County of Dufferin, and authenticated by the Seal of the said County, bearing date the 31st day of August, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, and to me directed for the collection of the arrears of taxes due for three years and over upon the lands hereinafter mentioned and described, being in the County of Dufferin; I therefore do hereby give notice that, unless the said taxes, together with all costs and charges, be sooner paid, I shall, on SATURDAY, the FIFTH day of DECEMBER, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, at the hour of TWO o'clock in the afternoon, at the Court House, in the Town of ORANGEVILLE, in the said County, proceed to sell by Public Auction the said lands, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge such arrears of taxes and costs and charges incurred.

H. T. HAUN, Treasurer County of Dufferin.

THE BEST FAMILY PILL IN USE

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

Keep the Works in good order.

NEWMAN, Ont., January 15, 1890.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—You "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system the humanity can use. Life is as the time piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours faithfully, H. F. ATWELL.

The Travellers' Safe-Guard.

AMHERSTBURG POST, N.S., Jan. 27, '90.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills." Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an actual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling outfit complete without a box of Morse's Pills. Yours, &c., M. R. MELVEN.

A valuable Article sells well.

BOURCHOIS HARBOR, N.S., Jan. 13, '90.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—This is to certify that I deal in Patent Medicines, including various kinds of Pills. I sell more of the Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills than of all the others combined. Their sales I find are still increasing. Yours, &c., H. L. NICHOLSON.

The Rest of Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, English, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Farm cattle should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of from one week they will yield from 14½ to 15 per cent less milk, and that of an inferior quality. Such milk will, on an average, turn sour in twenty four hours instead of forty eight hours."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analysed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock fine and coarse, at

G. R. MONKMAN'S Flour, Feed and Seed Emporium, OPPOSITE THE MARKET, ORANGEVILLE.

THE FARMER FEEDETH ALL.

My lord rides through his palace gate,
My lady sweeps along in state,
The sage thinks long on many a thing,
And the maiden muses on marrying;
The minstrel harpeth merrily,
The sailor plows the foaming sea,
The huntsman hills the good red deer
And the soldier wars without fear,
But fill to each whate'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

Smith hammereth cheerily the sword,
Priest preacheth pure and holy word,
Dame Alice worketh broidery well,
Clerk Richard tales of love can tell,
The tap wife rolls her foaming beer,
Dan Fisher fisheth in the mere,
And courtiers ruffle, strut and shine,
While pages bring the Gascon wine;
But fill to each whate'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

Man build his castles fair and high,
Whatever river runneth by
Great cities rise in every land,
Great churches show the builder's hand,
Fair palaces and pleasing towers,
Great work is done he't here and there,
And well man worketh everywhere;
But work or rest, whate'er befall,
The farmer he must feed them all.

—OR— TRUE TO THE LAST.

The long, long day grew at last to night and there was no news of the fugitive. When the hours of the next day had worn wearily on to evening, Damerel growing impatient, walked towards the police station for tidings. In the village street, on its way to the railway, a travelling carriage, closely packed, dashed by, and the bright beaming face of Florian flashed on him, bringing a sudden quiver to his heart. He lifted his hat with awkward hand, she returned his salution calmly, the swift horses bearing her out of his sight before he could tell whether her look was scornful or courteous.

"Faith and sure, sir, sorra, a bit of news have I to tell," said the chief constable. But they're after scarching Dublin, sir, and——"

"Very well. I'm going to Dublin," interrupted Damerel. "There's a card with my address; if I am wanted to identify this wretched girl I shall be found there."

He hurried on to the railway station, then at the doors asked himself what he wanted.

"On! I'll telegraph to Chadwick," said he. "Doubtless he is cooling his enthusiasm alone at Killarney, and wondering in what lunatic asylum I am safely lodged."

But Damerel did not go straight to the telegraph office, he lingered on the platform, and from a distance saw blind Mrs. Langley led to a carriage by her daughter. He noted Florian's care of her, the bend of her graceful head over the stooping figure of her mother, the solicitude in her anxious eyes, the tender hands, helpful and loving, aiding her blind steps; and as he looked, a flush rose to his cheek. He was impatient with himself for this folly, and turned hurriedly away. He had no right to speak to them—he, a stranger, who had forced himself into their house with painful things—he whose deed it was that drove them away from home. Why had he interfered? It was a cruel thing to force a blind woman and a helpless girl into this lone traveling.

Deep in thought, Damerel, stumbled on some luggage standing in his way, and, as he recovered himself, his eyes fell on the address, "Mrs. Langley, Paris, via London, Dover, Calais."

Another moment, and brawny arms had seized the trunks, and locked them in the van. Then a hurry, a shouting, a sudden jamming of doors and the train was off, and he had not caught another glimpse of Florian's face.

Feeling strangely chill and weary, Damerel went into the telegraph office, and wrote this despatch for Chadwick:

"I cannot come on to Killarney. You will find me at Dublin—same hotel. Give up the mountains, and join me there. Answer."

"Is that all sir?" asked the clerk.

"Yes—no, stay!" said Damerel, dipping his pen in the ink, and writing further——

"I am going in for Paris. Sudden business there. Will you accompany me? Reply quickly."

* * * * *

There was not a greater coward in the parish than Farmer Skews. People were beginning to say so now openly. A few months ago they might have whispered; but since he had said aloud in the parlor of the "Trewavas Arms," that he wouldn't go through the wood alone for a hundred pounds in gold, farmers, and miners and working men had considered themselves free to declare their opinions, without pretense of secrecy. He was a coward, and something more; but that "more" they still whispered or hinted at in dubious sentences and cautious voice. The truth was Farmer Skews was not liked. He was too prosperous. Mecheolet farm was the best in the parish. And why did Sir Hilton Trewavas let it to him, when his oldest and best tenant, who was almost a gentleman, and as rich as any 'squire round about, would have taken it, and given him a hundred pounds a year more for it than Skews gave?

Ah! why, indeed? And these men looked in each other's eyes furtively as they smoked and puffed on in silence. If Skews came among them at such a time, they made way for him, but no one edged a chair up near to his; no one chatted to him cheerily of corn and cattle, fish or tin; no one, in rising his glass to his lips, said, "Here a health to you, neighbor."

Afraid to go through the wood alone was he! And he had owned it. Well, conscience was a queer thing. A man might, being paid for it, keep his tongue quiet; but would the money quiet his conscience too? Apparently not. To an unquiet conscience, the birds as they flew twittered of murder, and the peaceful autumn woods, whose yellow leaves lay golden on the grass' rustled with the tread of ghosts. But a man who took blood money could not hope for peace. Was he so blind that when he pocketed the bribe, he had hoped to get rest with it? When will the wicked learn that sin is only suffering? No matter what shape the sin wears, it changes to this at last—suffering—anguish of heart and mind, disease, and death—these are sin's wages, and will be till the world end.

So let Farmer Skews look to it, nor hope to prosper, although the stock up on his farm (where did he get money to buy such cattle?) might be finer than any for miles round. Balaam's ass spoke, seeing an angel in his path; and dumb animals, 'twas said, sometimes saw sights at which human eyes could never look. Why did the dogs howl all night long at Mecheolet farm? And every body knew that Farmer Skews horses would never pass the Lady's Bower. He shied at the glistening pool, and reared upright, and nearly threw his rider. The woodsmen said, that when they were cutting down the Bower (for Sir Hilton hated the place and had it torn down, and all the trees round about it felled) they saw the horse pant and glare, like a creature terrified, when Skews and his new man, that queer shambling fellow with the red hair, came up together and looked on, and asked so curiously, what they were cutting down the Bower for.

Thus the country side talked of Farmer Skews. And it is certain there was a great alteration in the man since he had grown well to do. As his bullocks fattened he thinned, and not all the corn in Egypt would have given him the bread of cheerfulness. How much of this change was due to the red-haired young man from Dorset, who had come to him to learn farming, the neighbors did not guess. Being anxious to learn his business thoroughly, this promising pupil rarely left his master. He became the farmer's shadow, and this surveillance to a man with something on his mind was hard to bear. Breath by breath, whisper by whisper, he felt a spell upon him, compelling him to speak the truth. Often in the dismal wood, with that silent red-haired man behind him creeping softly like a ghost, he longed to turn and scream, "I know you! I know why you follow and torment me! You want to wring the truth from my shrinking soul. You shall not have it. I'll die first. Let us fight here and finish it." He longed to say this, but he never dared. He tried to cheat himself about this Dorset man—this ever ready sentinel with the watchful eye—a trick of feature, a turn of the head, made the likeness, that was all. Was it likely now that the gentleman whom he thought of would give him a hundred pounds to be taught farming, and would dress up like this, and would rough it in the field night and morning and follow him to fair and market, and dog his steps like an ugly shadow? Come now, was it likely? Thus he argued with himself, and only shrunk and shivered all the more.

"A frightened conscience is a fool," said the farmer to himself. "It sees a snake in every furze-bush, and a shaft in every path. Why should I be afraid? There's no harm done. If they had allowed her to be took up, I wouldn't ha' held my tongue; but now she's gone——"

But here the sweat broke out upon his face, for his friendly pupil touched him on the arm, and said in Dorset dialect, "What be thinking of, varmer? Your feaze be working like a mill. Here's Zar Antoony coming. He be often down pen you and me, I vansy."

"Yes, here was Sir Anthony. That was another torture the farmer had to bear—Sir Anthony always peering about his farm, asking sharp questions, then smiling, as though he knew too much; and, lastly, with a sneer, and a shaking of his whip above Trewavas, riding away "cogly as a serpint."

Oh, if to speak was not ruin, and poverty, and contempt, how soon would he turn upon his tormentors, and shriek his secret out to earth, and sky, and the wild sea, and all the demons who tore now at his heart, and said his soul was theirs!

But Sir Anthony drew rein, and barred the way with that big bony beast of his, whose looks are vicious as his master's.

"Good morning, farmer," said he. "The wheat looks well. But when we sow well, we reap well, eh? Ah, I'm a better parson than the curate. That's a text, isn't it?"

"I think not, Sir Anthony," said the farmer, meekly.

Then Sir Anthony, rising in his stirrups, looked round on the flourishing fields.

"At all events, it is a text that suits your case, farmer," said he. "You must have sown gold dust, I fancy, and reaped nuggets. Why last year, my horse here, Skeleton—a good name for such a bony beast—hopped near all your farm in two paces and a spring; now it takes us a good half hour to go our round. I often ride this way, you know, to see how things are looking. One sees all the country from this hill. There's Trewavas Wood, where the poor girl was murdered, and there's Trewavas House, looking very sunshiny and smiling—isn't it, Mr. Skews?"

"A fine old place, Sir Anthony," replied Skews with uneasy face.

"Old!" said Sir Anthony, sneering "Nice deeds have been done in those old places."

Here his eye fixed on the pupil farmer, and a cunning expression twisted his hard face.

"Well, Mr. Marcombe," said he, "have you found out the secret yet?—the great farming secret, you know, or does Old Skews hold it tight?"

"I'm getting on, Sir Anthony," was the reply. "I'm learning something every day."

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Sir Anthony; an unpleasant laugh, a laugh that chilled the farmer's blood, and made his cheek grow white. "Ha, ha! you Dorset lobs are mighty sharp. Skews here must take care, or you'll turn him inside out, and make a scare-crow of him to all the parish. By the bye, have you heard the news, Mr. Marcombe?"

"No, Sir Anthony. News don't reach me, Sir Anthony," he replied. "I'm here to learn what I come to learn, that's all."

"Right enough," returned Sir Anthony; "but Skews should know it. It concerns his landlord."

Skews looked ghastly white as he tried to smile, saying, "Such a gentleman as Sir Hilton wasn't going to tell his affairs to his farmers."

"Only those he can't help a tenant knowing," said Sir Anthony, "eh, Skews? Well, they are gone down yonder, both."

Sir Anthony's whip, at which the horse winced, pointed downwards over the sloping wood, to the shining turrets of Trewavas.

"Gone!" exclaimed the Dorset man. He looked more flushed than a strange man from a strange country should do hearing Cornish news.

"Ay, gone," said the baronet. "Why not? Gentlemen, now-a-days, think nothing of a Continental trip."

"And are they gone together to the Continent?" said the young man. "Where?—which country?"

"Not so fast, Mr. Marcombe," said Sir Anthony; "you ask too many questions at once. Sir Hilton is gone to France. Where his brother is, no one knows."

"Can you tell me when they went?" said the Dorset man laying his hand on Sir Anthony's bridle.

"Sir Hilton left last night late," replied Sir Anthony; "but I can't tell you when his brother went. John Trewavas, you know, has been very queer since that affair"—the whip went pointing to the wood again. "The poor fellow felt it more deeply than his brother, and lately he has shut himself up very much in his painting room alone. You haven't seen him out this month past have you, farmer?"

"'Tis three weeks," said the Dorset man, "since he came outside the park."

"You seem to know all about it," replied the baronet. "By the way, what has become of that clever dog belonging to Charles Vigo?"

"He is at Bosvigo," was the reply.

"Ah, there still!" said the baronet. "Then he hasn't broken loose, and joined his master yet? If Eslick weren't a fool, he'd watch that dog. He'll show us the right scent one of these days, I know."

The Dorset man answered Sir Anthony with a stony look.

"Perhaps he will," said he. "He's a good dog. Why shouldn't he do a good deed?"

"If he's good, it's a pity he's been in such bad company," laughed Sir Anthony. "Come now, which of you knows what he carried off that night from the old tree? Was it a love-letter, or was it a bag of gold? You, Skews, you are most in your landlord's secrets—which was it?"

"I wish I may die, Sir Anthony, if I know," said the shaking Skews. "I heard 'twas only an old handkerchief of young Mr. Vigo's."

Oh, the look that shot out from his ghastly, quivering eyes, at the stalwart Dorset man, as he said this, and then he shrunk backwards against the hedge, afraid of both his listeners, afraid of the stones, the trees, the shadows, the very birds that flew above him.

"I only asked for a jest," said keen Sir Anthony. "I was aware you did not know, Skews. You know nothing. You never did. Ha, ha!"

Farmer Skews grew more and more uneasy at this talk; and he now plucked young Marcombe by the sleeve.

"Let's go on to the field," said he.

"Bide a bit," returned the other. "I be curous 'bout the young chap that have run'd away. Don't ee think he was pretty near these parts when the dog come whome?"

"Of course he was," returned Sir Anthony staring hard at the speaker. "And we hunted for him far and near without avail."

"Well, what do ee say now to hunting the dog to hunting he?" said the Dorset man. "Suppose you send somebody down to Bosvigo one dark night to loose that dog, and you ride after 'un, Sir Anthony, upon that hoss? He's got long legs, that beast; he'll carry ee. I warr'nt, vive and twenty mile; and I warr'nt too that dog—Bolster is 'a call ed?—will go straight to his measter, wherever that measter be."

"That isn't a bad notion," returned the baronet. "I'll speak to Eslick about it. We shall be making a sort of blood hound of old Bolster to track his master down. Upon my word, the idea is good."

Farmer Skews glared in wonder, but uttered not a sound.

"And as it's your notion, Mr. Marcombe," continued the baronet, "I'll let you know if we carry it out, and when."

"Harkee," returned the Dorset man "An me know the day avore, if you can, Sir Lethony. I like a hunt; mine is a good hunting county. Zo Sir Hilton and his brother be both gwo e?"

Sir Anthony was wonderfully affable he took this sudden turning of the subject in good part.

"Ah, yes," said he—"I forgot to tell you, John Trewavas has been quite morbid lately; and it seems he disappeared yesterday morning, leaving a note to say that he was going to Mrs. Maristowe's. But they could scarcely have believed him, for I happened to know Lady Trewavas telegraphed to her to ask for him, and received a reply, saying he was not even expected. So I believe Sir Hilton is gone in search of him; and the story of a Continental tour is a—well, a stretcher. The truth is, family pride won't let them own that John, good as he is, is rather weak in the head. Good morning, farmer. Good morning, Mr. Marcombe. Your notion is capital it really is. Don't let Skews split on it. Mind, he's a desperate traitor."

Sir Anthony rode off and Mr. Marcombe looked into the frightened farmer's face, and burst into a fit of laughter.

S. J. DIXON DROWNED.

He is seized by Cramp while Swimming in Wood Lake.

"I'm going up to Muskoka to shoot a bear" said S. J. Dixon, the well known photographer, on Thursday morning, to his friend Jim Douglas of the Aquatic. "If I wait till we go up after deer with the dogs we won't get near a bear, and I want to shoot one this year." So the man who walked over Niagara twice on a tight rope with as much coolness as he told his customers to look pleasant when they came in "to have their pictures took," went up to the lake region to shoot a bear and decorate his lodge with it before the other members of the Hunt Club arrived. But he went to his death.

In full health and spirits, and with probably the thought of death furthest from his mind, the poor fellow left his home. His intention was to make for Wood Lake, Muskoka, which is a good forenoon's drive from Gravenhurst on the N. & N. W. R. Leaving home on Thursday his family did not expect to hear from him for at least a couple of days, but news did come; news so awful and so stunning in its dreadful suddenness that his wife and family could hardly grasp the truth of it.

At 7 o'clock Friday night Mrs. Dixon received three telegrams in quick succession to say that her husband had been accidentally drowned in Wood Lake that afternoon and that search was then been made for the body. No particulars were given, nothing but the laconic message "Accidentally drowned." Immediately on receipt of the news Mr. John Dixon, brother of deceased, accompanied by an undertaker, started for the scene of the accident and not until they arrive will the sorrowing family hear any particulars of the calamity.

There appears to be no possible ground for hope that the news of the accident is false, for Mrs. Dixon received three telegrams confirming the report, and later a press telegram announced that he was drowned at 2 o'clock in the afternoon having taken cramps while in swimming his body not being at present recovered.

For some fifteen years Mr. Dixon has been a prominent figure in Toronto. He stood high as a photographer and was a leading member of the photograph his association. He owned some fast trotters at one time, was a good shot, and in later days gave evidence that he had not forgotten his early experiments in wire walking by crossing Niagara and walking at the Toronto Exhibition. He was a man of splendid physique and and general favorite.

The remains of Samuel J. Dixon were brought home to this city early Monday morning by friends of the deceased and his family. The latest particulars in connection with the drowning are that Dixon started out to swim across Wood Lake about noon on Friday. Some spectators fearing that he would fail in the attempt, sent a lad named Tribe along behind the swimmer in a boat in order that he might rescue Dixon in case an accident occurred. The boy states that when within 100 yards of the opposite shore Dixon was taken with cramps and went down. Tribe succeeded in getting to within five feet of the drowning man when he disappeared for the last time and the boy was unable to see him.

STUDENTS' SPORTS!

The H. S. Boys Had a Great Time on Friday.

The annual sports under the auspices of the Orangeville high school students took place on the exhibition grounds on Friday and everything passed off pleasantly and successfully. Friday was fine and a large crowd witnessed the events. H. Laverty succeeded in winning the junior championship by 8 points, E. Shaver being second. The senior championship lies between W. J. Killeen and S. M. Brown, with chances in favor of the former. A couple of disputes in the hurdle race have to be settled before either of them gets the title.

THE OTHER WINNERS

are as follows:

THREE GREAT MEN DEAD.

Parnell, Smith and Pope Hennessey Pass Away.

LONDON, Oct 6.—Right Hon. Wm. Henry Smith died this afternoon. The death of Mr. Smith, who was universally popular, has caused the most profound regret in Conservative and other circles. Mr. Smith, who was one of the representative business men of England, is popularly reputed to have a fortune of about $10,000,000. He had made favorable progress towards recovery until yesterday, when he became worse and suffered a great deal of pain owing to a recurrence of gout. Towards evening he recovered, and his condition was so favorable that his attending physician left Walmer Castle, near Deal, the official residence of the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, where Mr. Smith has been seeking to regain his health since his appointment as successor to the late Earl Granville, and return to London. This morning Mr. Smith's condition became critical and he died at 3 p.m.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Charles Stewart Parnell, the famous Irishman died at his house in Brighton last night. His death is said to have been indirectly due to a chill which he caught last week, and which at first was not regarded as being of a serious nature. Mr. Parnell, however, became worse and a physician was called in, with the result that the patient was ordered to take to his bed. This was on Friday last and from that time Mr Parnell lost strength and finally succumbed at eleven o'clock last night. The exact nature of the disease which caused the death of the Irish leader is not made known at present. From the day he took to his bed, the state of Mr. Parnell's health had been such as to necessitate the constant attendance of two physicians, but in spite of their incessant and untiring efforts to prolong or save life, Mr. Parnell gradually sank lower and lower until he expired in the arms of Mrs Parnell, who is utterly prostrated by the shock experienced through her husband's death.

LONDON, Oct 7.—Coupled with the announcement this morning that Mr. Parnell had died last night, was the news that Sir John Pope Hennessey, who in December of last year contested the North Kilkenny election, backed by Mr Parnell's opponents, and defeated the Parnellite candidate, Vincent Scully by 1,147 votes, was also dead.

HENRY G. JAMES.

Henry G. James, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, writes:—"For several years I was troubled with pimples and irritations of the skin. After other remedies failed I used four bottles of Burdock Bitters and since then I have been quite free of my complaint. B. B. B. will always occupy a place in my house."

The following proverbs for colt handlers are from the Stockman:—"Never tease your colt to make it fight you, for colts grow fast and do not forget. Never get mad and fight it out on your colt, for a righteous man regardeth the life of his beast. Your colt should fear you, for fear is the beginning of wisdom. Your colt should love you, for love worketh no ill. Teach your colts to stop immediately when told; it may save your life some time. Hitch your horse by the side of a good, sensible horse, for he that walketh with the wise shall be wise. Be not hasty to use the whip, for the rod is for the back of fools. Do not overload your colt and then whip him to make him pull it, for by coddling you may make a backslider out of him, and it may be a hard matter to renew him again. Train up a colt in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it.

When the hair shows signs of falling, begin at once to use Ayer's Hair Vigor. This preparation strengthens the scalp, promotes the growth of new hair, restores the natural color to gray and faded hair, and renders it soft, pliant, and glossy.

THE THREE IRISH LEADERS.

It is noteworthy that Parnell's great predecessors in the championship of repeal of the legislative union between England and Ireland had suffered eclipse as he did (though for far other reasons) before they passed away. Few men of great eminence have ended their careers amid such dense encompassing gloom as that which beset O Connell on that final journey which was interrupted by death at Genoa. He had lost his hold on the younger men who had caught their inspiration from the strong vitality of his own patriotism. His grand triumphs had been forgotten by some of those who had best reason to cherish their memory and to bow with gratitude before their country's benefactor. The sympathy which he had succeeded in winning from England and Scotland for the cause of Catholic emancipation had failed him when he began his renewed agitation for repeal. He saw a faction composed of the oldest of his former followers breaking away with contempt from his principle—which he never, even in the face of strong temptation, abandoned—of constitutional and peaceful agitation, and inaugurating openly a campaign which after its death had its absurd upshot in abortive rebellion. Thousands of people whom he had blessed with religious freedom still clung to him, indeed, as their liberator, but he had to endure, in his old age, the scoffs of men who should have upheld his weakening hands and solaced his closing years. This abandonment he felt keenly, effectbled as he was by the labors and hardships that he had undergone, and he could not utterly bitterness look back on his long exile to Ireland when he reflected how much was his reward. Worse than that he lived long enough to see the wreck of the fell famine which swept away thousands of victims, with the consciousness that he could do nothing to stay the progress of the destroyer. Had he been in the prime of strong manhood, he might have struck up against this combined assault of evil fate and man's ingratitude that his physical force was gone and the failure of his high hopes was more than he could bear. Had he foreseen that in years to come both England and Ireland would do justice to his memory and that others would take up the work on their own lines, his light might not have gone out so suddenly or a shadow of death have been anticipated by such dark reflections.

Parnell's closing years were clouded by disappointment. Rivals had thrust themselves aside and the cause which he had led for the first since O Connell to champion on a constitutional basis passed into the keeping of less scrupulous men. It was clear that it was impossible to restore Parnell to the ranks of his party and his heart feelings he withdrew from the leadership, from which he had in fact already deposed.

Neither O'Connell nor Butt had a terrible cause for self reproach as their end drew near. In his case, the nemesis of the creation of his own conduct could not, like his worthier successors at the head of Irish agitation, rebuke his followers for a desertion of his regard for and their defiance of the principle on which he had founded the movement. Parnell's death, therefore, leaves the cause of home rule in a position to which it had never risen under either O'Connell or Butt, and, as a parliamentary leader, he was the greatest man of them all.

MONO COUNCIL.

The council met on the 2nd of October pursuant to adjournment. The reeve in the chair. Minutes of last council meeting read and adopted.

Communication from the council of Melmur stating that Jas Dean has presented them with a bill of $44 for board furnished one Alexander Livingston (now deceased) claiming that he was a resident of Mono, and that the Mono council ought to pay the bill. No action taken.

Communication from D R Galbraith of Hockley, claiming $500 damages from his buggy being upset on the Wheelock hill—No action taken.

Moved by Mr. Allen, seconded by Mr Still, that the sum of $5.50 be paid to Joseph Anderson for cedar provided for culvert opposite lot No. 22, 6th line.

The council then adjourned to meet on the 15th day of December, at the hour of 10 o'clock, a. m.

ANDREW HENRY, Clerk.

HORNING'S MILLS.

DEAD.—Mr. John Emerick, one of the oldest settlers of Hornings Mills, died in the Toronto asylum on Saturday week. He had been an inmate of the asylum for about sixteen years. His remains were brought home for interment on Monday.

INCORPORATED.—Messrs. R. Slack, B. McGhee, V. Bates, J. F. Breen, A. Tupling, Geo. Laking and others have obtained letters of incorporation as the Hornings Mills Milling Co (limited), with a capital stock of $12,000.

DUFFERIN'S BIG FAIR.

A GOOD CROWD AND A SPLENDID EXHIBITION.

Each Department Fill'd

INTERESTING RACES ADD TO THE AMUSEMENT OF THE PEOPLE.

ROOTS, VEGETABLES AND FLOWERS AHEAD OF LAST YEAR'S DISPLAY

The annual exhibition in connection with the Dufferin Agricultural and Orangeville Horticultural Societies was held on the exhibition grounds here on Thursday and Friday, and was more successful than any fair held under the auspices of the above societies during the past four years. The greater portion of Thursday was occupied in getting the various exhibits in place, and the show was not in full blast until Friday. The weather, fortunately, was all that could be desired, and if favored with similar days in the future next year's fair will boom as of yore.

IN THE HALL.

The ground floor of the commodious hall was chiefly filled with grain, vegetables, fruit, flowers, furniture, musical instruments, and various other articles, and all the above lines were far ahead of last year. Upstairs the entries for ladies' work and fine arts were superior to last year's exhibition, and the handsome products of Orangeville's talented ladies were greatly admired.

SOME GREAT STOCK.

The show of live stock generally was in keeping with that of previous years, but the number of horses was considerably better than the average. Several horses that captured first prizes at the Toronto exhibition attended this fair and, of course, got the red ticket here. The cattle, sheep and swine pens also contained many good animals. One leading feature about this year's show was the horse-racing which everybody enjoyed. A number of good horses was on hand, and the running race created a good deal of interest. If the directors would increase the prize it would induce horse-owners who never attend our fair to call around and participate in the events.

There must have been several pick pockets at work on the grounds the second day of the fair, as about a dozen thefts were reported to the police. Constable Fremlin was detained to shadow suspects and he succeeded in landing one slick Toronto thief in the toils. It was a clever piece of work and Mr. Fremlin deserves to be complimented on his capture.

On the whole the exhibition was a success, but next year more special attractions should be secured.

Owing to the extensive list of prize winners, we are obliged to make our report as brief as possible.

FAIR FLIPS.

The gate receipts amounted to $325. This was an increase of $50 over last year.

For a wonder it did not rain and everybody thought the weather clerk was "off his chunk."

Several refreshment booths were ready for business the second day of the fair, and all did fairly well.

One of Edison's phonographs was on exhibition at the south end of the pavilion, but business in that line was not brisk.

Dr. Barr of Shelburne, Dufferin's representative at Toronto, acted as one of the judges at the races and all agreed that the doctor was "quite a sport."

Complaints were made to Inspector Anderson that a certain booth was selling "red eye," but he investigated the case and found there was "nothing in it."

Miss Sarah Ferguson of the East ward had probably the most unique article on exhibition. It consisted of a string of 1600 buttons strung along one side of the hall.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Rheumatism and Gout—These purifying and soothing remedies deserve the earnest attention of all persons liable to gout, sciatica, or other painful affections of the muscles, nerves, or joints. The Ointment should be applied after the affected parts have been patiently fomented with warm water, when the ointment should be diligently rubbed upon the adjacent skin, unless the friction causes pain. Holloway's Pills should be simultaneously taken to diminish pain, reduce inflammation, and purify the blood. This treatment alates the violence, and lessens the frequency of gout, rheumatism, and all spasmodic diseases which spring from hereditary predisposition, or from any accidental weakness of constitution. The Ointment checks the local malady, while the Pills restore vital power.

In Chancery.

PURSUANT to the Judgment in the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice for Ontario, made in the matter of partition between Thomas James Hughson, plaintiff, and Elizabeth Hughson, Archibald Hamilton, Caroline Hughson, Esther Maria Hughson, Hugh Edward Hughson, Alice Mary Hughson and Mary Etta Hamilton, defendants, all creditors or other persons who have specific liens on the west half of Lot Number 13, in the 2nd Concession, in the Township of Amaranth, in the County of Dufferin, or upon any undivided estate or interest therein of any of the above-named parties by means of any mortgage or other lien or security sufficient to bind lands according to the law of this Province are hereby required to produce to me at my Chambers in the Court House, in the TOWN of ORANGEVILLE, on or before

at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, full particulars of such liens or encumbrances, together with satisfactory evidence of the amount due thereon. Immediately after the said date, the sale of said land will be proceeded with under such judgment, and only such liens or encumbrances as I may then have notice of, pursuant to this advertisement, will be entitled to rank upon the proceeds thereof.

Pursuant to the said Judgment the creditors of James Hughson, late of the Township of Amaranth in said county, who died on the 9th day of January, 1886, are, on or before the said 19th day of October, 1891, to send by post prepaid, to W. L. WALSH, Orangeville, their Christian and Surnames addresses and descriptions, full particulars of their claims, statement of their accounts and the nature of the securities held by them (if any) and in default thereof they will be peremptorily excluded from the benefit of the said Judgment.

All creditors holding any securities must produce the same before me at my Chambers, aforesaid, upon the 21st day of OCTOBER, 1891, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, being the time appointed for adjudicating on the claims.

Dated this 29th day of September, 1891.

On Wednesday morning of last week the house and contents of Mr Jas Maxwell at Melville Cross were destroyed by fire, and it is thought a firebug had something to do with it. The insurance of $300 was allowed.

Harvest home services were held in the First avenue Methodist church last Sunday, and the interior of the edifice was handsomely decorated for the occasion Rev. M. L. Pearson, the pastor, occupied the pulpit and preached an appropriate sermon.

Yesterday work was commenced on the new English church at Hillsburg and the edifice is expected to be in readiness before many weeks. Mr Jas. H Hughes of this town was awarded the contract for the brickwork and Mr D McDonald will do the carpenter work.

THE THREE EVENTS OF LIFE.—During the month of September there were registered at the town clerk's office 6 births, 2 marriage and 6 deaths.

HELD OVER.—Owing to the pressure on our columns this week we are obliged to hold over several interesing local items and correspondence from Camilla, Athlone and Credit Forks.

H. S. CONVOCATION.—A week from to-morrow the high school pupils celebrate convocation, and in the town hall in the evening prizes will be presented to the successful competitors at the sports which took place a couple of weeks ago. Music, clees, etc., will be rendered by the pupils.

A PROFITABLE COW.—On Tuesday afternoon last Mr. J. M. Smith's thoroughbred Durham cow gave birth to twin calves, a male and female, and Mr. Smith has come to the conclusion that the animal is more valuable than he at first supposed. Two years ago Mr. S. purchased the cow for the handsome price of $200.

RESIGNED.—Mr. J. C. Reid, first assistant master at the public school has handed in his resignation and at a meeting of the board yesterday it was accepted. Mr. Reid has been connected with the school for about eight years, and has always shown himself to be a most painstaking teacher, and, therefore, his determination to resign was received with regret.

GREAT CREDIT SALE.—Mr. Thomas Smith will offer for sale by public auction at his farm, lot 15, con. 1, Caledon, in the village of Charleston, on Friday, Oct 23, all his valuable farm stock consisting of horses, cattle, sheep and pigs The best bred stock in the county is to be found amongst Mr. Smith's, and as his barns and feed were destroyed by fire everything will be sold. The sale is to commence at 1 o'clock sharp, and a large crowd should attend. Easy terms will be given.

HONORING THEIR PASTOR.—At 8 o'clock next Monday evening Rev. A. Henderson, the esteemed pastor of St. Mark's church, will be presented with an address by the churchwardens. On Sunday Rev. Mr Henderson will celebrate his thirtieth anniversary as incumbent of the parish of Orangeville. The presentation will take place in the school room of the church and the clergy of neighboring parishes will be present and deliver addresses appropriate to the occasion. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

J. P.'s SHOT.—Last week's Georgetown Herald says: Mr. J. P. McMillan, barrister of Orangeville, has been in town during the past few days with the thought of establishing a manufactory for the manufacture of a stove of his own invention, especially adapted for the use of soldiers in time of war, camping parties, &c, &c. The stove is 18 inches long, 10 wide and 10 high. Mr. McMillan has received commendations from army officers of high standing who are under an impression that he has invented an article that will fill a "long felt want."

ST MARK'S PASTOR.—Harvest Home services will be held in St. Mark's church on Sunday next. Rev. E A. Irsing of Dundas will occupy the pulpit in the morning and Rev. G B Morley of Tullamore will conduct the evening services. The occasion will also be the thirtieth anniversary of Rev. A Henderson's incumbency of the parish of Orangeville, and during that period of time the rev. gentleman has worked zealously for the welfare of his flock, and the result of his labors are shown by the large congregation and handsome edifice that constitute St. Mark's.

IT'S GALL.—It has always been a mystery to us, says the Bolton Enterprise, how merchants can expect a local paper to thrive when they do not spend a cent in advertising from one year's end to another. They expect the paper to up hold their interests against outside places and sometimes have the unalloyed gall to ask a publisher to notice in his columns some particular line of goods they have just received. The old story about advertising not paying has gone where it should remain. In some villages ten times the amount of money is spent in advertising that there is in others, and such are the villages that are going ahead.

ABOUT AN OVERCOAT.—Some of the questionable things of the life of the bogus priest, James Keough, alias Dan. Hunt, are coming to light. This worthy, it will be remembered, came here about two weeks ago and passed himself off as a priest who was deaf and dumb. Fortunately the fraud was detected before he had been here very long, and he was arrested as a vagrant and sent to jail for two months. The other day, says the Guelph Herald, Colet Randall received a message from Orangeville stating that an overcoat had been stolen from Mr. S H. McKitrick on the 27th August. The description given of the thief answered with that of Keough, and word to that effect was sent to Orangeville and Mr. McKitrick came here on Friday and identified the man at the jail as the thief. He was questioned, when he admitted taking the overcoat, and said he sold it to a farmer for $2 County Crown Attorney Myers of Orangeville also lost a coat about the same time, and it is supposed the two coats were stolen by the same man.

DEAD AT LAST.—The death rate at the Orangeville jail is not diminishing by any means, but it appears to be the increase. The latest victim to shuffle off this mortal coil within the cold stone walls of that huge pile was poor old Chambers Faloon, who has been on the brink of the grave for several months past. THE SUN has spoken of this unfortunate, poverty stricken man on more than one occasion, and a couple of weeks ago we predicted that poor Faloon was not long for this pitiless world. And at exactly 12 o'clock on Thursday Chambers received the terrible summons, but in reality it was what he had been praying for for many months, and, of course, as we all shall be compelled to do some day he had to obey. After the unfortunate fellow's spirit had fled the coroner was summoned and, as the law commands, an inquest was held and the antiquated verdict of "death from natural causes" was returned by the jury. The remains were interred in the potter's field in the Town cemetery at 6 o'clock the same evening.

A CASE OF LUNACY.—Thos Hammond, an emigrant boy from Dr. Barnardo's Orphan Home, has gone out of his mind, and was committed by Justice Graham on Thursday to Orangeville jail, from which place he will likely be removed to the asylum should he not get better The boy came out to Canada last April, and since then has been with Mr Wm. Lennox of Banda. Mr. Lennox says Hammond was a good, faithful boy, and was smart and intelligent For the past two weeks he has been failing in flesh and at times seemed light headed and talked and acted foolishly, and on Sunday, 27th ult., he took a turn for the worse, his mind becoming wholly unbalanced. Mr Lennox and Mr. J Duff brought the boy to Shelburne on Thursday, and he was taken to Orangeville next day by County Constable Henderson. The boy told Mr. Henderson that his father was living, but he knows not where. Nothing known to Mr. Lennox was preying on the boy's mind, he being mostly cheerful, and no cause can be attributed for the boy's most unfortunate condition. He was a good singer and whistler, and frequently indicated a happy and contented disposition by breaking out into song or whistling some popular lay.—Free Press.

HE WAS A SLICK 'UN!

JOE NEWELL, A TORONTO PICKPOCKET CAPTURED ON THE GROUND.

He Gets Off With a Year in the Central.

HIS MUG DECORATES THE ROGUES GALLERY AT TORONTO.

For a number of years pickpockets have been operating at the Dufferin Union exhibition, and although the special constables kept a sharp lookout, some of the light fingered gentry were ever hauled in and punished for their crimes. The second day of this year's fair, however, several ladies requested that their purses had been stolen, and Constable Franklin was detained to capture the thief. The cop became suspicious of a young fellow from Toronto who gave the name of James Charlton, but whose real name is Joseph Newell, and he was closely watched. As shown afterwards, Franklin's suspicions were well founded and he did not have to watch long until he saw the young criminal removing a pocketbook from the skirt pocket of Miss Corbett, a young lady of this town. The constable asked the lady if her purse was in her pocket and to her astonishment, she discovered it was not, and then the sneak-thief was taken into custody. He went along quietly until Constables Franklin and Hubbard, who had been called to assist, attempted to put the bracelets on his wrists, and then he made a terrible struggle for liberty. It was all the two cops could do to overpower the prisoner, but at last he was subdued and walked quietly to the lockup P. M Pattullo committed the prisoner to jail until Saturday, when he appeared in the police court to answer the charge preferred against him. The court room was pretty well crowded and considerable interest was manifested. Crown Attorney Myers prosecuted and the prisoner conducted his own case. He was very quick to see a point that was favorable to him and his cross-examination of witnesses was about as skilful as the average lawyer. The trial lasted nearly all afternoon and when all the evidence was in his worship reserved his decision until Tuesday.

ONE YEAR IN THE CENTRAL.

On Tuesday P M Pattullo gave his decision in the case of Joe Newell, alias Charlton, alias Donovan, the pickpocket, and sentenced him to one year's imprisonment in the central prison, Toronto. The prisoner admitted that he had picked the pockets of two women, but said he had no accomplices Eight or nine rifled pocketbooks were found, and if what Newell says is true there was more than one sneak thief on the grounds.

IN THE ROGUES' GALLERY.

Newell's portrait decorates the rogues' gallery at the Toronto police headquarters, he having been roped in on Aug. 7 He is described on the back of the photo as follows:

Jas. Newell, alias Donovan, No. 1251, taken Aug. 7, 1891; residence, Toronto; legitimate occupation, tailor; criminal occupation pickpocket; nationality, Canadian; age 20; height, 5 feet 3½ inches; weight, 113 lbs; build slim; complexion, dark; eyes, hazel; color of hair, black; color of beard, none; peculiarities of build or features, scars, marks, etc, small dot on left wrist

After Many Days.

Bloomfield, Man., Feb. 14, 1890.

W. H. Comstock, Brockville, Ont

DEAR SIR,—For 11 years my wife was a martyr to that dreaded disease, Dyspepsia. Nothing relieved her; physicians were consulted and medical skill tried, without avail. One doctor advised a change of climate, suggesting Manitoba as a desirable place. We acted upon this advice, coming here two years ago. The change of climate wrought a change indeed, but for the worse, as she was soon confined to bed, and under the care of two doctors, who asserted she could not live but a month longer. A neighbor came to see her one day who had been reading your Almanac. She told her of the testimonials she read in it, of the great amount of good they were doing, and advised her to try a box of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. She did so, was relieved, kept improving, and is now able to do housework, and continues the use of Morse's Pills.

Yours gratefully,

GEORGE DUNN.

People Wonder

WHEN they find how rapidly health is restored by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The reason is that this preparation contains only the purest and most powerful alteratives and tonics. To thousands yearly it proves a veritable elixir of life.

Mrs. Jos. Lake, Brockway Centre, Mich., writes: "Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an in my condition, my appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life, and I cannot thank you too much."

"We, the undersigned, citizens of Brockway Centre, Mich., hereby certify that the above statement, made by Mrs. Lake, is true in every particular and entitled to full credence."—O. F. Chamberlain, G. W. Waring, C. A. Wells, Druggist.

"My brother, in England, was, for a long time, unable to attend to his occupation, by reason of sores on his foot. I sent him Ayer's Almanac and the testimonials it contained induced him to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using it a little while, he was cured, and is now a well man, working in a sugar mill at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia."—A. Attewell, Sharbot Lake, Ontario.

ALONE.

My life puts forth to sea alone;
The skies are dark above,
All round I hear the gray waters moan—
Alas for vanished love!

"Oh, lovely life that proceeth on
Across the waters of years,
Where say the guiding pilots gone—
Whose is the hand that steers?"

The pilots they are left behind
Upon yon golden strand;
We drift before the driving wind;
We cannot miss the land—

That land to which we hurry on,
Across the angry years;
Hope being dead, and sweet love gone,
There is no land that steers.

HIS GIRL.

Her eyes are lovely. I won't tell
What hue their loveliness may show;
Her braided hair becomes her well,
In color like—but ah, no! no!
That is my secret—red or brown,
It is the prettiest hair in town!

She walks with such a dainty charm,
But whether she be short or tall,
Of rounded limb or sylph like form,
Her figure suits me—that is all!
Nor do I choose the world to know
If silk her dress or calico.

My precious girl is worth her weight,
Not in rough gold, but diamonds fine,
And whether that be small or great
I leave the reader to divine.
Ask me to gage her solid worth—
She would outweigh the whole round earth!

To rhyme her praise is such delight
That I must keep it to myself,
Lest one should better verses write
And lay me gently on the shelf.
I am not jealous, but, you see,
This charming girl belongs to me.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

Pickpockets gave Guelph's annual fair a wide berth this year.

Mayor Porter of Belleville, who was convicted of personating at the last election for the Legislative Assembly, was fined $100 and sentenced to one day's imprisonment.

Herbert, the two and a half-year old son of David Brown of Brooke accidentally pulled over on himself a pail of hot water which had been left on the floor in readiness for scrubbing and was scalded to death.

The daily shipment of grapes from Windsor have reached nearly 60 tons. The growers are getting 2½c for their crop now and expect to get 3c before the end of the week. The crop is nearly harvested in Essex county and wine making is in full operation.

Miss Cox, an English woman who has been in Guelph some 17 years, and who is over 74 years of age, has decided to return to the land of her birth. The relief officer, on hearing of her determination, called on a few of her friends who consented to pay her passage across the ocean.

VICTORY AT VIVIAN

IN our family faithful work has been done by Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry as a sure and quick cure for diarrhœa, dysentery, and all summer complaints. I can recommend it to all as a family friend, always true and faithful.—Mrs W. Bishop, Vivian, Ont.

Mr. W D. Clark, North Easthope, has an imported Clydesdale brood mare and colt. Tuesday night some person cut the hair off the tails of both animals within about an inch of the flesh. The work is supposed to have been prompted by spite. Mr. Clark is offering a reward of $100 for the arrest of the guilty party.

A peculiar and fatal accident befell Charles Gibbons, the little son of Mr. John Gibbons, residing just north of Ingersoll, on Tuesday last. He had left the house just after breakfast and it is supposed was trying to lift the gate leading to a pasture field in which were a couple of calves, when the gate fell striking him in the neck, across the jugular vein, killing him instantly.

An immense decrease of crime in Great Britain has been fairly quoted as a proof of the vastly improved social condition of the people. Recent returns show that since 1882 no less than eighty prisons have been closed and converted to other uses, while others show a remarkable falling off in the number of convicts serving terms of imprisonment.

FRUE FAITH

"I have great faith in Burdock Blood Bitters as a blood purifier. I have taken three bottles for bad blood and find a perfect cure. It is a grand medicine and I recommend wherever I go.—Ida Sanderson, Toronto, Ont.

The theory of the light of the aurora borealis was evolved from the analysis of its light by the spectroscope, which showed that it was caused by electrical discharges among the particles of meteoric dust in the atmosphere. The broad red line of the spectrum of iron is shown in all these cases and thus upholds the theory, as it is well known that the principal part of meteors is metallic iron.

At Brampton the other day a west ward town father who is noted for the limpid sweetness of his superficial nature and peace bearing pretentions lost his holiness the other evening through the irritation caused by a small boy playing with his gate. The ruffianly manner in which he bouted the youngster was a terrible outrage on the Christ's teaching which he undertakes to disseminate on a Sunday.

You have catarrh, and other remedies have failed you—then give Nasal Balm a fair trial. There is no case of catarrh it will not cure if the directions are faithfully followed.

When a man marries in France he becomes legally responsible not alone for the support of his wife, but for the support of her parents, should they become destitute. This law is older than the divorce law, and there seems to be some defect in the provisions of the latter. A few weeks ago a young husband who had been divorced some time previously received a demand from his ex-mother-in-law for the usual instalment of alimony which he had allowed her. He naturally demurred, contending that as he was rid of his wife the law would surely not continue to saddle his mother-in-law upon him. But the Paris courts, where the mother-in-law carried the case, told the young man that the code was unmistakable and he would have to continue to support his ex wife's mother. He appealed to another court, which last week reversed the judgment of the lower court.

CHOICE CUTS OF BEEF.

POINTERS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS WHO DESIRE GOOD MEAT.

Parts of the Animal That Are Growing Scarce and Dear—Some Cheap Portions That Have the Advantage of Nutritive Qualities Over Even Porterhouse.

The majority of housewives are likely soon to find it almost an impossibility to purchase them at all should the so-called "best cuts" of prime beef continue increasing in prices as they become more and more scarce.

The prime ballock used as beef in the New York market weighs on an average 1,600 pounds. Of this amount there are two sets of first quality ribs, containing seven ribs in each set and weighing about forty-five pounds each. There are also two loins, each weighing forty-five pounds, making a total of only 180 pounds of choice meat, leaving a balance of 1,420 pounds of beef, called—a misnomer—"rough or coarse meat," because it sells at lower prices.

So far as nutritive qualities are concerned, the advantage is much in favor of the cheaper cuts, but owing to false ideas on domestic economy we all demand a small quantity of the 180 pounds. We cannot tell just why we do, except by blaming "custom," as we force the wholesale and the retail dealers to make all of their profit on an animal out of this small amount of beef, causing him to run chances of disposing of the remainder at even cost.

It is the utilization of the chuck, the rump, the best parts of the round, the flank, plate and brisket of what is called prime cattle, wherein lies the future happiness of our households; true, a little more attention must be paid to preparing these joints for the table than is devoted to cooking the two choice cuts, but the endless variety of tempting dishes that may be made from them more than compensates for the extra trouble, not to mention the saving in expense.

FLANK STEAK.

It may gratify the housewife to know that the men who are continually handling beef select for their own eating a flank steak, claiming it to be more savory and quite as tender as the tenderloin—a steak they rarely eat. This boneless piece of meat is found between the inside and outside layer of creamy colored fat in the flank, and when taken from well fed stock is excellent, although it may be bought at about ten cents per pound. It may be broiled whole or cut diagonally across the grain, then rolled or buttered before broiling.

Shakespeare used the word "chuck" as a term of endearment, but why the ribs under the shoulder blades are so called is not quite clear, unless some hotel employee it is a term of endearment, luck having been served them so often. Terrapin was looked upon with scorn by the old plantation negroes, he says it was at one period served to the rebel's table. Our housewives should see the Shakespeare ocean view of this particular part of the animal. It seems almost impossible to me that so few housekeepers are familiar with the possibilities of this joint.

The thin gristled top piece over the muscle, makes the best piece of meat in the brisket for the real cream dish of boiled beef to be served with horseradish sauce; it makes the best of pickled tongue, brassed, rolled, savory and a hundred other dishes made of beef, all of which are familiar to our foreign German housewives, and should be known to the American housewives, because they add variety to the daily menu. The meat adhering to the ribs forms much more satisfactory steak than the so-called sirloin, for which we believe we charge from eighteen to twenty cents per pound. This piece of meat must be trimmed and served as a fillet of beef. It is quite acceptable as a Mignon steak, or Bordelaise, and if the chuck steaks get cool enough that they are good enough for the most exacting epicure served in a "set of twelve" dinner.

Over one half of the dealers in New York sell the part of the animal from the tip of the large tailed ox, which gives the round as sirloin steak. Notwithstanding their protestations and the fact that under the tip there is a small, thick piece of fillet, the point is passed in many beef, nothing more or less than. Under its false name the dealer has a perfect monopoly from our seven or four cents per pound more than we would be able to do it sold by its proper name. [illegible] why this is so is inexplicable, especially as it is a fact that the sweetest part of the ox, the shrimp when cut across the grain, makes a steak head the lining the mouth of a cultured Boston epicure. In New York rump steak, the tender of the animal, cannot be found on the bill of fare in one of our first class establishments.

[illegible] if there is a better dish than a [illegible] of prime beef, I have yet to meet it. Just a nice piece of [illegible] cut from the rump, broiled over a boiling water, in a double broiler, [illegible] steam, laid at a [illegible] temperature, then removed. This [illegible] to consolate the [illegible] prevent the loss of [illegible] of the meat.

[illegible] than slice of [illegible] the young carrots and [illegible] all quartered; one [illegible] half a dozen each of [illegible] and peppercorns, a [illegible] parsley, and a half tea [illegible] down a gallon of [illegible] water, add to it two [illegible] together with a tablespoonful of [illegible] light [illegible] the saucepan where it will simmer at the lowest [illegible] for two hours, baste frequently, and when practicable keep the saucepan low with live coals or the hot water over.

Remove the meat and place it in the oven a few moments, turn the sauce and glaze the meat with it while it is in the oven. Serve by surrounding the dish with little mounds of young carrots, way beans, cauliflower, etc.

The American housewife apparently has it in her own hands to decide whether or not the so called best cuts of beef shall sooner or later become prohibitory to her. If she will but stop to consider that there are cheaper and more profitable joints to be had and will use them the fatal hour will be put off indefinitely. If she still persists in having her share of the 180 pounds there will soon be such a scarcity of these joints that only the extremely wealthy can buy them; the majority will then be compelled to buy the others whether they want to or not.—Thomas J. Murrey in New York Herald.

Boston and Cromwell.

Edward Everett Hale is trying to get Boston to honor Oliver Cromwell by hanging the Puritan soldier's portrait in the Old South Church.

Mrs. Celina Ledoux, who escaped from the Kingston asylum on Sept 15, was discovered at Trenton. She was in an exhausted condition and her limbs and feet were badly swollen. She slept in the woods. Two nights before she was found she was awakened by something licking her hand. She says it was a bear and she thought her last hour had come but the bear quietly walked away withought molesting her. She subsisted almost entirely on apples found along the road, and her appearance gave evidence of severe exposure and privation.

An Alpine climber has just expressed that a knowledge of several languages is very desirable for mountaineer. He says that while ascending a mountain recently the linguists in the party were somewhat annoyed by the guide's French. It was often necessary to carry out the guide's instructions at once. "What does he say?" the men of a single tongue would ask. The linguist says his answer generally was:—"He tells you to kick your toes into the snow like the devil."

Ayer's Hair Vigor

IS the "Most" Hair-dressing. It restores the color to gray hair; promotes a fresh and vigorous growth; prevents the formation of dandruff; makes the hair soft and silken; and imparts a delicate but lasting perfume.

"Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. I tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best in the world."—T. Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a number of years, and it has always given me satisfaction. It is an excellent dressing, prevents the hair from turning gray, insures its vigorous growth, and keeps the scalp white and clean."—Mary A. Jackson, Salem, Mass.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for promoting the growth of the hair, and think it unequaled. For restoring the hair to its original color, and for a dressing, it cannot be surpassed."—Mrs. Geo. La Fever, Eaton Rapids, Mich.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a cure for dandruff."—J. W. Bowen, Editor "Enquirer," McArthur, Ohio.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past two years, and found it all it is represented to be. It restores the natural color to gray hair, causes the hair to grow freely, and keeps it soft and pliant."—Mrs. M. V. Day, Cohoes, N. Y.

"My father, at about the age of fifty, lost all the hair from the top of his head. After one month's trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor the hair began coming, and, in three months, he had a fine growth of hair of the natural color."—P. J. Cullen, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

A pumpkin party was given by an enterprising society woman of Manhattan, Kan., the other evening. The rooms were lighted by large lanterns made of pumpkins, and prizes were given to the guests who made the closest estimate of the number of seed in a certain pumpkin. The only thing lacking to make the entertainment a complete success was pumpkin pie, which was tabooed under the mistaken impression that party was not a proper edible for an evening gathering.

AUNTY'S ADVICE.

"My brother had severe summer complaint about a year ago and no remedies seemed to relieve him. At last my aunt advised us to try Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and before he had taken one bottle he was entirely cured."—Adelaide Crittenden, Baldwin, Ont.

An old and highly respected resident of Honeywood has passed away—Mary Ann, beloved wife of Mr. Geo Siddai, aged 66 years. Last Wednesday morning she was seized with paralysis resulting in her death on Friday. Deceased had been a resident of these parts for about forty years. She had eleven children, six of whom are still living. The funeral took place Sunday at 2 p.m., the remains being interred in the Methodist burying grounds of this place.—Shelburne Economist.

The Best of Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of even one week they will yield from 1½ to 2½ per cent less milk, and that of a inferior quality. Such milk will not an average, turn sour in twenty four hours less than that drawn from the same or similar cows receiving salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analysed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock fine and coarse, at

NORMAN, Ont., January 15, 1890.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result? not first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So in the human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.
Yours faithfully,
H. P. ATWELL.

DEAR SIR,—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills." Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an annual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling outfit complete without a box of Morse's Pills. Yours, &c.

Holloway's Pills & Ointment

WHEREAS I AM INFORMED THAT one Joseph Hardcastle, of New York, is manufacturing and selling Pills and Ointment under the same or similar names to those of Holloway, I hereby give notice that I will not be responsible for any Pills or Ointment not manufactured by me, nor for any Pills or Ointment sold in any of the Boxes, Pots, or Jars bearing my name, which have not been purchased from me or my Agents. I also give notice that I have commenced Proceedings against the said Joseph Hardcastle for his fraudulent imitation of my Pills and Ointment, and for his assuming the name of Holloway, and for his counterfeiting the Signature of Holloway, and for his fraudulently copying the Dies, Plates, Wrappers, Boxes, Pots, and Jars, formerly used by me, and for his fraudulently imitating the Trade Marks, Labels, and Advertisements formerly used by me, and I caution the public against purchasing any of the spurious Pills or Ointment made by the said Joseph Hardcastle, or any other person or persons, unless they see that the Pots, Jars, or Boxes have not my Name thereon, and that the Labels on the Pots, Jars, or Boxes have not my Trade Mark thereon, as I do not make any Pills or Ointment whatever for any person or persons, nor have I any Agent to sell my Pills or Ointment who is not provided with a Testimonial signed by myself. The Genuine Medicines are manufactured only at my Establishment, 533 Oxford Street, London, and are sold by all Vendors of Medicine throughout the Civilized World, with Directions in 12 Languages. Purchasers should look to the Name and Address on the Pots, Jars, or Boxes before purchasing. There is a Large Gain to Purchasers of the Genuine Medicines, as they are Genuine, and will Cure many Complaints which Spurious Imitations fail to Cure. The Genuine Medicines are Manufactured only by Professor Holloway, and not by any Person or Persons in the United States, nor are any of my Medicines sold there.

Every Pot and Box of my Genuine Medicines bears on the Label the address 533 Oxford Street, London, and has affixed to each the British Government Stamp with the words Holloway's Pills and Ointment engraved thereon.

THE END OF SUMMER.

The birds laugh loud and long together,
When Fashion's followers speed away.
At the first cool breath of autumn weather;
Why, this is the time, ere the bride, to stay!
When the deep calm and hard the deep sky over
Both look their passion through sunkis od space.
And blue-eyed maid and her blue-eyed lover
Might each gaze into the other's face.

Oh, this is the time when careful spying
Discovers the secrets nature knows.
You find when the butterflies plan for flying
Before the thrush or the blackbird goes:
You see some days by the water's edges
A brilliant border of red and black,
And then—off over the hills and hedges
It flutters away on the summer's track.

The shy little sumacs, in lonely places,
Bowed all summer with dust and heat,
Like clean-clad children, with rain-washed faces,
Are dressed in scarlet from head to feet.
And never a flower had the boastful summer
In all the blooms that decked her sod,
So royal hued as the later comer,
The purple chum of the golden rod.

Some chill gray dawn you note with grieving
That the King of Autumn is on his way.
You see with a sorrowful slow believing
How the wanton winds have gone astray.
They wear the stain of bold caresses
Of riotous revels with old King Frost;
They dazzle all eyes with their gorgeous dresses,
Nor care that their green young leaves are lost.

A wet wind blows from the east one morn'g,
The wood's gray garments looks draggled out
You hear a sound and your heart takes warning—
The birds are planning their winter route
They wheel and settle and scold and wrangle,
Their tempers are ruffled, their robes bend;
Then whirr—and away in feathered tangle
They fade to the south like a passing cloud

A songless wood-stripped bare of glory
A sodden moor that is black and brown;
The year has finished its last love story—
Oh, let us away to the gay, bright town!

—OR— TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER XVII.

"UPON my word, Sir Hilton, this is remarkable—most remarkable," said Mrs. Gunning, in her most emphatic manner. "Who would have supposed it possible that we should see you here? And as Mr. Gunning observes, one may come to the London Bridge Station a hundred times, and nothing so singular will happen again as our meeting you here to-day, and your brother yesterday."

"My brother!" exclaimed Sir Hilton and his pale face fired a sudden red, then paled again. "It was for him I came to enquire. We—we have missed each other somehow here in London."

Mr. Gunning's nose here gave an audible mark of curiosity and astonishment.

"Well," said the lady, "that's rather singular, Sir Hilton. Mr Gunning is asking how it happened."

Sir Hilton responded to the question by another.

"When, where did you see my brother, Mrs. Gunning? Tell me at once. I beg of you."

"Bless me!" she exclaimed. "Is anything wrong? I saw him yesterday, when I came here to see some friends off for France. Very nice people they are Irish friends of ours—the Langleys. And of course you know your brother is gone?"

"Gone!" cried Sir Hilton. "Whither?"

"And don't you know he is gone to France?" said Mrs. Gunning—"went in the same train with the Langleys? It is precisely that, which Mr. Gunning was remarking on as singular, that you should be looking for him here when he is gone to the Continent."

Again Sir Hilton's handsome, worn face flushed, and he seemed for a moment unable to answer the eloquent lady, who spoke both for her husband and herself.

"Ah, yes," said Sir Hilton, "there has been some mistake between John and me about our departure. We have missed each other in the most stupid manner. You see, he left Trewavas the day before I did, and I could not remember by which train he said he would leave for Dover. He caught the Calais boat last night, I suppose?"

Sir Hilton looked anxiously at Mrs. Gunning, but the Gunning nose broke in here, and said, "Folkestone."

"You are quite correct, my dear—Folkestone, Boulogne, Paris—in fact, a 'through' ticket," said Mrs. Gunning. "The truth is, Sir Hilton, I helped Mr. Trewavas to get his ticket, for I never saw a man so ill in my life—not at all fit to travel, as Mr. Gunning justly remarked. I wonder Lady Trewavas allowed him to come up from Cornwall alone."

There was such a look of pain in Sir Hilton's eyes—bitter, ghastly pain—that Mrs. Gunning paused, and wondered in her own mind what there was in her words to call up such a look.

"I beg your pardon," said Sir Hilton. "I must bid you good-bye. I go on by the next Continental train. I wish to join my brother as quickly as possible."

"How delightful to be going to Paris!" said Mrs. Gunning.

Sir Hilton smiled wistfully at her as she spoke, and put out his hand to say farewell; Mr. Gunning, however, seized it, while his nose twisted ably on one side, and grunted something about "introductions."

"My dear, how thoughtful you always are," exclaimed Mrs Gunning, in great admiration. "Mr. Gunning is observing, Sir Hilton, that he thinks it will be a very pleasant thing for you to know our friends the Langleys. They are most charming people; and Florian Langley is really the prettiest girl I know. Now, do give us the name of your hotel in Paris, and we'll send you on letters of introduction to morrow."

Sir Hilton Trewavas pondered a moment, gloomily. Letters of introduction—what use he to do with these, going on such a quest as he was? Then he thought that perhaps in a little while secrecy could be kept no longer, and he must ask help from anyone, everyone, and in that case, the more friends he had the better.

"The Hotel du Louvre," he replied, hurriedly. "Many thanks for your kind offer. I shall be delighted to know your friends. Good bye."

"One moment more, Sir Hilton," said Mrs. Gunning. "Is there any news yet of that pout guilty creature, Olive Varcoe?"

"None," replied Sir Hilton, and his voice was husky and low

Mr Gunning's nose here said, "Dread full" in such a fierce way, that passers by turned and stared.

"You are quite right, my dear," replied Mrs Gunning. "My husband is asking if that poor, deluded young fellow, Charles Vigo, has returned home."

"I believe—believe not," said Sir Hilton; and with this he broke away from them, waving his hand as he disappeared among the crowd.

"I am quite of your opinion, love," said Mrs. Gunning, answering her husband's eloquent organ of speech; "there is something decidedly queer about Sir Hilton to day; and as to John yesterday—well, 'odd' is scarcely the word for it."

Mr. Gunning made a further remark, of which the words "dinner" and "nephew" were alone audible to the uninitiated. The ready Mrs Gunning, however, seized his meaning immediately

"Certainly, my love. I sent a note of invitation this morning to my nephew Chadwick and his friend Vivian Damerel. They dine with us to-morrow. Ah! there's Sir Hilton coming out of the telegraph office! I wonder who he has been sending a telegram to. 'Don't be so curious,' do you say? Why, my dear Tobias, there isn't a woman in the world with less curiosity than I possess; but I should like—Ah! Sir Hilton! telegraphing, are you? I hope there is nothing wrong How is Lady Trewavas?"

"Thanks, she is quite well," he replied "I am simply telegraphing to my hotel for my servant to bring on my luggage to Paris. I start directly."

Sir Hilton darted down the platform and into a ticket office, while Mr Gunning's nose expressed surprise at him; with a mysterious air.

"I knew you'd say so, Tobias—I was certain of it," said Mrs Gunning 'Going, you see, even without his luggage! Exactly, as I observed before, 'odd' isn't the word for it—no, nor yet 'queer.' My dear, you usually express yourself so well, you are so seldom at a loss for a word, that I wonder you can't give me the right one now. 'Eccentric' that's more like it, but even that does not put it strong enough. The poor fellow had such a wild, haunted look upon his face. Ah, they had better look after John Trewavas, or else—well it is evident Sir Hilton is following him with all speed, and quite right too. Of course, he has telegraphed to Lady Trewavas. I am not to be put off about the luggage, you know—stuff! Dear me! what unfortunate people those Trewavas are! My nephew and young Damerel will be quite interested when you tell them all this to-morrow, my dear."

Mrs. Gunning was perfectly correct in her idea. Her guests grew decidedly animated as she related her adventure at the railway station, which she did with so many deferential appeals to the marital nose, and so many interpretations of its eloquence, that, at the finish, Mr. Gunning sat smiling and complacent in the idea that he had himself told the whole story.

And Mr. Chadwick turned round, half-frightened, to gaze at Mr. Gunning who being an M. P., was making some notes with an air of immense business and superiority, at a little table all by himself. This was after dinner, when the small party had gathered round the fire in the drawing room, and Mr. Chadwick again said deprecatingly, "No harm in chaff, you know—not a bit."

"Mr. Gunning is immensely busy just now," whispered Mrs. Gunning "drawing up a bill he means to bring before the House."

"Oh, it's only a bill!" observed Mr. Chadwick, much relieved. "Well, I'm sure I hope he'll get paid."

Frantic demonstrations on the part of Damerel so aggravated poor Chadwick that he immediately conceived the idea of taking a "rise" out of him. Accordingly, with a slight motion of the head, he directed Mrs. Gunning's attention to his friend, just at the moment when his countenance had taken a most expressive twist in his endeavor to shock Chadwick's free of conventionalities.

"Now, do look at him, aunt," said he. "Do you consider he is a safe fellow to go about with? And he was worse than that in Ireland—give you my honor, he was. He saw a pretty girl by the roadside, and immediately the train came to a station, he bolted in order to run after her. By the bye, who was she, Damerel? You never told me."

"She was a 'Miss Langley,' replied Damerel, who, in his confusion, quite forgot that it was Olive's face which had drawn him from the train.

"Miss Langley!" said Mrs. Gunning. "Do you hear that, my dear? I wonder whether it could be Florian Langley."

"That was her name," said Vivian Damerel, in his most measured tones, though his heart beat with unaccountable quickness, as he uttered the words out slowly.

"Really!" remarked Mr. Gunning, holding up a letter against his expressive nose.

"Tobias is observing," said Mrs Gunning, "how singular it is, that just at this moment he should have written a letter of introduction for Sir Hilton Trewavas, making him known to Mrs. and Miss Langley. I think they will be very pleasant acquaintances for him; and, to tell the truth I am building a little romance upon the matter. You know what a state of mind poor Sir Hilton has been in, ever since that dreadfully mysterious affair. Well, now, wouldn't it be lucky if he were to take a fancy to Florian? It would be a desirable match on both sides, and I should be so pleased; wouldn't you, Mr. Damerel?"

"Horrid unpleasant, going without one's luggage," said Lieutenant Chadwick; "but my friend Damerel here does worse than that—starts without his head, I assure you—leaves it behind on the seat—telegraphs to me afterwards and I send it on to him in a hat box. Only a little chaff, you know. Any amount of chaff always going—round among our fellows. No harm in it, not a bit, you know."

Mr Damerel at that moment certainly considered Mrs. Gunning the most disagreeable woman in England, yet he managed to answer civilly that he should be perfectly delighted to hear of Sir Hilton Trewavas's marriage—"to the pig faced lady," he added, mentally.

"But I, too, am going to Paris, Mrs. Gunning," said he; "so, pray do give me an introduction to your friend, also, and then I'll watch the affair, and drop you a line weekly to let you know how your little romance is going on."

"Say a good word for your adorable nephew in your letter," interposed Chadwick, "and I'll cut the baronet out, and run off with the lady myself."

"You have no chance, Dick," retorted Mrs. Gunning. "But Mrs. Langley is so good-natured, that I may venture to introduce you both. Only take care—Florian will break your hearts if she can."

"I shall be delighted to let her try," observed Mr. Chadwick. "I can only say, on my part, she shall have all the honorable assistance possible. I wish, for her sake, my heart wasn't so desperately tough as it is."

"No nonsense, you know," cried Mr Gunning, with his nose very much in the air.

"Now, Dick, you hear what your uncle very judiciously observes," said his aunt: 'you are not to forget that Mrs. Langley is blind; therefore you are bound to be a perfect Bayard in your intercourse with her and her daughter. No garrison tricks, you know."

"My dear aunt, I am the most harmless fellow in the world," replied the young lieutenant. "I'm a babe in the wood, I assure you. And as to Damerel here, I'll look after him carefully. I promise you I'll put his head in his hat every time he calls on Mrs Langley; and he shan't take it off with his hat, either. And if I see any appearance of flirting about him, or other symptoms of insanity, I'll get his head shaved immediately, and put him in a strait waistcoat, and telegraph to you to let his friends know his condition. But being with me, he will be safe; I have always brains enough for two."

"My dear fellow," returned Vivian, "you mean you have no brains at all. If I don't hold you as we cross the Channel, you'll be blown away. You'll never stand a gust of wind. You know the proverb: 'Gone like chaff before the wind.' Now you are all chaff, and if that goes, I want to know what I shall have to take on to Paris with me except your portmanteau and your tailor's bills. Put a few of 'em in your pocket, Chadwick, before you start; they are heavy enough to hold you down."

"Did you ever hear a fellow have a more rufflanly style of conversation?" exclaimed Mr. Chadwick, delighted at this interchange of chaff. "I didn't mean to tell on him, but he deserves no mercy now; so I'll just relate a little anecdote, aunt, which will show you how he conducts himself when he gives way, you know, to his natural bent. As we were coming up from Liverpool, he allowed himself such play of feature, if I may so express myself, in the railway carriage, that when the guard came to collect the tickets, a passenger leant forward and said: 'Guard you had better ask that gentleman to show his ticket-of-leave!' There! that was what the personal appearance and style of Vivian Damerel, Esq., brought him to! Upon my word, if such a thing had happened to me, I should have collapsed. I should have shut myself up like a telescope, and retired into a case for the rest of my life."

Mr. Chadwick enjoyed this exquisite piece of chaff so much that, after laughing at it with intense glee, he sat silent, conning it over to himself, while Mrs. Gunning conversed with his friend.

"Do you know, Mr. Damerel," she said, "I was much impressed yesterday by Mr. Trewavas's singular behavior. He was quite rude to me, and Mr. Gunning very justly remarked that such conduct is perfectly unaccountable, unless a man is insane. I had proposed to him to travel in the same carriage with the Langley's thinking you know, it would be agreeable to him; and poor Mrs. Langley being blind, I thought too it would be nice for her and Florian to have a gentleman with them on the journey. Well, he positively refused. 'A fair face is the devil's mask, Mrs Gunning,' he said. 'No more fair faces for me. I grant they look like angels while they live, but did you ever see them after they die? When they come again, they show a man what they are. Strange sights are to be seen down yonder at Trewavas, Mrs Gunning. I can't stand it any longer—that gloomy place, I mean—they fret too much there and a sort of fever gets into the blood, you see. I'll try pleasure, gaiety, noise; loneliness is terrible. The devil tempts in the wilderness, and isn't the desert full of fiery serpents and dead men's bones? Paris is the best physic for such an ailment as mine.' He said all this Mr. Damerel, in such a wild way, and with his face so close to mine, that I assure you I was frightened. I wouldn't name this to you if you were not an old friend of the family."

"We are not quite on such friendly terms as we were," relied Damerel, gloomily.

"I am sorry for that," said Mrs. Gunning, "because I was going to ask you to speak confidentially to Sir Hilton."

"Impossible, Mrs. Gunning, I assure you!" exclaimed Damerel. "Anything I can do for John Trewavas I will, with pleasure; but I shall not put myself in contact with Sir Hilton if I can avoid it. Our ideas of duty, as regards one painful subject, clash. I am not surprised to hear that John has found Trewavas insupportable; and if, as you seem to think, he is still quite unhinged and excited I am not astonished at that, either. I firmly believe that, of the two brothers, he was the one most truly and firmly attached to poor Eleanor Maristowe."

"I have never heard this before," said Mrs Gunning, in a low voice. She looked surprised and excited, and her face grew gradually very pale. She was a clever woman, possessed of wonderful intuition, greatly sharpened by her daily interpretations of the marital nose, and there were thoughts now stirring in her head, which she would have been sorry to tell to Vivian Damerel "Well, of course," she resumed, recovering herself, "after what you have told me, Mr. Damerel, I cannot ask you to repeat to Sir Hilton the curious sort of talk which his brother held with me at the station. I would have told him myself, when I met him to-day, but he was in a hurry, and evidently anxious to avoid us."

Meanwhile Vivian Damerel was debating in his own mind whether he should relate to Mrs. Gunning his strange rencontre with Olive in Ireland at the Langley's. The sight of her wondrous Eastern beauty, as it flashed upon him for a moment, seemed almost a dream now, and if the character of her face, and the passion of those deep dark eyes had been less singular, he might have felt tempted to deem himself deceived by a chance likeness, and the color of his own thoughts. As it was, he was sure he had seen Olive, and reflecting that the Langleys had certainly left home instantly to avoid being questioned, he decided on not naming her in connection with them to their friend, Mrs. Gunning.

Mr Chadwick, being rather afraid to try his chaff on an M. P., had sat silent and bored; and now, catching his friend's eye, he made a frantic telegraph of himself, indicative of a strong desire to retreat at once. Vivian waited only while Mrs. Gunning wrote a hasty but kindly introduction to the Langleys; and, armed with this, he was glad to shake hands and depart.

As Mrs. Gunning justly divined Sir Hilton Trewavas had telegraphed to the aged and lonely lady at Trewavas, that he had traced John to the London Bridge Station, and ascertained that he had taken a ticket for Paris, whither he intended to follow him instantly. John's hasty departure from home in secret had greatly alarmed his brother.

Sir Hilton's thoughts were dark and troubled, as he went on from train to boat, and from boat to train again. The sum of money sent to him by Olive through the peddler, and restored to her by the agency of Bolster, had again reached his hands. It had been paid to his London bankers by a stranger; and there remained no chance, no clue now, by which he could hope to force it upon Olive's acceptance. In the pride and bitterness of her heart, she had stripped herself of her small fortune in order to gall him with the gift—he would not call it a payment—and now he had to endure the sharp pang of knowing her to be in the fangs of poverty, or perhaps a dependant on Charles Vigo's love-gifts. His imagination tortured him as it pictured Olive in every possible misery that want, concealment, and her own guilt could heap on her. If she would only have accepted his offer of a convent, he could, comparatively speaking, have been happy. But she had studiously avoided every kindness from him, apparently beating down, with hasty and passionate hands, all the heaped-up remembrances of old affection, all the tender links that long habit and years of association had bound about them. Well there remained nothing to him now of these—all were severed and flung to the winds; there were left him only the dregs of his youth, and the bitterness and jealous of a passion he once denied, and now condemned. Yes, there was one thing still intact, though malice and slander had done their worst to stain it; the old name of TREWAVAS was still unsullied, still high, pure and honorable in the face of the world.

Once in Paris, Sir Hilton did not anticipate any difficulty in finding his brother, or in ultimately inducing him to accept his companionship in whatever course he might choose to bend his steps. It was, therefore, with feelings of mingled alarm and annoyance that, after a week's sojurn at his hotel, he found himself baffled at every point, and still in complete ignorance of John's abode. The knowledge that he had drawn four hundred pounds in London from his bankers hands, greatly increased his anxiety, yet he was unwilling to have recourse to the assistance of the police, knowing that if John was safe and well it would greatly annoy him to find himself traced up by their agency. Hence Sir Hilton resolved to try all other means first, and the best among these was to frequent places of amusement and go into society as much as possible. There were lots of English in Paris: some of these would surely have met John. In this thought, he armed himself with Mrs. Gunning's letter and called upon the Langleys.

Mrs. Langley heard his name announced with mingled feelings of curiosity and alarm. Alarm, lest Florian should have heard that strange story of the murder of his bride, and should connect it with the Opal Vansittart, ever whom, she knew, some vague and terrible accusation hung. But Florian heard his name, and received his greeting with steady calmness. Not so Sir Hilton; he was fated to be agitated and surprised even at their first interview.

Can we live, even for a short time, with a person we like and admire, without being influenced in some subtle way to copy their tone and expression? Perhaps the copying may be unconscious yet none the less do we catch a trick of the voice, a turn of speech, a gesture of the hand, which imitates some one with whom habit or affection links us. This was the case with Florian.

She turned and greeted Sir Hilton Trewavas, in words that Olive had been wont to use. She held out her hand to him in a pretty little way, Olive's own; and even in the turn of her head there was some shadow or thought of Olive. Inexpressibly startled, Sir Hilton fixed on her a long, wistful gaze, and satisfied himself that this intangible likeness was not one of face and feature. Florian's beauty was as unlike Olive's as the beauty of the lily varies from the beauty of the rose. Still, that shadowy, dreamy likeness was here, wrapped about her like a veil—a veil through which Sir Hilton saw Olive's face—a veil which invested her, for him, with an irresistible attraction. He drew near to her, he spoke, and listened for her answer, with a new interest and a feast of life in his heart that had not visited it for many a weary month. Among the parties to which Florian had gone, had she met Mr. Trewavas? he asked.

"I have heard no such name," replied Florian, "but I will ask my brother; he goes out so much more than I do. I will go and fetch him, mother. I think I heard him come in just now."

She left the room for that purpose, and Sir Hilton felt glad that so beautiful a girl had a brother with her to be a more efficient protector than this poor feeble, blind lady, who sat helplessly on her sofa. As he thought thus, Mrs. Langley's voice roused him.

"Sir Hilton," she said, "I have a little kindness to ask of you Strange as it may seem to you, my daughter has never heard the details of your mournful story."

But here Mrs. Langley stopped, for that subtle sense, which helps the blind, showed her that her words caused Sir Hilton pain.

PROSPEROUS AND BUSY.—Our people are still busy and prosperous and, Mr. SUN, if you would pay our hamlet a visit you would come to the conclusion that we lived in a beautiful and romantic part of this fair Canada of ours.

THE OLD JUSTICE MILL.—We have an occasional grist for the justice mill, and people from a distance come to buy justice from our worthy J. P. The quality must be first class, or there would not be such general satisfaction, but all the same it seems a pity when friends and relatives fall out over a few hasty words and resort to the justice mill for satisfaction or "revenge." Such a case was the one between Faulkner and Lundy the other day, and we think the magistrate took that view of it for he inflicted the very lightest penalty—$1 and costs.

A PLEASANT "AT HOME."—On Monday evening Mr. J. Jubb gave a very successful "at home" to his many friends in the A. O. U. W. hall here, on the occasion of his birthday. The evening was somewhat chilly, but when dancing commenced no cold was felt and everyone went at it with a will. The refreshments were plentiful and of the best quality, which showed that Mr. Jo. knew where among his many fair friends to look for assistance of the right sort for such an occasion. Every one was well pleased and hopes that Jo will spend many birthdays in the Forks, but the only fear is that some of the girls, of whom Jo is an ardent admirer, will capture him and thus monopolize his "at home" in the future. May success mark Jo's future!

OFF FOR ENGLAND.—Mr and Mrs. Willis and daughters leave here Thursday evening for England. Owing to the former's declining health Dick Jones started around among the boys and succeeded in raising about $75, and our enterprising merchant, G. G Smith, got up a concert, the proceeds of which amounted to $17, and this pays the passage of the family, who take with them the sympathy and best wishes of the community. We can tell you, Mr. Editor, there is no place that can beat the Forks in standing by and lending a helping hand to those in need of help in health or poverty or in any way. We may appear a little rough to the looker-on, but our hearts are always warm and kindly. Generosity and respectability hold high places here.

ATHLONE.

A few from around here attended Orangeville fair on Friday, but more went to Alliston, which was largely attended.

ON A VISIT.—Miss Nellie Cavanagh of Tottenham was the guest of the Misses Gambles of Loretto a few days last week.

RECOVERING.—We are pleased to state that Mr. John McFarlane of Bonis, who was seriously ill, is on the mend and will soon be around again.

LAID UP.—Mr. S D. Langley, while attending a threshing on Friday, strained himself and is now laid up. Dr Armstrong of Alliston is attending him

A CLEVER GIRL.—We are pleased to hear that Miss Winnie Boylan, daughter of Mr. John Boylan, who is well known in this locality, has succeeded in obtaining a second class certificate.

A LITTLE STRANGER. A little stranger arrived at Mr. Patrick McCanne of Acaill one day last week. What is singular about this is the father is about 75 years old. Both mother and daughter are doing well

A PLEASANT TIME.—A very pleasant evening was spent at Mr Barney Hisien's of this place, last Friday. A large crowd was present and engaged in the light fantastic until late next morning. There are rumors of a dance in this locality soon.

COURT OF REVISION.—We forgot to mention last week that a court of revision was held on the 3rd at Loretto Judge McCarthy of Orangeville presided and Lawyer Hutchison of the same place represented the Conservatives and Lawyer McKay looked after the Liberals. We believe the Reformers got the worst of it.

FOOTBALL.—Our football boys journeyed up to Rosemont on Saturday and they had a good turnout too. They got Mr Kilgo's carriole and hitched two teams to it. They arrived at their destination safely, and soon were at the game. It was a good, sharp game, except for a little arguing by the Rosemont men. Mr. George Livingstone was referee again, and a fair one he is too. Our boys took one goal, but it was not allowed when it certainly should have been. A foul was made by a Rosemont man just before we scored and the referee getting slightly rattled gave Rosemont a kick off when he should have allowed a goal for Athlone. No more goals were taken after this and the game ended with the best of good feeling on both sides. After the game the boys repaired to the Globe hotel, where an excellent repast was prepared, to which they did full justice. In the game our boys had the best of it and but for the presence of Wright, formerly of the Marlboros of Toronto, and Walker, another crack player, both of Alliston, Athlone would have won with hands down. As they could not agree on a half way place to finish the game it was decided to call quits. The peculiarities of the game were the presence of five school teachers on our team, all members in good standing, and Jim Turnbull's long kicks for Rosemont.

NO CURFEW BELL!

THE COUNCIL DO NOT APPROVE THE SUGGESTION.

An Attempt to Stop the Running of Sunday Trains.

THE FIREMEN WON'T GET A REEL JUST YET.

OTHER INTERESTING ITEMS FROM THE CHAMBER OF WISDOM.

Monday night's meeting of the town council was expected to be the most memorable municipal assembly ever held in the history of the town, but so far as excitement is concerned it was not so memorable after all. Taking a different view of the situation, however, it deserves to be remembered for doing that which previous councils neglected to do—that of passing a bylaw prohibiting the running at large of cattle within the limits of the town. In the days of yore the cattle question was considered and many a municipal battle was fought on this issue. For a number of years a certain class of citizens have been agitating for the passage of such a by law, and when the matter was brought up in the council it was decided to let the people say whether they wanted such a bylaw or not. On two previous occasions the people decided in no uncertain sound that a very severe cow-bylaw was not wanted, and there was no hope of closing up the cows if it was left to the people, so the promoters of the affair have been anxious to get the council to do what the majority of the ratepayers refused to do, and at last their efforts have been crowned with success. The crowd in the council chamber was very small, and very few of the opponents of the scheme were present. Shortly after 7:30 o'clock his worship Mayor Walsh arrived and Reeve Lindsey, Deputy-reeve Endacott, Ald. Youmans, Ketchum, Green, Gillespie, Cobean, McKitrick and Fiddis were in their accustomed places. Ald. Young of the South ward was the only absentee. After the formality of reading and adopting the last meeting's minutes the mayor read a communication from Wm. Still, who complained that he was charged with being in arrears of taxes when such did not exist. The assessment committee will refund Mr. S. the money he paid the collector on the alleged arrears.

A similar complaint was made by Mr. Wm. Fogarty, and a refund was ordered.

An Owen Sound lumber firm communicated regarding a couple of carloads of lumber that was shipped here some time ago. The R. & B. will see about it.

A TROUBLESOME STREAM.

H. Haley penned an epistle to our wiseacres to the effect that the stream running through his property was becoming blocked up, and if his property was injured he would look to the town for damages. The R & B. will ponder and wonder on the case

MONA'. DISASTROUS SPELL.

Mons. J. E Henderson impounded a horse some time ago and after keeping it the required time disposed of it for $2 25. The expenses of feed, etc., footed up to $10, leaving Mr. Henderson in the soupe for $7.75. The T. P. committee has charge of the communication, but surely a vagrant hoss is not one of the town's assetts.

N. Wright complained that a stream in the North ward flooded a portion of his property and injured the crops. R & B.

CURFEW WONT RING

Ald Green brought in a report of the special committee appointed several weeks ago to express an opinion on the matter of stopping the running of Sunday trains and passing a bylaw to keep children off the streets after 9 o'clock at night. The report, which was composed of two clauses, was read, after which the council went into committee of the whole. The first clause recommended that the clerk correspond with all municipalities along the line of the T G & B and C. V R divisions of the C P R., asking them to memorialize the government to prohibit the running of all unnecessary trains on the Lord's day. The mayor gave it as his opinion that the C P R would laugh at such proceedings, and he did not think it would accomplish anything. Mr. McKitrick thought it was a step in the right direction, because this country was becoming Americanized fast enough. The clause stood. The next clause recommended that the town bell be rung at 9 every week night as a signal for children to make themselves scarce on the streets, and that the mayor issue a proclamation to that effect. Ald. McKitrick did not agree with it, and his worship did not believe it would accomplish any great moral good. After several more ventilated their opinions on the subject the clause was struck out. The committee rose and the report, as amended, was adopted.

Chairman Ketchum read a report of the R. & B committee, which stated that the sidewalk on John street was not completed, and since the last report was submitted $302 44 had been expended on the streets. Adopted.

HEATING BY STEAM

Ald. Gillespie produced the F. & W. committee's report, which said that the contract for piping the waterworks building for steam heating had been awarded to a local firm for $64; and asked $9 more for the purpose of putting another coil of pipe in the hose reel room. The committee also recommended that a new hose-reel be purchased, the price of which was not to exceed $165. This last clause met with some opposition, and Mayor Walsh's motion to give the committee power to buy a reel was defeated. The report, with the exception of the last clause, was adopted.

CHAMBER CHAT.

Ald. Gillespie drew the R. & B. committee's attention to a defective bridge on Faulkner street. It will be repaired.

The cow-bylaw report appears in another column of this issue.

The road near Springbrook is out of repair and the R. & B. was instructed to attend to it.

The reeve moved that snow-shovelling accounts be made out in duplicate and that blank forms be printed for that purpose. It will be done.

Some time ago an appropriation was made for a 2 plank sidewalk on west Broadway, but Ald. Youmans got it changed to a 1 plank walk.

HONORING THEIR PASTOR.

The Congregation of St. Mark's Pay a High Tribute to Rev. A. Henderson.

On Monday evening the basement of St. Mark's church was the scene of a pleasing event, and one that will long be remembered by those who participated therein. It was to celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of Rev. A. Henderson's incumbency of the parish of Orangeville that called together the large audience, and that it was done in a fitting manner goes without saying. After all had partaken of cake and a cup coffee, Mr. Jas. May, senior, churchwarden, was called to the chair, and read the following

ADDRESS:

To the Rev Alex. Henderson, M. A., Rector of St. Mark's Church, Orangeville:

REV. AND DEAR RECTOR,—It is with our greatest pleasure that we this evening, on behalf of the members of St. Mark's church, beg leave to tender you our sincere and most hearty congratulations on this the thirtieth anniversary of your incumbency amongst us in this parish.

Before your advent church matters were at a low ebb in this section of our fair Dominion, which fact being made known to his lordship, the late venerable and never to be forgotten good old Bishop Strachan, you were sent to minister to us in holy things. Many, who since that time have passed away from our midst, were then highly pleased with the great interest manifested by you in the discharge of your ministerial duties.

We, who have been spared through the mercy and goodness of the great Protector to listen to your ministrations, have reason to rejoice that in you we have a clergyman whose desire and aim is, and has been, to build up the church and to preach the "Truth as it is in Christ."

Your visits to those in sickness, the comfort and substantial aid rendered to the afflicted and distressed, can never be obliterated from the minds of the recipients.

Your esteemed partner, Mrs. Henderson, is also entitled to our commendation; her many acts of benevolence and her willingness to aid in anything tending to advance the interests of the church, are matters too well known to require any comment from us, suffice to say, they speak for themselves and can never be forgotten.

As we believe in facts rather than a multiplicity of words, we conclude this short address with the prayer that yourself, Mrs. Henderson and family may be long spared to enjoy the blessings of a gracious Providence, and that in the future as in the past your efforts for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom may be rewarded by the great King of Kings with the success they so richly merit.

We are, Rev. Sir, with very great esteem, your humble servants,

JAMES MAY, } Church-
ADAM TURNER. } Wardens.

The esteemed pastor of St. Mark's made a suitable reply, and during his remarks gave some amusing instances of church work in the early days. Congratulatory addresses were delivered by Revs. A. C. Watt, G. B. Morley, F. Butt, E. Irving, and Town Treasurer Irwin. Before the gathering dispersed the chairman presented the beloved pastor with a handsome china teaset, the gift of Mr. S. Donnor, who is one of the oldest members of the congregation.

MONO CENTRE.

A PLEASANT EVENT.—One of the most pleasing events which it has been our pleasure to report took place last Wednesday at the residence of Mr. Wm. Laverty, it being the marriage of that gentleman's eldest daughter, Annie, to Mr Josiah A Marshall of Camilla. Shortly before 4 o'clock, the hour appointed for the ceremony, guests from Adjala, Garafraxa, Mulmur, Amaranth, Orangeville, Mono and other points assembled to the number of one hundred and ten. A few minutes afterwards the happy couple made their appearance, the groom being supported by Mr. A. K Henry and the bride by her sister, Miss Mary Laverty, the ceremony being tied by the Rev. G B Morley of Tullamore, after which they received the hearty congratulations of all present. Next in order was dinner and having each secured a partner we repaired to the dining room, where the sight that met our eyes staggers the ability of our feeble pen to describe. Suffice it to say that it was luxuriant in the extreme. Here there were numerous toasts proposed and drank, the one to the bride and groom being responded to by the groom, who proved himself fully equal to the occasion. Sounds of music in another apartment of the house attracted our attention and being a slave to its charms we hastened thither and were delighted to find everything in readiness for an evening's enjoyment. Dancing was now the order, music being supplied by "Dean's orchestra" of Primrose and by our excellent local talent, which, by the way, is not by any means to be despised. Everything was solid enjoyment from now until 5 a. m., when the company dispersed, every person feeling that one of the pleasant occasions of their life had been spent. The bride was made the recipient of presents which were numerous, expensive and appropriate and reflected great credit on the donors. In conclusion we would ask Mr. and Mrs. Marshall to accept the best wishes of THE SUN'S correspondent for their future welfare and happiness.

GRAND VALLEY.

BREVITIES.—The Grand Valley exhibition was held here on Tuesday and Wednesday and was very successful.... A few days ago Rev. H. J. Leake was presented with an address and a purse.....Mr. W. R. Scott has sold his trotting mare, Bay Fly.

BAND MOVEMENT.—A citizens meeting was held in Swain's hotel on Monday, Oct. 5th, when the band committee placed the matter before the citizens stating the amount of money collected and price of instruments, etc. It was decided the necessary amount be borrowed by the committee and accept the instruments. The band is to be known as the Grand Valley Brass Band. All those wanting horns have forwarded their names to the organizing committee. The following are the trustees appointed: Dr. Hopkins, Wm. Loney, H. Stark, A. Richardson and R. E. Hamilton. We understand sufficient names have been secured by the committee and approved of by the trustees. The band will meet on Thursday night to organize.

If you do not receive THE SUN regularly let us know at once and we will attend to the matter.

GOOD-BYE, BOSSIE!

Youmans' Cow By-Law Carries By a Majority of 1.

Ambitious Aldermen in an Awkward Position.

SOME RATEPAYERS ARE GLAD—OTHERS ARE MAD.

IT TAKES EFFECT ON NOVEMBER SECOND.

The principal business transacted at Monday night's meeting of the town council was the passing of a bylaw to keep cattle from roaming the streets of the town and the surrounding pasture lands. Ald. Youmans introduced the bylaw two weeks ago, and everybody imagined he would have a hard row to hoe before it received the sanction of his brother councillors. But things did not turn out as anticipated, however, for Mayor Walsh was at the councillor's back and anything his worship attempts to put through the council generally comes out of the municipal mill by the right spout. The bylaw which was in force previous to Monday provided that the bovines should be closed up from November 1st until April 1st, and the remaining six months they were prohibited from running at large between the hours of 8 P.M. and 7 A.M.

BY A MAJORITY OF ONE.

When the question of considering bylaws was reached Ald. Youmans moved that the council go into committee of the whole on his bylaw to close up the cows, and, of course, the motion carried. Reeve Lindsey, who looked upon the bylaw with disfavour, was put in the chair, and thus one vote was knocked silly. It received its first reading at the previous meeting and two more readings were required to make it become law. After the first clause was read the father of the bylaw moved that the blank, in which was to be put the time when the bylaw would come into force, be filled with "November 1st." Deputy reeve Endacott said he didn't see why the bylaw should be discussed now and he thought it should be left to next year's council, and moved in amendment that the matter be left over until next April. Fiddis thought it should be left to the people, but McKitrick could not see it in that light. Green made a brief speech for the bylaw, and then Mayor Walsh arose and delivered the speech of the evening. The reeve expressed himself as being against the bylaw because he was sure the problem would work itself out in a year or two. Gillespie accused Youmans of trying to make political capital out of the movement. He thought it a little premature to pass the bylaw, although he said if left over until next year he would introduce a similar bylaw himself. "No matter which side wins," said the West warder, "we will make bad friends and our business will suffer!" Several other orators held the floor for a few minutes, and then a vote was taken and the motion lost. Some one moved that the committee rise, but this motion suffered defeat. The mayor then moved that the blank be filled with "Oct. 31," but it was also defeated. Another resolution to rise was knocked out, and Walsh moved the date be Nov. 2., and a deadlock ensued on the following division: YEA.—Walsh, McKitrick, Cobean, Green, Youmans—5. NAY.—Lindsey, Gillespie, Fiddis, Endacott, Ketchum—5. Finally Gillespie gave way and the clause carried. The blank being filled the committee rose and reported, and Youmans moved the adoption of the report and demanded the yeas and nays on the question. The vote stood:

YEAS.—McKitrick, Cobean, Green, Youmans, Gillespie—5.

NAYS—Lindsey, Endacott, Fiddis, Ketchum—4.

If Ald. Young had been present the bylaw would not have passed, as he was against it.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Travelers and Emigrants.—Those who cross the seas change the climate, but they do not change the constitution. The altered conditions of life, the exigencies of travel and other causes render the traveller and emigrant peculiarly liable to diseases and accidents when far from efficient medical aid. With these associated remedies at hand they may be said to have a physician always at their call, and they may be certain that situations will be constantly arising in which they will require a ready resource in time of need. Another fall fair was held at Grand Valley on Tuesday and Wednesday.

A number of our citizens took in the fall fair at Grand Valley yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. German have taken up their residence on Mill street.

Engineer Pickering has removed into the new fire hall and it makes a fine residence.

Mr. R King Bruce of the public school teaching staff has removed his family to town.

A most enjoyable social was held in the school-room of St. Mark's church on Tuesday evening.

Matchless silver and silver band in connection with Grey Bros. Minstrels at town on Wednesday next.

Aiken Bros are doing a rushing business in their tannery this fall, and the staff has been increased

Poles for the four extra street lights are being elevated and hitherto dark corners will soon be brilliantly lighted.

Judge McCarthy has finished the Gaughier courts of revision for Cardwell, and there has been an increase of over 200 voters.

The songs, dances, and charming music of the Guy Bros'. Minstrels sustain the interest of the audience from beginning to end.

At Monday night's meeting of the town council a by law was passed prohibiting the running at large of cows.

Have in Barney?

Fifty fowls as well as roasts ballied meats, &c. Everything of the choicest description of meats, &c., will be found at the Spinsters' T.

J. C. Fox and a party of sports are spending a couple of weeks hunting in Muskoka, and it is said they are meeting with good success.

THE SUN prints a more attractive sale bill than any other office in the county, and those who leave their orders here receive a local gratis.

Mr. Manson Hall of Mono has exchanged his farm near Shelburne for Mr. Jas. Hughson's farm adjacent to Orangeville. We wish Mr H. success.

Last Friday P. M. Pattullo fined Abner Wallace $5 and costs for decorating one of "Hattie" Sam's eyes. He paid the, paushy and went his way rejoicing.

Lovers of music and fun will receive a rare treat if they go to hear Grey Bros., town hall, Wednesday evening Oct 28, under the auspices of the I. O. Foresters.

Several days ago Councillor Joseph Turner of Amaranth received a severe kick on the leg from a horse and was compelled to remain in the house for some time.

So that all their poor relations and friends may be there with their brothers, sisters, and their cousins, and their aunts, the tickets will only be 25 cents for the coming Spinsters' Tea.

A local wag informs us that when he is elected to the town council he will introduce a by law to suppress gossiping. He should not become the above by his address to the electors if he wants to "get there."

The residence of Mr Joseph Foster of Mono, three miles from town, was destroyed by fire on Monday of last week. Most of the contents were saved and the house was fully insured. The fire is supposed to have caught from a defective chimney.

On Monday of last week Mr. Wm McLean of Caledon died from the effects of cancer of the stomach, and the remains were interred in the Forest Lawn cemetery Orangeville, on Thursday. Deceased was a half brother of Auditor McLean of this town.

The students of the Orangeville high school will celebrate convocation in the town hall to-morrow (Friday) evening. The program will consist of songs, recitations, minor theatricals, etc., and prizes will be presented to those who were successful at the recent H S games.

The struggle between W J Robson and S. M. Brown for the H S champion athlete prize is over at last, the judges having awarded it to the latter. The fight for the trophy was very sharp and neither competitor had anything to spare, and, of course, each thought he was entitled to the prize.

Mr. Thos J Huston was married on Wednesday last week to Miss Esther Ellen Huston, daughter of the late Thos. Huston. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Sanders at the residence of Mr. Jas. Huston. The happy young couple received the hearty congratulations of their many friends.

The Methodist Spinsters' Harvest Home, High Tea and Hallow'een Festival takes place Friday evening, the 13th prox. The charming president of the Spinsterhood will be there. At their lady and gentlemen friends are invited, to whom the promise is made to as fine a supper and as pleasant an evening as can be spent.

BOARD WANTED.—An elderly lady is desirous of securing a quiet, respectable boarding place. Enquire at Mrs Pugh's residence, opposite St. Mark's church.

NEW GROCERY.—Messrs. Geo Scott and Jas. Leighton have opened out a stock of fresh groceries in THE SUN block, opposite the Paisley house. The new firm will undoubtedly make a success of their venture.

A GOOD AUCTIONEER.—Mr. J. T. Hemstreet, the well known auctioneer of Shelburne, will attend sales in this part of the county when his services are required. Mr. H. is an auctioneer of twenty years' standing, and any one engaging him will be well pleased with results. See his announcement in another column.

ST. MARK'S.—Revs. P. L. Spence of Thornhill and G B Cooke of Acton will deliver missionary addresses in St Mark's church at the service on Sunday morning next. The offertory at that service will be taken up for the Episcopal Endowment Fund of the diocese of Niagara as required by a resolution passed at the last session of Synod.

AUTUMN WEDDING.—The marriage took place in the English church, West Toronto Junction, on Wednesday, Oct 7, of Mr John Millard, engineer, C. P. R. to Miss Annie, daughter of Mr Arthur Walker, formerly of this town. The fair bride has numerous friends here who will distribute with her every happiness in her new sphere. Mr and Mrs. Millard will make their future home at Smith's Falls.

Fifty fowls as well as roasts tallied meats &c. Everything of the choicest description of meats, &c., will be found at the Spinsters' T.

J. C. Fox and a party of sports are spending a couple of weeks hunting in Muskoka, and it is said they are meeting with good success.

THE SUN prints a more attractive sale bill than any other office in the county, and those who leave their orders here receive a local gratis.

Mr. Manson Hall of Mono has exchanged his farm near Shelburne for Mr Jas Hudson's farm adjacent to Orangeville. We wish Mr. H. success.

Last Friday P. M. Pattullo fined Abner Wallace $5 and costs for decorating one of "H stier" Sam's eyes. Ab. paid the penalty and kept his way rejoicing.

Lovers of music and fun will receive a rare treat if they go to hear Guy Bros. town hall, Wednesday evening Oct 28 under the auspices of the I. O. Foresters.

Several days ago Councillor Joseph Turner of Amaranth received a severe kick on the leg from a horse and was compelled to remain in the house for some time.

So that all their poor relations and friends may be there with their brothers sisters, and their cousins, and their aunts, the tickets will only be 25 cents for the coming Spinsters Tea.

A local wag informs us that when he is elected to the town council he will introduce a by law to suppress gossiping. He should not include the above this address to the electors if he wants to get there."

The residence of Mr. Joseph Foster Mono, three miles from town, was "struck" by fire on Monday of last week. Most of the contents were saved and the house was fully insured. The fire is supposed to have caught from a defective chimney.

On Monday of last week Mr. Wm Leon of Cal. died from the effects of the injuries received by the fall he received in the Forest Lawn at Orangeville on Tuesday week. He was a member of Auckland Lodge of this town.

The students of the Orangeville high school will celebrate convocation in the town hall to-morrow (Friday) evening. The program will consist of songs, recitations, tableaux, tableaux etc., and prizes will be presented to those who were successful at the recent H S games.

The struggle between W. J Kidson and S M Brown for the H S champion ship and prize is over at last, the judges having awarded it to the latter. The contest was very sharp, and the competitors had anything but a sinecure of it, of course, each thought he was entitled to the prize.

Mr Thos J Hutton was married on Wednesday last week to Miss Esther Ann Hutton, daughter of Mr Jas. Hutton. The ceremony was performed by Rev Mr Swanson at the residence of Mr Jas Hutton. The happy young couple received the hearty congratulations of their many friends.

The Misses Spinsters' Harvest Home, High Tea and Hallow e'en Festival come off on Friday evening the 23rd inst. The coming period at of the Spinsters' year will be there. All their friends and patrons friends are invited to share in the promise to make of it a supper and as pleasant an evening as can be spent.

BOARD WANTED — An elderly lady is desirous of securing a quiet respectable boarding place. Enquire at Mrs Pugh's residence, opposite St. Mark's church.

NEW GROCERY. — Messrs Geo Booth and Jas Leighton have opened out a stock of fresh groceries in THE SUN block opposite the Presby house. The new firm will undoubtedly make a success of the venture.

AUCTIONEER — Mr J T. Gibson, the well-known auctioneer of Mono, will attend sales in this county when his services are desired. Mr. H is an auctioneer of years' standing, and any one calling him will be well pleased with his services. See his announcement in another column.

ST. MARK'S — Revs. P. L. Spencer of Thornhill and G B Cooke of Acton will deliver missionary addresses in St. Mark's church at the service on Sunday morning next. The offertory at this service will be taken up for the Episcopal Endt Fund of the diocese of Niagara as required by a resolution passed at the last session of Synod.

AUTUMN WEDDING — The marriage took place in the English church, West Toronto Junction, on Wednesday, Oct. 7, of Mr John Millard, engineer, C. P. R. to Miss Annie, daughter of Mr. Arthur Walker, formerly of this town. The fair bride has numerous friends in town who will doubtless wish her every happiness in her new sphere. Mr. and Mrs. Millard will make their future home at Smith's Falls.

BIG SALE. — Auctioneer Jas. Brodie of Erin will wield the hammer at a gigantic sale to be held on the farm of Mr Jos. Maxwell, Hillsville Green, on Tuesday next, Oct 27. All Mr. Maxwell's farm stock, implements, etc., will be sold without reserve, and if you are looking for bargains you should not fail to attend. Liberal terms of payment are offered, and proceedings will commence at 12 o'clock, sharp.

HELLO! SHELBURNE. — Orangeville and Shelburne can now communicate with each other by telephone, the new line having been completed at the latter place on Monday. Tuesday morning the editor of this paper "rang up" Bro. Mortimer of the Free Press and had a few minutes of pleasant conversation with the guiding-ster of our northern contemporary. The copper wire is a great improvement, and gives better satisfaction than those previously used.

WALLACE—HEARN. — On Wednesday Oct. 7, the marriage of Mr. Joseph Wallace fireman, C. P. R., Orangeville, to Miss Annie Hearn of Toronto, was celebrated at the residence of the bride's sister, Taylor street, Toronto, Rev. J. C. Madill, formerly of Shelburne, officiating. The young couple received the hearty congratulations of many friends and acquaintances on the consummation of this auspicious event. We welcome Mr and Mrs. Wallace as residents to our town.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING. — Harvest thanksgiving services were held in St. Mark's church on Sunday last, Rev. E. A. Irving of Dundas delivering the morning sermon and Rev. G. B. Morley of Tullamore conducting the evening service. The church, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion, was crowded to the doors at both services, and the preachers paid numerous compliments to Rev. A. Henderson, who has been incumbent of the parish of Orangeville for the past thirty years.

A BAD BREAK. — One day last week young Jack McGuire, the 13 year old son of Mr. John McGuire of Mill street, and several companions were amusing themselves by jumping over the tie post in front of the postoffice, when young Jack had the misfortune to fall on one of his arms, breaking it in several places. The young lad was conveyed home and before the disabled member could be set he had to be put under the influence of chloroform. The breaks are of the worst kind and the young fellow will be laid up for some weeks.

ADVERTISE EXTENSIVELY — When a man puts his advertisement in any paper he owes a duty to the advertisement to do his part towards securing the benefit to be derived from it. Unless an advertisement be looked after or suitably changed, it soon takes an old appearance, which repels rather than attracts. If a man buys a painting he does not put it in some dark, neglected corner, and then complain that the picture is no good. He gives it every advantage of light and position. Then what right has he to complain against the returns from a long neglected advertisement?

SAVE TROUBLE AND EXPENSE! — The request to our delinquent subscribers to pay up their back subscriptions has been complied with by many, but a certain number have not paid the least attention to our appeal. The time we gave subscribers in arrears to pay up expired on Tuesday last, but we have decided to extend the time until the 12th of November. Our only object in doing so is to give delinquent subscribers another chance to pay up before court costs doubles the amount of their indebtedness, and we would advise them to remit before that date, for we intend to hand all unpaid accounts into court for collection.

JOHN KIRKLAND'S FARM. — The farm owned by John Kirkland in East Garafraxa was disposed of by auction at Marsville on Tuesday last. Mr. John Maxey of the same township being the purchaser. The property went down at a value, bringing only $3,600. It will be remembered that Kirkland was robbed at the Duff'n assizes last spring for burning the barn on this farm for the purpose of getting the insurance, and Judge Street sentenced him to five years in the Provincial penitentiary at Kingston. The insurance company then entered an action for the recovery of their money, and the farm was sold to satisfy their claim.

HE GOES DOWN — Joe Newell, the Toronto pickpocket who was arrested on the exhibition grounds two weeks ago was taken to the central prison on Tuesday morning by Provincial Bailiff English. Newell, it will be remembered, was caught in the act of picking a lady's pocket the second day of Duff'n's great fair, and was tried and sentenced to a year's imprisonment in the central Joe was one of the jollest guests Gov. Sutherland's ever had at the "castle," and when time began to hang Mr Newell would strike up a song to relieve the monotony. He possessed a splendid voice and was a singer of no mean ability. His favorite song was "Marguerite."

A NARROW ESCAPE — One day last week Geo. Thompson of Caledon, owner of the farm on which the Orangeville syndicate is sinking an artesian well, met with an accident that might have resulted far more serious than it did. While the steam boring-machine was at work the drill became stuck and Thompson, who was standing by, pulled a pin which held the crank of the derrick in position. The roller of the derrick commenced to revolve rapidly, and before Thompson could get out of the way the iron crank hit him a terrible blow in the face, making an ugly gash. A doctor was summoned and dressed his wounds, but it will be some days before he will be able to partake of a hearty meal. It is very fortunate the man was not struck ten inches lower in the face, for if he was he would have been instantly killed.

MAKING MONEY BACKWARDS. — Mons John Edmund Henderson, K O P, (keeper of the Orangeville pound) has been very unfortunate in his commercial speculations lately, and if events don't soon change the pound business will go into liquidation. Several weeks ago a poor old played out horse was found wandering about the streets and some individual who was anxious to make a shekel forwith ran the equine hero into limbo. After keeping the horse in pound the lawful length of time and duly advertising it, a grand auction sale took place the other day and the animal was knocked down to the highest bidder, who purchased it for the munificent sum of $2 25! Mons while the ancient nag cleared hay and drank water, and M. Henderson's bill of expenses amounted to $10, just leaving him, to quote his own words, "in the hole for $7.75." The pound-keeper has asked the town council to make up the balance, but whether they will or not remains to be seen.

A TERROR TO PEDDLERS. — County Constable Hubbard has been causing unlicensed peddlers a great deal of trouble lately, and he has fully earned the title of "Terror." At brief intervals the county cop has one or two of the unlicensed gentry up before P. M. Pattullo, who generally fines them so much and costs. So profitable has this branch of county work become that it is said more money is realized in this way than by licenses issued to peddlers, and the opportunitive rovers never take a warning from the lessons taught to their mercantile brothers. On Monday morning Cop Hubbard gathered in a man named George S. Hull, who has been peddling tea throughout Dufferin without dropping the nickle into the county slot. The arrest took place in town, and the offender was hustled up to P. M Pattullo's famous justice shop where his trial promptly began. The case was not finished, however, as all the witnesses were not present and an adjournment until next Monday after noon was made. The prisoner was released on bail.

A FRAUD — Last Thursday a man and a little boy arrived in town from Scales village, and the former passed himself off as being afflicted with blindness. After soliciting and receiving numerous dimes from many of our charitably disposed citizens the "blind" man called at several of the Broadway hotels and "blew in" his surplus cash. Orangeville "bug juice" is known far and wide for its magic powers, but in this particular case it acted in a double-barrelled capacity, both making the visitor drunk and restoring his sight at the same time! When this wonderful change took place the solicitor of dimes had no further use for the boy and he promptly deserted him. The little fellow had no money and did not know a soul in town, but Chief Shields took him to the mayor, who furnished the lad with a ticket and he left for home on the evening train. The ex-blind man put in the remainder of the day slugging whiskey and he got on the outside of a great quantity of it. The imposter was proficient in the art of cursing and more than once when reasoned with by citizens he turned his foul tongue on them and they fled in terror from the spot. Such a character as this fellow should get 6 months twice a year breaking stone for Warden Massie at Toronto.

MORE INCENDIARISM. — This town is still cursed with the presence of that miserable being (or beings) the firebug, and at comparatively brief intervals he plays his favorite role for a pastime or revenge, as the case may be. At 1:30 yesterday morning two citizens were proceeding home from their place of business, where they had been detained rather late, when they discovered flames issuing from a shed in the rear of the Globe hotel on east Broadway, and they at once gave the alarm. Fortunately the fire was discovered in its incipient stage, and a few pailfulls of water was sufficient to extinguish it. The fire must have been lighted only a few minutes before it was seen, for the place was well saturated with coal oil and the blaze had not got very well started. The hose reel was on the spot five minutes after the alarm was given, but the services of the firemen were not required. Incendiary fires occur altogether too frequently in this town and at least some attempt should be made to ferret out the smoking coward who is making this otherwise respectable town an notorious throughout the Dominion. Orangeville has as many, if not more, respectable peoples within its borders than any other hamlet of a similar size, but, unfortunately, a place is judged by the misdeeds of some of its citizens.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Burt M. P. P. for Dufferin was in town on Tuesday

Mr L. H. Clark of Toronto spent a few hours in town on Tuesday.

Miss Eva Lacy of this town has accepted a position as teacher in one of the Toronto schools.

Mr. John Ingram of Toronto, former resident of this town, is spending a few weeks with Orangeville friends

Mr. F. W Wilson, who has been studying law at Mayor Walsh's office for the past four years, left for Toronto on Saturday to enter the office of Holman & Holman. His many friends here wish him the greatest success in the Queen city.

CAMILLA.

(Crowded out last week)

FIRE BARN. — Robt. Montgomery has finished repairing his barn and it is now as handsome a structure as there is on the Prince Wales.

COMMUNION SUNDAY. — Last Sunday was communion Sabbath at the Presbyterian church. A large number partook of the sacrament of the Lord's supper.

PERSONAL. — Mr. Willie Campbell is visiting friends in this vicinity. Come and see us all, Willie.

GLENOE GETS THERE. — Glenoe carried off $50 at Orangeville and Shelburne show fairs, while Camilla did not show anything. Could we not have shown citrons or something else?

SLICK E. J. — Mr. E. J. Coleman, as usual carried off the first prize for penmanship at the Orangeville fair. May angels always guide your pen, Eddy.

GETTING BETTER. — Mrs. Jacob Doherty is slowly recovering. She has been ill since February and at one time her life was despaired of, but we hope to see her out soon.

WHEN? — When in the debating society going to start? Dave Allan says he does not know what it is like — say we give him a taste? Bob Brotherson's essay is already on the program and Hugh Kyles and Billy Buchanan say they will volunteer to tell a thrilling story about an adventure in "Darkest Africa," and the way they tamed a very savage beast. Frank Beech and Willie Allingham say they will vouchsafe for the truth of it.

HA! HA! HA! — We laugh ha! ha! at the futile attempt of several eavesdroppers who pretend to know who corresponds to THE SUN, and we hear that there is a four footed animal on the trail — not a blood hound either — so look out, SUN correspondent. We cannot now give credence to the old saying: "It takes one thief to catch another."

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 116 West 126th street, New York, certifies as follows:

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve as soon, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of." — L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

After Many Days.

Bloomfield, Man., Feb. 14, 1890.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont

DEAR SIR, — For 12 years my wife was a martyr to that dreaded disease, Dyspepsia. Nothing relieved her; physicians were consulted and medical skill tried, without avail. One doctor advised a change of climate, suggesting Manitoba as a desirable place. We acted upon this advice, coming here two years ago. The change of climate wrought a change indeed, but for the worse, as she was soon confined to bed, and under the care of two doctors, who asserted she could not live but a month longer. A neighbor came to see her one day who had been reading your Almanac. She told her of the testimonials she read in it, of the great amount of good they were doing, and advised her to try a box of Dr Morse's Indian Root Pills. She did so, was relieved, kept improving, and is now able to do housework, and continues the use of Morse's Pills

Yours gratefully,

GEORGE DUNN.

Eleven year old George Cornish, who lives near Orchardville, fell off a load of hay the other day and the prongs of a fork pierced his heart. He died a few minutes after the accident occurred

Watches, in gold and silver, all styles at, close prices, at Fox's.

A CORRUPT SYSTEM.

A corrupt system, whether political or pertaining to the human body, cannot do other wise than work untold injury. Strengthen and purify the entire system by means of Burdock Blood Bitters, and such troubles as biliousness, dyspepsia, constipation, scrofula, bad blood cannot exist.

Mr Davin has received a telegram from Regina announcing that threshing in that neighborhood gave phenomenal results. Forty eight and fifty bushels of wheat to the acre was common, and one case of fifty eight bushels was given. At Colbourne one farmer got a hundred bushels of oats to the acre

The great Dr. Boerhaave left three directions for preserving the health — Keep the feet warm, the head cool, and the bowels open. Had he practised in our day, he might have added: and purify the blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla; for he certainly would consider it the best.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT.

DEAR SIRS — This is to certify that my husband had asthma for about 8 years, combined with a bad cough, and that his lungs also were badly affected, so that he could not rest or work. I then got Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which has greatly relieved him. After taking six or bottles it has entirely cured his cough, and done a great deal of good to his lungs — Mrs. Moses Codou, Apsley, Ont.

SHELBURNE.

(Free Press and Economist.)

A THIEF CAUGHT.—Last Saturday afternoon Chief Brindage received a telegram from Alliston to look out for a young fellow named George Moore, who had stolen a watch and $13 while in that town. Ten minutes after the message arrived the thief was captured. He was taken to Alliston for trial.

DUFFERIN CENTRAL.—The Dufferin Central exhibition took place on Tuesday and Wednesday, and the receipts are away behind. The entries were hardly as numerous as last year, but the fair would have been a success had it not rained the second day. It is indeed too bad that this exhibition should receive a set back when it was making such progress.

ARM BROKEN.—On Friday last Morrison Jelly, aged 13 or 14, son of Mr. Simon Jelly, was gathering beechnuts when he ventured too far out on a limb and fell to the ground, breaking one of his arms above the elbow. Dr. Norton adjusted the fracture and the lad is doing as well as can be expected.

QUITE A FALL.—Snare drummer Jimmy Tuck, of the Citizens' band, gave a performance at the exhibition ball yesterday that was not down on the programme. He was in the gallery and wishing to see or call to some person below he caught hold of a brace in the railing and leaned forward, but the brace pulled out and he fell to the floor below. In his descent he struck some one one on the ground floor, and this broke his fall a little. He was taken home in the 'bus, considerably shaken up by his adventure, but is now going around again apparently none the worse.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

The name of Gribbin post office has been changed to Wildfield.

Mr. Thos. Henderson proprietor of the Globe hotel, Rosemont, died on Wednesday.

A Stratford man is reported to have "done" the London West poker players on Sunday to the extent of $300.

It is announced that McGill University is the recipient of another handsome gift. Mr. Peter Redpath has announced that it is his intention to erect a library building capable of holding 200,000 books and to cost $100,000. The site for the building has been granted by Mr. Molson.

The dispute over the assets of the Central Bank has been settled. The liquidators have withdrawn their opposition to the tender of Mr. Geo. A Hogaboom and awarded him the $750 000 worth of bad debts for $44,500. This will enable the liquidators to almost immediately declare another dividend of 6 per cent, making the total amount which the liquidation has now paid on the dollar 99½ cents.

James N Miller, foreman in the Victoria Wheel Works at Galt, was engaged working at a revolving shaft when the machinery was in motion. His coat got caught and his body was instantly jerked around the shaft, striking with great force against the joists overhead. Fortunately after one revolution the coat tore, which freed him, and he fell to the floor. Several ribs were broken and his body otherwise badly bruised.

A few weeks ago a tourist among the mountains along the Canadian Pacific Railroad met young Pelly, who figured in the famous Birchall murder case in Canada. After the Birchall trial he went to England, but soon returned and has been engaged in an executive capacity during the building of the railroad between Calgary and Edmonton. When the tourists met him in the Selkirk Mountains he was on his way to Vancouver for a vacation.

The Duke of Cambridge is one of the best known old boys in London, and there is hardly a soldier, policeman or hackman in town who is not acquainted with the rosy gilled and white haired two bottle man, who has never been over popular with the officers of the army because he would persist in being a fussy friend of the soldiers.

According to tradition, the year 5642 of the creation of the world commenced Friday evening at sunset. It is observed by all Jews throughout the world as the new year, or commencement of the civil year. It is the seventh month of the religious year and is called Tishri. Before the Babylonian captivity it was known by the name of Etanim. It is the period of autumn in the Holy Land. It is observed by both orthodox and reform congregations by services in their synagogues and temples.

The barley growers of Prince Edward county, that banner barley district, are sending shipments to England this year. Schooners formerly headed across the lake to United States ports, now they go down the St. Lawrence for Montreal. The Conservative policy has been to grow a variety of barley that would provide our farmers with an alternative market in Britain. The Opposition policy would be to knock helplessly at Uncle Sam's door asking for the abolition of the McKinley tariff or we perish.

The judgement of $7,000 awarded the State of New York against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad for the use of stoves in passenger coaches should result in the abolition of the deadly car stove. It is a warning to the New Haven officials as well that it will cost them more money to violate the New York law in respect to car heating than to equip their cars with modern and safe heating apparatus. When the deadly car stove becomes costly it will surely go.

"Like Magic,"

THE effect produced by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Colds, Coughs, Croup, and Sore Throat are, in most cases, immediately relieved by the use of this wonderful remedy. It strengthens the vocal organs, allays irritation, and prevents the inroads of Consumption; in every stage of that dread disease, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral relieves coughing and induces refreshing rest.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children have been subject."—Capt. U. Corbey, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"From an experience of over thirty years in the sale of proprietary medicines, I feel justified in recommending Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One of the best recommendations of the Pectoral is the enduring quality of its popularity, it being more salable now than it was twenty-five years ago, when its great success was considered marvelous."—E. S. Drake, M. D., Beloit, Kans.

"My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine; saying that he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with the most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This has given me unbounded faith in the preparation, and I recommend it confidently to my customers."—C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind.

The Parnellite leaders are taking the advice of French lawyers in relation to the Paris funds. They understand that as the money was lodged to the joint call of Messrs. Parnell and McCarthy without mention of a trust Parnell's wife and his eldest brother succeed to his rights. If the reading of the law is correct, Parnell's wife obtains control of $10,000, which she will hand over to the Parnellite leaders.

Mr. C. H Mackintosh, M P., being asked whether he contemplated resigning to accept a Government position as head of the Printing Bureau:—"Certainly not; there is no truth whatever in the statement. I have never sought and never will seek an office, and would not accept this one if offered to me, even though the salary were doubled. If I retire from Parliament it will be from the very best motive, that of a sense of duty to others."

The wives, mothers and guardians of drunkards are making life a burden for the liquor dealers of Lynn, Mass. Since March no less than 1,100 persons have been complained of by their friends for being common drunkards, and the liquor dealer have been notified not to sell to these persons. Within a week it is said that 275 more names will be added to the black list. One liquor dealer has already been fined $700 for the benefit of a wife who had notified him not to sell drink to her husband, and the result enforces great caution.

A committee of Canadian experts, after considering the merits of the fog horn as against whistles, and guns as against bombs, has reported that under the most favorable conditions all fog signals are untrustworthy. Sometimes a weak signal has been heard further than a strong one. Swallow water, by causing unequal heating of the atmosphere, lessens the value of signals. The whistle is superior to the horn and either is better than the gun or the bomb. For convenience of storage and readiness of handling bombs are preferred to guns, and they are to be used in all the minor lighthouses of Canada. The committee warns shipmasters against depending on fog signals, they being only guides to locality, and not to distance.

A sensational paragraph of a scandalous character has been going the rounds of the news papers to the effect that in a rural village in the central part of this county the wife of an elder, who is also a J P., suspecting an undue intimacy between her husband and a neighboring widow, followed him to the widow's domicile, and as a result of what she heard or saw, ceased attending church, and is seriously considering the advisability of instituting divorce proceedings. There is not the slightest particle of truth in this. The woman in question never fail owed her husband to the widow's dwelling. Every one in the community knows that she has not ceased to attend church, but, on the contrary she has all along been one of the most regular attendants there. And, as regards divorce proceedings, there is no ground at all for the heartlessly cruel statement.

The Restof Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting Stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of even one week they will yield from 14 to 24 per cent less milk, and that of a inferior quality. Such milk will on an average, turn sour in twenty four hours less than milk drawn from the same or similar cows receiving salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analysed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock fine and coarse, at

Newspaper Decisions

1. Any person or persons who take a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intended fraud.

Poetry.

ACROSS THE SEAS.

Her foot falls faintly on the sand,
Nor guessing heart would fain divine
What paces in that far off land
Beyond the dim horizon's line.

A white wing flutters on the wind,
Her heart away with the soft south breeze,
Ah! would she were a bird and knew
To beat her way across the seas

And to the vanished images she lifts,
From alien shores, her dreamy eyes,
She follows where a white cloud drifts
Its northward way athwart the skies.

And will it meet the upward gaze
Of him whose thought is all for her?
And will he see it, in amaze,
And wonder why his soul should stir?

Or will his heart at once divine
That she has watched it far away—
That in it fragrant memories twine
Of love of him of yesterday?

Alas! alas! her sweet eyes are wet
With foolish tears—the cloud above
Drifts by—eternal bonds are set
To human thoughts and human love.

And yet—who knows—it still may be
The moment hath its perfect part
In life speeds across the sea
To spend its sunshine in his heart

The Story Teller.

OLIVE VARCOE

—OR—

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER XVII.

"I am sorry to allude to circumstances which must be so grevious to you," she continued, after a moment's pause; "I merely wished to say that Florian never reads newspapers. Hence, beyond a shadowy idea of this terrible event that has so tried you, Florian knows little; and I am very anxious, for urgent reasons of my own, to save her the pains of those details. Will you, then, oblige me by never mentioning to her the name of that—that unhappy girl, against whom circumstances——"

"Say no more, I entreat you,' interrupted Sir Hilton. "I am the last person likely to name the unfortunate Olive Varcoe."

"Forgive me, Sir Hilton, for having mentioned this terrible subject to you," she said. "If you knew my motive, you would pity me for the pain I feel in having broached it. I heartily sympathize with you and with all your family. Truly, you cherished a viper on your hearth."

Sir Hilton was spared the pang of replying by the entrance of a young man whom Mrs. Langley introduced as her son; but while the usual interchange of civilities took place, Sir Hilton was listening to a voice without the door.

"Thanks. How kind of you to ask me! I shall be delighted to come this evening."

"I ought to know that voice," said Sir Hilton, smiling. "And yet it cannot be Damerel."

"Mr. Vivian Damerel! said Herbert Langley, a little confused. "Yes, it is he."

Sir Hilton guessed in a moment that Damerel was avoiding him and he turned proudly to another subject.

"My brother," he said, 'is come to Paris, but has failed to give me his address. I dare say he thought it a matter of no consequence; but as it happens, I wish much to see him. Have you met him anywhere?"

"Not that I am aware of," replied Herbert Langley. "Have you searched the registers of the hotels?"

'Long ago, and without results," replied Sir Hilton. "I can only suppose he has gone into apartments."

During this short dialogue the leave taking between Florian and Damerel had been distinctly audible, and Sir Hilton felt a curious satisfaction that Florian's tone was cold, and her words short. As she re-entered there was a slight flush on her cheek, and she turned eagerly towards her brother.

"I hope you have been able to give news of Mr. Trewavas," she said.

"No news," he replied. "And I think Sir Hilton had better insert an advertisement in Galignani's paper; his brother will be sure to see that, and respond to it."

"I will think of it," said Sir Hilton; "but I suppose the quickest way of all would be to go to the police."

"Yes, it might be," said Herbert; "but I would not try it, if I were you, until other modes fail. It will cost you a great deal; and you have no reason, I presume, to think there is anything wrong?"

Sir Hilton hesitated a moment before he answered.

"Silence is always rather alarming," he said. "My brother may be ill, or he may be in bad hands; he had a large sum of money with him."

"Oh, do not take so gloomy a view of Mr. Trewavas's silence cried Florian cheerfully. "He is enjoying himself in Paris, depend on it; and perhaps by this time he has written to Lady Trewavas."

Sir Hilton thanked her for the kind suggestion, and rose to leave.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"It is the oddest thing," said Vivian Damerel to himself, "and this is not the first time either that it has happened. Shall I tell Sir Hilton of it, or not?"

The scene of this soliloquy was a place of public amusement in Paris, where the company was the reverse of silent, the fun fast and furious, the noise hideous, and the whole scene half mad, half grotesque, and terrible. To this place Lieutenant Chadwick, in his laudable wish to see life, had come, and brought with him, nothing loath, his friend Vivian.

"What is the matter, old fellow?" said Chadwick, "you don't enjoy yourself. Has anybody wrapped a wet blanket round your brains?"

"No," replied Damerel; "and yet I have been taking a mental shower-bath for the last ten minutes. You saw those mad dancers rush down that alley just now? Well, among them, maddest of all, was John Trewavas."

"Is there anything very surprising in that," asked Chadwick. "Why should a't he see life, and enjoy himself as well as another?"

"John Trewavas see such life as this!" said Damerel. "You don't know the man. I should be less surprised to see an archbishop here taking his pleasure, than to see him.

"These quiet ones always take people in," answered Chadwick. "When they do break out, they go it, and no mistake. Now for a waltz".

"Here, Chadwick, stop!" said his friend. "You forget that Sir Hilton Trewavas is searching for his brother everywhere; and although I am not on very good terms with him, I think I ought to tell him this."

"Of course you ought," cried Chadwick. "And yet I don't know; if John Trewavas wants to escape from apron-strings and have his swing, why should we set his elder brother on him to lead him home again like a snubbed boy?"

"There is something deeper behind Sir Hilton's anxiety than the mere wish to save his brother from a little dissipation," replied Vivian. "I had better be frank with him at once. I need not speak to him myself; I can ask young Langley to tell him."

"Oh, I'll tell him that we saw Saint John here if you like," laughed Chadwick. "I see nothing so alarming in it myself."

"You don't know the quiet character of the man," returned Damerel. "And, to confess the truth, Chadwick, this is not the first time I have seen him at some of the mad orgies of Paris. Each time, too, he was the maddest of the mad; and each time he either avoided me, or passed me by—as he did just now—as if I was an utter stranger."

"He did that!" exclaimed Chadwick "Then, my dear fellow, you have let your brains in your hat-box again It is not John Trewavas at all: it is a mere chance likeness. Now, I remember, you are always seeing people, whom you take for somebody else. It was some such thing as this that happened when you were going to Killarney, and you left your head in the railway train. Oh, it is a clear! I shall have to hire a keeper for you soon."

Unmoved by his friend's chaff, Damerel continued to watch the noisy group, who were having a vociferous and mad dance to themselves among the trees

"Let us go down and look at them," said he; "and I'll show you John Trewavas."

"Very likely a whale," returned Chadwick, in high glee, "only their figure heads are not the same. I won der if they sell strait waistcoats at the bar."

Truly his chaff seemed quite justifiable, for on reaching the party Damerel had designated, there was no person to be seen among them at all resembling John Trewavas.

"Are there two kings in the field?" cried Chadwick, thumping him on the back. "Behold the stately Sir Hilton, walking by himself, melancholy and grim as a court martial."

Vivian Damerel's face flushed slightly as he remembered their last meeting; nevertheless, he did not hesitate. He hastened after Sir Hilton's retreating figure, and accosted him hurriedly.

"Pardon me, Sir Hilton" he began, "you are looking for your brother? I saw him here a few minutes ago."

It was a pale and changed face that Sir Hilton showed to Vivian Damerel, as he turned and thanked him and in his manner there was a suppressed excitement and deep sorrow that moved the young man visibly.

"Can I be of any assistance to you Sir Hilton?" he continued, in a less formal voice.

"Thanks; every friend can help me if he will," replied Sir Hilton, sadly. "It seems my brother eludes all acquaintance; if only the time you saw him, you but miss him."

"Miss him!" echoed Damerel, in amazement.

"Yes," said Sir Hilton; "for I have reason to fear that my brother is scarcely in a fit state to be at large."

"Then I do not wonder at your anxiety," said Damerel, in a tone both of surprise and sorrow.

"Do not mistake me," resumed Sir Hilton. "I only mean that poor John is in a badly nervous state. His mind was not strong enough to bear the shock of that horrible event, that has so sorely tried us all. His mental health has gradually sunk since then, till he has become morbid and melancholy."

"Melancholy!" broke in Chadwick. "Why he was dancing like a mad dervish just now: so Damerel says."

This led to an account of where, and with whom John Trewavas had been seen; and the three young men, first together, then singly, traversed the garden again and again in search of him but vainly. John Trewavas was not seen again.

"He is gone" said Sir Hilton, flinging himself wearily into a seat. "I heard yesterday of his having been seen here a few nights ago; hence I came hither myself to night. I heard; too, that he was at one of the masked balls at the opera."

"Well," said Chadwick, in a patronizing and pitying way, "you had better make yourself easy about him. I'll look out for you. I am very earnestly endeavoring to fulfil my duty in seeing Paris to the utmost, making a laudable use of my leave, you see; and so I shall be sure to come across him either at the Mabille, or some of those late supper places, and then I'll just tuck him neatly under my arm, and bring him safe home. Have done it often, I assure you, for other fellows—saved 'em many a time from no end of rows."

Nevertheless, in all his future and laudable endeavors to fulfil his duty, though they led him to every quarter of Paris where noise, and revelry, and misery mingled in wildest motley, Lieutenant Chadwick never again met John Trewavas. His brother and Vivian Damerel were equally unsuccessful in their search. It would seem that John had glided away from these scenes of Parisian life with the same silence and secrecy with which he had entered them; and Sir Hilton, vaguely conscious of some great sorrow, pursued his shadow as one would a phantom, pondering, the while, on all the instances in history or in memory, of men in John's quiet, undemonstrative, subdued nature, who had, after a great grief or sudden shock, broken out into wildest dissipation or gloomy insanity.

Vivian Damerel was in love, and to a man of his temperament to be in love was to be jealous. He was jealous even of his friend, Lieutenant Chadwick; but, above all, he was jealous of Sir Hilton Trewavas And before this feeling, the slight return of kindness, which had touched him on the night when John's haggard face, flushed and wild, flashed by him, faded away, and gave place to a feeling of disgust and resentment.

One day he entered Mrs. Langley's drawing-room, to find it empty; and while he waited, hoping Florian would return shortly, he turned over a portfolio of drawings, lying on the table. Listlessly he glanced at sketches of Irish scenery, sketches taken in the park and grounds at Langley, hasty profiles of her brothers, her mother and herself; and among these there passed through his hand a small packet folded in silver paper. For a moment he hesitated whether he should open this; but it was not sealed, and there appeared, therefore, no reason for reticence He unfolded it, and his heart bounded with a quiver of pain and anger as his eyes fell on a portrait of Sir Hilton Trewavas."

With his head leaning on his hand, he was still gazing at it moodily, when Florian entered. She saw it instantly and her face flushed crimson to the brow; then her eyes fell on the folded packet, and, she laid her hand on it hurriedly.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Damerel." said she, "but I do not generally allow my portfolio to be inspected; my poor drawings are not worth looking at."

"This one, at all events, is wonderfully well done," replied Damerel, in a husky voice; "the likeness, too, is perfect."

Again Florian blushed vividly, and taking the drawing from his hand, she put it hastily with the others, and closed the portfolio.

"I do not agree with you," she said, with returning self possession; "I think the face is far too gloomy for Sir Hilton's."

"Rather say it is not gloomy enough Miss Langley," he replied. "His history has a greater shadow on it than the one you have placed in the picture."

As Vivian said this, Florian smiled, and her expression cleared, as though she was relieved of some fear that had beset her.

"I know that some strange tragedy occurred in his family last year," she replied; "and perhaps it was right to place the whole mansion and the figure in gloom; but I think this has greatly detracted from the likeness."

Her manner bewildered Vivian; he had expected some denial that the drawing was her property, instead of which, she not only acknowledged it, but coolly discussed with him its merits as a portrait.

"Miss Langley," he said, abruptly, "my first interview with you was a painful one; I fear you have disliked me ever since."

"I assure you I have not," returned Florian, frankly. "Pray dismiss that idea from your mind, Mr. Damerel."

For one moment his heart beat with a faint hope, then it chilled again, as he looked on her calm face; so unconscious and untroubled in its placid beauty.

"And if," said he, "I were to tell you that I am still certain of the identity of Opal Vansittart with a person, whose guilt——"

"Stop!" cried Florian, hurriedly. "I have promised my mother not to converse with any one on that subject."

Her face was not untroubled now; it was very pale, and her lip trembled.

"I was only about to ask," continued Vivian, gloomily, "whether my conversation respecting that unhappy person would prejudice you against me?"

"I can be sorry for your convictions, without hating you for them," replied Florian, smiling.

"But," resumed Vivian, who seemed bent on tormenting himself, "suppose I were still seeking Miss Vansittart—still resolved to find her?"

"Are you?" exclaimed Florian, eagerly "How I wish you may succeed! If you find her, come and tell me instantly, will you?"

Damerel gazed at her in amazement, at a loss for a moment how to reply.

"It will be melancholy news, I fear, when I tell you," he said.

"On the contrary," said Florian, "it will be joyful news—delightful news! Oh, Mr. Damerel, do you know I have been searching for poor Opal these many weeks past in great anxiety? I fear she is in distress and sorrow, and no one knows where she is, not even her dearest friends."

"I am not surprised at that," observed Vivian, gravely. "I am only surprised that she has friends who look for her, except, indeed, one infatuated madman."

Florian's eyes filled suddenly with tears as she looked at him reproachfully, and Vivian, stung to jealousy too quickly felt an instant conviction that her sorrow was more for Sir Hilton than for Olive.

"I am not sorry that Miss Vansittart cannot be found," he continued; but I am really grieved that Mr. Trewavas still continues to render his family so anxious concerning him."

A color, vivid as a flame, passed over Florian's cheek as he uttered the word Trewavas. There seemed, indeed, cause for jealousy now, for she was visibly embarrassed and silent.

"I am sorry indeed for Sir Hilton Trewavas," she said at last, timidly.

"Sorry for him!" exclaimed Damerel. "I am far more sorry for his brother; he has been the true sufferer in the family tragedy."

Florian's blush had died away, and she was now so pale that Vivian's heart beat with jealous indignation as he glanced at her. He resolved to speak to her, to warn and save her if he could from the fatal span of Sir Hilton's love. He strove to steady his voice as he spoke, but it shook in spite of his efforts to be calm.

"Miss Langley," said he, "forgive me, if I dare speak to you frankly on a matter which I have never yet ventured to mention. I cannot but perceive your agitation I cannot but perceive, also, that it arises at the mention of one name. Be warned in time. Do not permit yourself to be cheated out of one thought by a man almost a stranger to you, whose entire heart is given to another—a man, too, whose name is so fatally injured by its connection with a dire tragedy that he is now totally unworthy of you."

"Unworthy!" exclaimed Florian, who had heard him in great agitation. "He is worthy of the best and highest. You know not what you say, Mr Damerel. Wait till you know the truth. The woman whom he loves is happy indeed."

She stopped, and over her neck and brow there flashed a crimson blush, almost painful in its intensity. Vivian Damerel, as he saw it, felt all hope die within him.

"I see, I have done wrong to speak," he said, sadly.

"Worse than wrong," said Florian, with indignation. "You insult me. What right have you to suppose that I have ever given a thought to a man who has never uttered one word of love to me, and whose affection, as you say, is pledged to another?"

Tears started to Florian's eyes again, and her head drooped upon her hands as she spoke.

Her words lifted a cloud of suspicion from Vivian's mind. Sir Hilton, then, had not dared aspire to win this fresh, happy heart, but had he won it unwittingly? Why else those tears and blushes? Self-tormenting, he tried one other probe.

"Oh, Miss Langley, forgive me if I seem to take an unjustifiable liberty in thus speaking to you," he cried. "If my friendship for you and yours were not pure and disinterested if I had not your welfare and happiness at heart—I would not take on myself so painful a task, I would not burden myself with this cry of warning. Now I speak it again, in the most earnest accents tongue can find. Silence can sometimes tell a love better than speech; but do not be deceived by looks or manner. I know this man's heart is given to a woman he has loved for years—an outcast, certainly—a woman with a brand on her; but still he loves her passionately, ruefully, even despairingly. And if he seeks you, it is only for your wealth and position. These are cruel words to say, but they are true. And who but a staunch friend would have courage to utter them?"

With a pale face and parted lips, but without the slightest interruption, even by a gesture of her hand, Florian listened to him. Her own agitation was so great, that it overmastered his, and caused him so far to make his speech coherent, and unbroken by the stops and gaps of passion.

"What do you know of me, Mr. Damerel, or of my acquaintance with this person, to make you speak like this?" asked Florian, in a faint voice.

"Only what I have seen," he replied; "—the goodness, kindness, tenderness in you, which I would not have abused by a heartless man."

"You wrong this gentleman," said Florian, proudly. "I have seen nothing in him but nobleness and honor; and if I choose to give him even unasked my esteem, my friendship," she added raising her head, and looking Damerel, in the face, "I honor myself by doing so; and there is no man on earth who has a right to cavil at my actions or my feelings."

'She loves him," thought Damerel, to himself, and his heart swelled with bitterness and anguish.

"Right, Miss Langley!" said he. "Alas! I have no right, beyond the natural wish of a man, to protect the weak against the strong."

"I need no protection, sir," replied Florian; "my mother and my brother are with me. And now may I ask a question in my turn? Why have you made yourself a spy on my actions, and watched my acquaintances with this gentleman?"

"Because I know his history," said Damerel; "because I know the admiration of a Trewavas is fatal to a woman."

"Trewavas! Are you talking of Sir Hilton Trewavas?" exclaimed Florian, looking at him with such unfeigned amazement, that Damerel could only answer her back with the same expression. And now his heart sunk indeed—there was some unknown rival, then, in the field, and his cause was lost hopelessly.

It was not Sir Hilton now he hated, and would make her hate; it was this unseen shadow that had glided between him and her. Embarrassed by jealousy, uncertainty, and grief, Vivian Damerel knew not what to answer.

"I am sorry," he began, then hesitated, and stopped; "yes, sorry that I have spoken ill of him. I think him proud and wordly; but since, since—"

"Since he is not making love to me?" interposed Florian, archly.

"Yes, just that," said Damerel. 'Since that is not the case, I should be grieved to deprive him of your friendship."

"Do not grieve yourself, Mr Damerel," resumed Florian; "you will not deprive him of it. I take a greater interest in him than you can imagine."

Florian spoke seriously—sorrowfully, with a tremor in her voice, and a return of embarrassment in her manner that puzzled Damerel again.

"He is happy in gaining a thought of yours," he said, gloomily. "But what friend of mine is it, of whom you supposed me to be warning you when——?"

Again the fitful color arose to Florian's brow, as she interrupted, hurriedly.

"Here comes Sir Hilton with my brother!" she exclaimed. "Now, Mr. Damerel, shall I tell him all the hard things you have been saying?"

"No, indeed," replied Damerel. "Promise me you will forget them, Miss Langley. Give me your hand on it."

Florian extended her hand, which Damerel seized eagerly—the fire of jealousy mingling with the coldness of quenched hopeless despair—but scarcely had he touched the warm white fingers ere he dropped them; for the door opened, and Sir Trewavas—his face pale and weary—entered, followed by Herbert Langley and Lieutenant Chadwick, eager for chaff.

After Many Days.

Bloomfield, Man., Feb. 14, 1890.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—For 12 years my wife was a martyr to that dreaded disease, Dyspepsia. Nothing relieved her; physicians were consulted and medical skill tried, without avail. One doctor advised a change of climate, suggesting Manitoba as a desirable place. We acted upon this advice, coming here two years ago. The change of climate wrought a change indeed, but for the worse, as she was soon confined to bed, and under the care of two doctors, who asserted she could not live but a month longer. A neighbor came to see her one day who had been reading your Almanac. She told her of the testimonials she read in it, of the great amount of good the were doing, and advised her to try a box of Dr Morse's Indian Root Pills. She did so, was relieved, kept improving, and is now able to do housework, and continues the use of Morse's Pills

Yours gratefully,
GEORGE DUFF.

A few years ago the death of General Boulanger would have created intense excitement not in France only, but throughout Europe. The very moderate commotion which the suicide created in political and financial circles may be accepted as an indication of the figure to which the enthusiasm for his cause had fallen on the political thermometer. Practically it stood very near zero.

CERTIFICATE OF MERIT.

DEAR SIRS,—This is to certify that my husband had asthma for about 8 years, combined with a bad cough, and that his lungs also were badly affected, so that he could not rest or work. I then got Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which has greatly relieved him. After taking six or bottles it has entirely cured his cough, and does a great deal of good to his lungs.—MRS. ## EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE Reformers of East Wellington have chosen Mr. John Craig, editor of the Fergus News Record, as their candidate to fill the vacancy in the Local Legislature caused by the resignation of Col. Clarke. The chances of a Conservative representing that constituency are very slim indeed, but a Patron of Industry may measure swords with the genial John.

REVEREND Barrister Walsh, says the Mt. Forest Representative, this week finishes his work of holding courts for the revision of Dominion voters lists for this riding. On Tuesday court was held for East Luther at Damascus, yesterday for East Luther at Grand Valley and to day for Amaranth which completes the work. We believe it is not denied that the revision has resulted in a considerable gain for the Conservatives.

THE Minister of Agriculture has received a cable message from the High Commissioner stating that at a meeting in Liverpool on Wednesday of the Corn Trade Association it was decided here after red wheat grown in Canada east of the Rocky mountains of a quality not lower than No. 2 Standard red winter or No. 2 spring, shall be quoted for delivery at the same figure as similar wheat from the United States. Sir Charles Tupper has thus again proven the value of his services to the Dominion by having the unjust discrimination against Canadian wheat removed.

WHO IS IT?—There is considerable curiosity about who your correspondent is here, but as he only writes occasionally there is not much harm done, and if we did know we would not tell.

RECOVERING.—Mr. John Bielby's little boy is recovering from an ulcerated jaw, and Mr. Ronald McDonald's little boy is recovering from a severe attack of bronchitis and inflammation of the lungs.

THE REASON.—We heard our magistrate say he would not have been so prompt in getting up the stove and pipes in the A.O.U.W. hall for Mrs. Ansley's party, only he had a grist for his mill that afternoon and did not want to freeze his fair clients. Oh! Mr. Justice.

A JUDICIAL GRIST.—The little trouble among some of our "good" people from Brim-tone, when on their way home from church last Sunday evening, was ground out at our Justice mill on Thursday and yielded "trash." What do people go to church for anyway? They should behave like Christians.

JUST AT HAND.—There are signs of coming winter here now, frosty mornings, falling leaves, warm underclothing, and some of our boys flocking together getting ready for their annual flight to the woods for the winter. We notice Dan McFarlane, George Norris, Jim Dodds, Wm. Desmorel, Ed. Claridge and many others are for off on Monday. We wish them success, and hope they may come back in the spring with their pockets well lined with the needful.

CLOSING DOWN.—The quarrymen are preparing for winter and as the brown rock cannot be taken out during frosty weather it must be left alone. We are all anxiously looking forward to see what the enterprise of our leading men here, Messrs. Carroll & Vick will do to enable us to earn money enough to keep the wolf from the door. We feel encouraged to expect quite a lot of work in the way of stripping rock, cutting wood, clearing land, etc., for we know they have the money to do all these things with, and think it will be to their interest to do so as well as a great benefit to us who live here, and are depending upon our labor for our living. Men who have the energy and capital to tackle a job like the new parliament buildings in Toronto are not likely to shrink from a little job like ours.

A PLEASANT PARTY.—Mrs. Ansley's party came off Thursday evening and was one of the most enjoyable affairs we have been at for a long time, and this is saying a good deal—which we were at Jo Jubb's party the other evening and another one five or six years ago. At all events there were over 60 people there, every one went in for fun and had plenty of it. Music by James and Tom Rafferty was of the very best and though we may be getting up in years we could not resist shaking our No. 11's just once, at the risk of pains in our knees next day. At 12 o'clock the guests were seated around the hall and a plentiful supply of sandwiches, pies and cakes, tea and coffee were passed around, and some choice grapes by way of dessert. After lunch a few good songs were sung, when dancing was resumed and kept up until three in the morning. After a vote of thanks to the host and hostess and singing God Save the Queen, the guests went home well pleased with their evening's entertainment.

HOCKLEY.

A BIG SHOOT.—The grandest shooting match of the season will take place at D. R. Galbraith's hotel, Hockley, on Friday, the 30th, when a large number of turkeys and geese will be shot for. This contest will be one of the most interesting kind and a large crowd will be present. Dan is the boy to make sport for the masses and we hope they will take advantage of it.

SLESWICK.

(Brampton Times.)

Fall wheat in this locality looks remarkably strong and healthy.

Mr. Jas. Reaburn, of this place, has for some days been suffering from an affection of the throat, but we are informed he is recovering.

Reports say that Mr. John Reaburn and R. Robson of Caledon start this week for Uncle Sam's land to serve on a large cattle ranch owned by Mr. John Rutledge a former resident of Caledon.

Potato digging has been in full blast here for some time. The rot is much less serious than was some time ago expected, an average of five bushels to the vere will cover the top in the crop in this section.

SOME STRAIGHT HITS!

Rev. D. C. Hossack Stands in the Pulpit and Strikes from the Shoulder.

HE SLEDGE-HAMMERS THE GAMBLERS AND HANDLES THE TOWN COUNCIL WITHOUT GLOVES.

THE FIRST OF A SERIES OF INTERESTING SERMONS.

Ministers as a rule are dependent upon their congregations for their support; it is by little contributions from many donors that their stipend is made up. In consequence of this they cannot speak out their minds with freedom from the pulpit, and the majority of them cringe to the whims of their congregation. A minister whose congregation is supported by hotel-men or brewers is, as a rule, opposed to any measures of temperance, and will be found upon the platform or in the pulpit advocating the use of alcoholic drink as a beverage, in all the vices and sins of the people to whom he preaches, he must, to a certain extent acquiesce, and seldom can one be found who is able or who dare speak his mind plainly upon any subject whatever. Mr. Hossack is not a man of this kind, but on the contrary he cares more for the sufferings of the poor than he does for the favor of the rich.

On Sunday evening at St. Andrew's church, Rev. Mr. Hossack preached a praiseworthy and remarkable sermon dealing with

of vital interest to the ratepayers of the town and to the morals of the community. The rev gentleman took as his text verse 7, chapter 5, of St Mark's Gospel:—"And cried with a loud voice, and said, What have I to do with Thee, Jesus, thou Son of the Most High God? I adjure Thee that thou torment me not."

Taking this as his starting point the rev. gentleman proceeded to castigate various evils which have sprung up in our midst. Said he:—"When I came to this town some three years ago, I was told by a man of respectability, that if I wished to succeed here I would find it necessary to study to a certain rich man. There is nothing in this world so entirely calculated to take away a man's respect for himself as toadying. The spirit of toadism in this part of the country has been reduced to a science. Men will stoop and cringe upon those who happen to have a few shillings more than they have. They are willing to

of the earth for some small favor which they imagine the rich man will give them, when, however, they come to ask for a favor they find that a cold refusal is the only response, and their sole satisfaction is the recollection of their own meanness. I have never cringed nor toadied to any man and I never will.

Now, if I wanted a situation in this town what would I do? I would rent a house from one of the trustees and go around and see the other trustees, and if possible work into their favor, then if the chairman of the board happened to have a daughter to the daughter. If I were that kind of a man; but I'm not that kind of a man, and never will be. What do I think of the fitness of the position? No; the thought of fitness would never enter my mind if only I could get there by fawning and favoritism. There is one thing that has struck me of late in this town as being extremely glaring. Only last week we have it announced in public print that gambling takes place frequently at one of the leading hotels in town. Now, if this is so where are our License Commissioners? We have a law on our statute book which says if gambling takes place in any hotel the license of that hotel should be cancelled. If I were a chairman of this board of license commissioners I would have a detective up from Toronto to investigate this matter at once—but they do nothing. Why do not the people of this district rise en masse and turn them out?

Another thing which has struck me as being altogether too

christian country was the disturbance at the town hall on Friday evening last. I was not there myself, but I am informed that there was a disturbance and a great deal of hissing on the part of some dissatisfied high school boys with the decision given by the judges of the sports. I was up at the grounds the day of the sports myself, and I saw a great deal of dishonesty, strife, hatred and spite on the grounds that day. These sports are a good thing, but they should be conducted in a proper manner, and judges who are impartial should always be appointed at such sports.

These boys, with their minds unsullied by contact with the world, know as well as any one what is right and what is wrong, and the judges have sown in their young hearts the seeds of discord and rebellion by their judgment. This is a small thing you will say, but is it right that men should set an example to youth which will be the first step towards the cultivation of a

MEAN, CHURLISH DISPOSITION?

These judges, by accepting the position, intimated they were capable judges, and should have decided the matter at the time, and should not have waited for grandfathers, uncles and other relatives of one of the competitors to influence them during the interval. If I were one of the judges I would hang my head in shame. More than one person went away from the grounds that day feeling that he would not go back to the games in future if they were conducted in that manner.

Another thing that amazes me in this town is your town council. I was down the other evening when a bill was under consideration, and the manner in which the discussion was carried on was something most unmanly and cowardly. One member would get up and say that he was willing to support the bill, but he thought it might do his business harm. Another would say he was ready to support the bill, and intended to bring it in himself next year as it was a good bill, but he thought it was premature and would not vote for it this time.

If I were the citizens of the town, and any men who had stated they would not vote for any measure in which they believed because it would interfere with their business, I would tell them to take their sugar, their tea, and their knapsacks, and the Credit. On further consideration, I would not say the Credit, because it is so shallow they would crawl out.

At a previous meeting of the council Rev. Mr. Henderson, myself and other ministers signed a petition praying the council to pass a by-law to keep boys of a certain age from running on the streets after 9 o'clock at night. They spoke of ringing a bell. We did not want them to ring a bell; all we wanted them to do was to pass a by law empowering the chief of police to take certain boys home if found on the streets, but we have the mayor get up in the face of the petition of four clergymen and say that the council would not undertake to rule the morals of the boys of the town. And why should not the boys be kept in after 9 o'clock? It is by running the streets in the clouds of the night, by smoking cigarette charged with nicotine, short, bunty clay pipes and stumps of cigars gathered off barroom floors. With these, boys first imbibe

A TASTE FOR VICE.

Wait till the mayor's son grows up, for I am informed he has a son, and perhaps he will regret the day that he opposed the petition of the clergymen of this town. And this very same council have passed a by-law allowing a billiard-room to be opened upon Broadway in your town to be a wide gate of destruction to the youth of this town. They are willing to have a billiard saloon opened where the youth of the town may learn to smoke and chew and drink, for I am informed that the proprietor of the saloon is also the proprietor of one of the hotels, and he will not be slow to lead them from the fascinations of the billiard-table to the gaming of the drinking bowl. What kind of council is this to have in a town? There is no one talking about boodling at Ottawa, or any where else while we have these degrades dwells right in our midst. What can I do, or what can any other minister of the Methodist church or the Roman Catholic priest do to lead boys in the way of virtue and goodness while we have a council which does everything in its power to thwart our efforts?

WHAT DO YOU THINK I MEAN

about a court of revision that was lately held in a village near this town? A court of revision, as you all know, revises the voters' list and is for striking on or striking off names from the voters' roll. Why, one of your prominent citizens—a professional man high up in his profession; and he certainly is high up—was helping to put on votes, and you know that any one under twenty-one years of age has no vote. Well, this man instructed two youths under twenty-one to go there and say they were twenty-one, and if they went there to say so, he knew they would have to swear it. If I were county crown attorney and there was the least bit more evidence in this case I would see that that man had a warrant in his possession before twenty-four hours and was safely lodged behind the bars in due course.

Right had never yet rule the world over. A man might tell the preacher to mind his own business, but when that man's conduct endangered the morality of the community he became a fitting mark for the shafts of the preacher. I would not go down on my knees to ask any man what I ought to preach—I would preach what I believe to be right. The example of our Lord, as indicated by the text, in interfering with strange, even in a foreign country, was sufficient justification for my preaching against the evils of this community."

Here the rev gentleman ended one of the most remarkable and brilliant discourses ever preached to an Orangeville congregation. Everybody was astonished with the boldness of the preacher, but we do not see why, if clergymen pretend to preach religion and morality, they cannot apply the principles to actual facts. Mankind is slow to see a point, especially if it is made by a minister, and unless it is brought home to them in the sledge-hammer style of Mr. Hossack its goodness is liable to be spent in space. We understand this is the first of a series of sermons to be delivered in St. Andrew's, and we believe another interesting sermon will be preached next Sunday evening.

PERSONAL.

Miss Anna Miller of Detroit is the guest of Orangeville friends.

Mr. Walter D. Henry left on Monday for Trinity college, Toronto.

Mrs Jas. Brown of Orangeville spent a few days with her friends in Bolton.—Enterprise.

Dr. Dunning, son of Mr. George Dunning of Orangeville, has hung out his shingle at Alnlone.

Mr. Jacob Vanwyck, who has been laid up with typhoid fever for some time past, is slowly recovering.

Mrs W. R Kent of Orangeville and infant son, have been most of the week in town as guest of Mrs. Dr. Mullin.—Brampton Times.

Dr. T. H Henry of this town was one of the star players with the Varsity lacrosse club against the Torontos in the great match last Saturday.

Mrs. Tilt of Chicago, Mrs Tyson of Wiarton and Mrs. Witter of Shelburne have been called to Orangeville owing to the serious illness of their mother, Mrs. Kelly.

Mr. Fred S. Mercer, son of Mr. T. L. Mercer of this town, was among the successful candidates at the recent matriculation examinations at Trinity college, Toronto.

Mrs. Kelly of Church street, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Orangeville, has been seriously ill lately, but we are glad to hear her condition is much improved.

ATHLONE.

HURRAH FOR THE DANCE!—Every body around here are going to the dance at Locktown next Friday night.

VISITING.—Mr. Michael Doyle and mother of Allaston were visiting at Mr Robert McKanna's of Loretto on Sunday.

TEACHERS ENGAGED.—Miss Casey, teacher at Achill, has been re engaged at an increased salary. We understand Mr Thos Ryan has been hired as teacher at St. James separate school.

RAFFLES.—A large number of raffles will soon be on the boards in this locality. A raffle was held at Mr. Wm Skelly's of Keenansville last Wednesday night. They say some big hauls were made.

AFTER TURKEYS.—A raffle was held at Mr John Carty's, of raffle fame, last Friday night. A large crowd was present, each one doing his best to get the coveted turkeys. We did not hear of any large hauls, but we understand nearly everyone got a share. Supper was held at midnight, to which all did fair justice.

A PLEASANT PARTY.—A very pleasant affair took place at Gamble's Hotel, Loretto, on Friday night, the 16th inst., when Miss Aggie Gamble gave a party to which everybody was asked. An agreeable time was spent by all until early the next morning when they departed for home well pleased with the night's fun.

JOINED THE GANG.—Our football lads joined the Northern Association with Barrie and Alliston as opponents. The first game was played here with Alliston Mr. Heath, teacher, of Alliston was referee, and we think he tried to do his best, but still he did not give satisfaction. Athlone being allowed only one goal out of several that was called. The visitors had on quite a combination, which slightly overbalanced our boys and they did not do as well as usual. The game ended 2 goals to 1 in favor of Alliston. Alliston must have been slightly afraid of our lads, when they got Rosemont and Colling wood cracks to do up the little Athlone fellows. The boys go to Barrie in two weeks and we hope they will have better success there.

GRAND VALLEY.

FROM AFAR.—Mr. Thos. N. Henry, of Chattanooga, Tennessee, was visiting his brothers in law, Messrs George and Isaac Hilborn, from Saturday to Monday and gave us a pleasant call when on his way through the village, starting for his home on Monday.

IT PAYS.—Mr. John A. Campbell, lot 19, con. 1, East Luther, a few days ago sold to Mr. A Shortreed six steers for $245 and a small steer and heifer for $65 50; also three weeks previous to this sale he sold the same buyer three steers for $117. Who says there is no money in stock raising in connection with farming?

TEACHERS CONVENTION.—The West Dufferin Teachers' Convention will be held at Grand Valley on Friday, Oct. 30. We expect to see all the schools in the district represented by their teachers being present. The meeting of the teachers at these conventions is very profitable to one another in exposing their modes of teaching, to the best interest of their pupils.

MID GROANS & HISSES

THE H. S. STUDENTS HOLD CONVOCATION.

An Uncomingly Demonstrative in the Town Hall.

ALL OVER AWARDING THE '91 CHAMPIONSHIP.

WILL THEY WIND UP THEIR ANNUAL SPORTS?

Last Friday evening the pupils of the Orangeville high school held convocation in the town hall, and a right jolly time they had. By 8:15 o'clock every available seat was occupied, and many had to content themselves with standing in the aisles. The stage was tastily decorated with flowers, bunting, etc., for the event, and except for some disorder when the championship prize was presented everything passed off in a most pleasant manner. Rev. M. L. Pearson, the genial pastor of the First avenue Methodist church, occupied the chair and it is unnecessary to say that the rev. gentleman discharged the duties devolving upon him in a most satisfactory manner. More than once during the evening the chairman drew forth rounds of laughter from the audience by his indomitable humor and pleasing jokes. After the chairman delivered a brief address, the town orchestra, which occupied the north side of the stage, struck up that pleasing overture, "Crown of Gold," after which the H. S. glee club sang a suitable chorus.

THEY GOT DIPLOMAS.

Then the chairman presented the different graduates with diplomas, making a few encouraging remarks to them as they stepped up to receive the parchment. As each graduate came to the front to be presented with a diploma a terrific cheer burst from the crowd and was kept up for several minutes. Other successful students were presented with primary certificates and diplomas in drawing.

Mr. Alex. Steel, principal of the school, made a few remarks regarding the progress of that institution, which has a larger attendance this term than ever before, and which, indeed, is in an extremely healthy condition.

Mrs. W. F. Seymour, with orchestra accompaniment, sang "Little Robin, Tell Kitty I'm Coming" in a manner that won loud applause and a repetition was demanded. "Realistic Reading," a dialogue, was acted by several girls and boys of the school, and they all acquitted themselves creditably. Mr. W. F. Seymour captured the audience with his clarinet solo, "Coming Thro' the Rye." After another song by Mrs. Seymour and some orchestra music the awarding of prizes, won at the sports several weeks ago, took place. Mrs J. McLaren making the presentations.

GROANS AND HISSES.

Everything went along smilingly until Principal Steele announced that the '91 championship had been awarded to Stanley M Brown, and at this decision the crowd let itself loose and the groaning, hissing and cat-calling was something unprecedented. When the tumult somewhat subsided Mr. Steele explained that the contest between S. M Brown and W. J. Killeen for the championship was very close, and as the judges had awarded it to the former he thought it would be better to let by-gones be bygones and abide by the judges' decision. But the crowd didn't seem to think so and the disorder was renewed. This event has came a great deal of ill feeling throughout the town, and a great many are of the opinion that it will put a stop to the H. S. annual games altogether. The cause of all this trouble has been referred to in previous issues of THE SUN, but we sincerely trust all animosity will disappear with the decision of the judges, and things resume their normal shape again. The only thing can be done now, if this year's judges did not understand their business, is to avoid such an occurrence in the future.

The programme was brought to a close by the orchestra playing an appropriate selection.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Weakening weather—The sultry summer days strain the nerves of the feeble and decrepit, and disease may eventuate unless some restorative, such as these Pills, be found to correct the disordering tendency. Holloway's medicine gives potency to the nervous system, which is the source of all vital movements, and presides over every action which maintains the the growth and well-being of the body. No one can ever estimate the necessity of keeping the nerves well strung, or the use with with which these Pills accomplish this end. They are the most unfailing antidotes to indigestion, irregular circulation, palpitation, sick headache and costiveness, and have therefore attained the largest sale and highest reputation.

Robert Bennett of Georgetown, hotelkeeper, will apply to Parliament next session for divorce from his wife, Matilda Bennett, on the ground of adultery and desertion.

Would you like to exchange your sallow checks for those glowing with healthy roses? Then try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They rebuild the system end and make life as bright as childhood's dream.

Bismarck's announced intention to re-enter the political arena is received with alarm by the Government.

Rev. D. C. Hossack, the fearless and outspoken pastor of St. Andrew's church, will discourse on local evils next Sunday evening.

In the Methodist church on Sunday evening Rev. M. L. Pearson preached a very touching sermon on the death of Mrs. P. Kelly of the Royal hotel.

Another large cargo of fresh groceries just arrived at G. Booth's new grocery in THE SUN block. Everything new, fresh and of the best quality.

Mrs H. Reid has purchased the residence of Mr. J. R. Dodds on Zina street. The price paid, we understand, was in the neighborhood of $2700.

Broadway stores closed at 8 o'clock last evening in order to let clerks attend Guy Bros.' minstrels. They close at 6 o'clock every night except Wednesday and Saturday.

Mr. Walter S. Morphy of Brampton, barrister, was married to Miss Helen Isabel, youngest daughter of the Rev Canon Johnston of Windsor, on Tuesday, Oct. 13.

So that all their poor relations and friends may be there with their brothers, sisters, and their cousins, and their aunts, the tickets will only be 25 cents for the coming Spinsters' Tea.

Mr. Jas. Irwin, the genial manipulator of glasses at the Dufferin house, was married on Wednesday evening of last week to Miss Maggie McRae. Rev. D. C. Hossack of St. Andrew's church performed the ceremony.

Thanksgiving day and Orangeville's monthly fair fell on the same day. The November fair is considered the best one of the year and it is likely the following day will be observed in Orangeville instead of Thursday, the 12th.

Mr. J. H. Hughes of Orangeville with a staff of hands, commenced the brick-work on the new English church here last Wednesday evening, and, weather permitting will have the walls up by Saturday next. Mr. Hughes is a competent and energetic workman.—Hillsburg Banner.

BOARD WANTED.—An elderly lady is desirous of securing a quiet, respectable boarding place. Enquire at Mrs. Peak's residence, opposite St. Mark's church.

SOLD OUT.—Messrs. H. N. Young & Bros. have disposed of their hardware business to Mr. R. H. Hemstreet of Sault ste Marie. The senior partner of the firm, we believe, intends removing to the Sault.

BURT—HUMPHREY.—Last week at Scarboro Mr. W. A. J. Burt, son of Rev. F. Burt of Cardwell, was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Miss Lizzie Humphrey of Scarboro. THE SUN extends its congratulations.

YOU ARE INVITED.—The Methodist Spinsters' Harvest Home, High Tea and Hallow e'en Festival takes place Friday evening, the 30th. The charming president of the Spinsterhood will be there. All their lady and gentlemen friends are invited, to whom the promise is made of as fine a supper and as pleasant an evening as can be spent.

HAPPILY WED.—Mr. W. H Stewart of Corbetton, was married to Miss Mary A. Stewart of St. Vincent township on Monday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Henderson, rector of St. Mark's, at the parsonage. After the marriage the party repaired to the Paisley house where supper was partaken of, and the couple left on the evening train for their home at Corbetton.

ELECTED.—At the regular meeting of Court Gardiner, No. [illegible] C. O. F., held on Monday evening last, the following officers were elected: T. W. Chapman, C. R.; R. McGuire, P. C. R.; Wm. Collister, V. C. R.; T. J. Bennett, F. S.; A. H. Turnbull, T.; R. Wilson C.; W. T. Hicks, S. W.; A. Carter, J. W.; D. Nicholson, S. B.; R. Robinson, J. B.; Dr. Fraser, S.

A GOOD MOVE.—The board of trade of this town has demonstrated its usefulness by taking hold of the weekly market question and doing all in its power to make the market a greater success than it was last year. At a meeting of the council of the board, held a few days ago, it was decided to offer prizes with a view to encourage farmers to bring their produce to Orangeville instead of taking it to our surrounding hamlets, and it now rests with the farmers to make the market a great success. Dodgers containing a list of prizes have been scattered broadcast, and our country friends who have anything to dispose of should procure one and peruse the list of very liberal prizes. You can get as good, if not better, prices in Orangeville for your produce than in any other place, and why not come here? Six prizes will be awarded every week for poultry, beginning, commencing on Thursday, Nov. 12, and continuing until Jan'y 14, 1892.

the revision of Dominion voters lists for this riding. We believe it is not denied that the revision has resulted in a considerable gain for the Conservatives.

THE Minister of Agriculture has received a cable message from the High Commissioner stating that at a meeting in Liverpool on Wednesday of the Corn Trade Association it was decided hereafter red wheat grown in Canada east of the Rocky mountains of a quality not lower than No. 2 Standard red winter or No. 2 spring, shall be quoted for delivery at the same figure as similar wheat from the United States. Sir Charles Tupper has thus again proven the value of his services to the Dominion by having the unjust discrimination against Canadian wheat removed.

CREDIT FORKS.

WHO IS IT?—There is considerable curiosity about who your correspondent is here, but as he only writes occasionally there is not much harm done, and if we did know we would not tell.

RECOVERING.—Mr. John Bielby's little boy is recovering from an ulcerated jaw, and Mr. Ronald McDonald's little boy is recovering from a severe attack of bronchitis and inflammation of the lungs.

THE REASON.—We heard our magistrate say he would not have been so prompt in getting up the stove and pipes in the A.O.U.W. hall for Mrs. Ansley's party, only he had a grist for his mill that afternoon and did not want to freeze his fair clients. Oh! Mr. Justice.

A JUDICIAL GRIST.—The little trouble among some of our "good" people from Brimstone, when on their way home from church last Sunday evening, was ground out at our justice mill on Thursday and yielded "trash." What do people go to church for anyway? They should behave like Christians.

JUST AT HAND.—There are signs of coming winter here now, frosty mornings, falling leaves, warm underclothing, and some of our boys flocking together getting ready for their annual flight to the woods for the winter. We notice Dan McFarlane, George Norris, Jim Dodds, Wm. Desmorel, Ed. Claridge and many others are far off on Monday. We wish them success, and hope they may come back in the spring with their pockets well lined with the needful.

CLOSING DOWN.—The quarrymen are preparing for winter and as the brown rock cannot be taken out during frosty weather it must be put along. We are all anxiously looking forward to see what the enterprise of our leading men here, Messrs. Carroll & Vick will do to enable us to earn money enough to keep the wolf from the door. We feel encouraged to expect quite a lot of work in the way of stripping rock, cutting wood, clearing land, etc., for we know they have the money to do all these things with, and think it will be to their interest to do so as well as a great benefit to us who live here, and are depending upon our labor for our living. Men who have the energy and capital to tackle a job like the new parliament buildings in Toronto are not likely to shrink from a little job like ours.

A PLEASANT PARTY.—Mrs. Ansley's party came off Thursday evening and was one of the most enjoyable affairs we have been at for a long time, and this is saying a good deal—when we were at Jo Jubb's party the other evening and at another one five or six years ago. At all events there were over 60 people there, every one went in for fun and had plenty of it. Music by James and Tom Rafferty was of the very best and though we may be getting up in years we could not resist shaking our No. 11's just once, at the risk of pains in our knees next day. At 12 o'clock the guests were seated around the hall and a plentiful supply of sandwiches, pies and cakes, tea and coffee were passed around, and some choice grapes by way of dessert. After lunch a few good songs were sung, when dancing was resumed and kept up until three in the morning. After a vote of thanks to the host and hostess and singing God Save the Queen, the guests went home well pleased with their evening's entertainment.

HOCKLEY.

A BIG SHOOT.—The grandest shooting match of the season will take place at D. R. Galbraith's hotel, Hockley, on Friday, the 30th, when a large number of turkeys and geese will be shot for. This contest will be one of the most interesting kind and a large crowd will be present. Dan is the boy to make sport for the masses and we hope they will take advantage of it.

SLESWICK.

(Brampton Times.)

Fall wheat in this locality looks remarkably strong and healthy.

Mr. Jas. Reaburn, of this place, has for some days been suffering from an affection of the throat, but we are informed he is recovering.

Reports say that Mr. John Reaburn and R. Robson of Caledon start this week for Uncle Sam's land to serve on a large cattle ranch owned by Mr. John Rutledge a former resident of Caledon.

Potato digging has been in full blast here for some time. The rot is much less serious than was some time ago expected, an average of five bushels to the sore will serve the hog to the prop to this section.

of their congregation. A minister whose congregation is supported by hotel-men or brewers is, as a rule, opposed to any measures of temperance, and will be found upon the platform or in the pulpit advocating the use of alcoholic drink as a beverage, in all the vices and sins of the people to whom he preaches, he must, to a certain extent acquiesce, and seldom can one be found who is able or who dare speak his mind plainly upon any subject whatever. Mr. Hossack is not a man of this kind, but on the contrary he cares more for the suffrings of the poor than he does for the favor of the rich.

On Sunday evening at St. Andrew's church, Rev. Mr. Hossack preached a praiseworthy and remarkable sermon dealing with

of vital interest to the ratepayers of the town and to the morals of the community. The rev gentleman took as his text verse 7, chapter 5, of St Mark's Gospel:—"And cried with a loud voice, and said, What have I to do with Thee, Jesus, thou Son of the Most High God? I adjure Thee that thou torment me not."

Taking this as his starting point the rev. gentleman proceeded to castigate various evils which have sprung up in our midst. Said he:—"When I came to this town some three years ago, I was told by a man of respectability, that if I wished to succeed here I would find it necessary to toady to a certain rich man. There is nothing in this world so entirely calculated to take away a man's respect for himself as toadying. The spirit of toadism in this part of the country has been reduced to a set sea. Men will stoop and cringe upon those who happen to have a few shillings more than they have. They are willing to

of the earth for some small favor which they imagine the rich man will give them, when, however, they come to ask for a favor they find that a cold refusal is the only response, and their sole satisfaction is the recollection of their own meanness. I have never cringed nor toadied to any man and I never will.

Now, if I wanted a situation in this town what would I do? I would rent a house from one of the trustees and go around and see the other trustees, and if possible work into their favor, then if the chairman of the board happened to have a daughter to the daughter—if I were that kind of a man; but I'm not a kind of a man, and never will be. Would I think of the fitness of the position? No; the thought of fitness would never enter my mind if only I could get there by fawning and favoritism. There is one thing that has struck me of late in this town as being extremely glaring. Only last week we have it announced in public print that gambling takes place frequently at one of the leading hotels in town. Now, if this is so where are our License Commissioners? We have a law on our statute book which says if gambling takes place in any hotel the license of that hotel should be cancelled. If I were a chairman of this board of license commissioners I would have a detective up from Toronto to investigate this matter at once—but they do nothing. Why do not the people of this district rise en masse and turn them out?

Another thing which has struck me as being altogether too

christian country was the disturbance at the town hall on Friday evening last. I was not there myself, but I am informed that there was a disturbance and a great deal of hooting on the part of some dissatisfied high school boys with the decision given by the judges of the sports. I was up at the grounds the day of the sports myself, and I saw a great deal of dishonesty, strife, hatred and spite on the grounds that day. These sports are a good thing, but they should be conducted in a proper manner, and judges who are impartial should always be appointed at such sports.

These boys, with their minds unsullied by contact with the world, know as well as any one what is right and what is wrong, and the judges have sown in their young hearts the seeds of discord and rebellion by their judgment. This is a small thing you will say, but is it right that men should set an example to youth which will be the first step towards the cultivation of a

HEAD, CHURLISH DISPOSITION?

These judges, by accepting the position, intimated they were capable judges, and should have decided the matter at the time, and should not have waited for grandfathers, uncles and other relatives of one of the competitors to influence them during the interval. If I were one of the judges I would hang my head in shame. More than one person went away from the grounds that day feeling that he would not go back to the games in future if they were conducted in that manner.

Another thing that amazes me in this town is your town council. I was down the other evening when a bill was under consideration, and the manner in which the discussion was carried on was something most unmanly and cowardly. One member would get up and say that he was willing to support the bill, but he thought it might do his business harm. Another would say he was ready to support the bill, and intended to bring it in himself next year as it was a good bill, but he thought it was premature and would not vote for it this time.

If I were the citizens of the town, and any men who had stated they would not vote for any measure in which they believed because it would interfere with their business, I would tell them to take their sugar, their tea, and their lumpenrolls, and the Credit. On further consideration, I would not say the Credit, because it is so shallow they would crawl out.

At a previous meeting of the council Rev. Mr. Henderson, myself and other ministers signed a petition praying the council to pass a by-law to keep boys of a certain age from running on the streets after 9 o'clock at night. They spoke of ringing a bell. We did not want them to ring a bell; all we wanted them to do was to pass a by-law impowering the chief of police to take certain boys home if found on the streets, but we have the mayor get up in the face of the petition of four clergymen and say that the council would not undertake to rule the morals of the boys of the town. And why should not the boys be kept in after 9 o'clock? It is by running the streets in the clouds of the night, by smoking cigarette charged with nicotine, short, bounty clay pipes and stumps of cigars gathered off barroom floors. With these, boys first imbibe

A TASTE FOR VICE.

Wait till the mayor's son grows up, for I am informed he has a son, and perhaps he will regret the day that he opposed the petition of the clergymen of this town. And this very same council have passed a by-law allowing a billiard-room to be opened upon Broadway in your town to be a wide gate of destruction to the youth of this town. They are willing to have a billiard saloon opened where the youth of the town may learn to cursing and swearing and drink, for I am informed that the proprietor of the saloon is also the proprietor of one of the hotels, and he will not be slow to lead them from the fascinations of the billiard-table to the gate of the clicking bowl. What kind of council is this to have in a town? There is no use talking about boodling at Ottawa or any where else while we have these degrees

A man might tell the preacher to mind his own business, but when that man's conduct endangered the morality of the community he became a fitting mark for the shafts of the preacher. I would not go down on my knees to ask any man what I ought to preach—I would preach what I believe to be right. The example of our Lord, as indicated by the text, in interfering with wrong, even in a foreign country, was sufficient justification for my preaching against the evils of this community."

Here the rev. gentleman ended one of the most remarkable and brilliant discourses ever preached to an Orangeville congregation. Everybody was delighted with the boldness of the preacher, but we do not see why, if clergymen pretend to preach religion and morality, they cannot apply the principles to actual facts. Mankind is slow to see a point, especially if it is made by a minister, and unless it is brought home to them in the sledge-hammer style of Mr. Hossack its goodness is liable to be spent in space. We understand this is the first of a series of sermons to be delivered in St. Andrew's, and we believe another interesting sermon will be preached next Sunday evening.

PERSONAL.

Miss Anna Miller of Detroit is the guest of Orangeville friends.

Mr. Walter D. Henry left on Monday for Trinity college, Toronto.

Mrs Jas. Brown of Orangeville spent a few days with her friends in Bolton.—Enterprise.

Dr. Dunning, son of Mr. George Dunning of Orangeville, has hung out his shingle at Alsine.

Mr. Jacob Vanwyck, who has been laid up with typhoid fever for some time past, is slowly recovering.

Mrs W. R Kent of Orangeville and infant son, have been most of the week in town as guest of Mrs. Dr. Mullin.—Brampton Times.

Dr. T. H Henry of this town was one of the star players with the Varsity lacrosse club against the Torontos in the great match last Saturday.

Mrs. Tilt of Chicago, Mrs Tyson of Wiarton and Mrs. Witter of Shelburne have been called to Orangeville owing to the serious illness of their mother, Mrs. Kelly.

Mr. Fred S. Mercer, son of Mr. T. L. Mercer of this town, was among the successful candidates at the recent matriculation examinations at Trinity college, Toronto.

Mrs. Kelly of Church street, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Orangeville, has been seriously ill lately, but we are glad to hear her condition is much improved.

ATHLONE.

HURRAH FOR THE DANCE!—Every body around here are going to the dance at Locktown next Friday night.

VISITING.—Mr. Michael Doyle and mother of Alliston were visiting at Mr Robert McKenna's of Loretto on Sunday.

TEACHERS ENGAGED.—Miss Casey, teacher of Achill, has been re-engaged at an increased salary. We understand Mr. Thos Ryan has been hired as teacher at St. James separate school.

RAFFLES.—A large number of raffles will soon be on the boards in this locality. A raffle was held at Mr. Wm Skelly's of Keenansville last Wednesday night. They say some big hauls were made.

AFTER TURKEYS.—A raffle was held at Mr John Carty's, of raffle fame, last Friday night. A large crowd was present, each one doing his best to get the coveted turkeys. We did not hear of any large hauls, but we understand nearly everyone got a share. Supper was held at midnight, to which all did fair justice.

A PLEASANT PARTY.—A very pleasant affair took place at Gamble's Hotel, Loretto, on Friday night, the 16th inst., when Miss Aggie Gamble gave a party to which everybody was asked. An agreeable time was spent by all until early the next morning when they departed for home well pleased with the night's fun.

JOINED THE GANG.—Our football lads joined the Northern Association with Barrie and Alliston as opponents. The first game was played here with Alliston. Mr. Heath, teacher, of Alliston was referee, and we think he tried to do his best, but still he did not give satisfaction. Athlone being allowed only one goal out of several that was called. The visitors had on quite a combination, which slightly overbalanced our boys and they did not do as well as usual. The game ended 2 goals to 1 in favor of Alliston. Alliston must have been slightly afraid of our lads, when they got Rosemont and Collingwood cracks to do up the little Athlone fellows. The boys go to Barrie in two weeks and we hope they will have better success there.

GRAND VALLEY.

FROM AFAR.—Mr. Thos. N. Henry, of Chattanooga, Tennessee, was visiting his brothers in law, Messrs George and Isaac Hillborn, from Saturday to Monday and gave us a pleasant call when on his way through the village, starting for his home on Monday.

IT PAYS.—Mr. John A. Campbell, lot 19, con. 1, East Luther, a few days ago sold to Mr. A Shortreed six steers for $245 and a small steer and heifer for $65 50; also three weeks previous to this sale he sold the same buyer three steers for $117. Who says there is no money in stock raising in connection with farming?

TEACHERS CONVENTION.—The West Dufferin Teachers' Convention will be held at Grand Valley on Friday, Oct. 30. We expect to see all the schools in the district represented by their teachers being present. The meeting of the teachers at these conventions is very profitable to one another in exposing their modes of teaching, to the best interest of their pupils.

many had to protect themselves with standing in the aisles. The stage was tastily decorated with flowers, bunting, etc., for the event, and except for some disorder when the championship prize was presented everything passed off in a most pleasant manner. Rev. M. L. Pearson, the genial pastor of the First Avenue Methodist church, occupied the chair and it is unnecessary to say that the rev. gentleman discharged the duties devolving upon him in a most satisfactory manner. More than once during the evening the chairman drew forth rounds of laughter from the audience by his indomitable humor and pleasing jokes. After the chairman delivered a brief address, the town orchestra, which occupied the north side of the stage, struck up that pleasing overture, "Crown of Gold," after which the H. S. glee club sang a suitable chorus.

THEY GOT DIPLOMAS.

Then the chairman presented the different graduates with diplomas, making a few encouraging remarks to them as they stepped up to receive the parchment. As each graduate came to the front to be presented with a diploma a terrific cheer burst from the crowd and was kept up for several minutes. Other successful students were presented with primary certificates and diplomas in drawing.

Mr. Alex. Steel, principal of the school, made a few remarks regarding the progress of that institution, which has a larger attendance this term than ever before, and which, indeed, is in an extremely healthy condition.

Mrs. W. F. Seymour, with orchestra accompaniment, sang "Little Robin, Tell Kitty I'm Coming" in a manner that won loud applause and a repetition was demanded. "Realistic Reading," a dialogue, was acted by several girls and boys of the school, and they all acquitted themselves creditably. Mr. W. F. Seymour captured the audience with his clarinet solo, "Coming Thro' the Rye." After another song by Mrs. Seymour and some orchestra music the awarding of prizes, won at the sports several weeks ago, took place. Mrs. J. McLaren making the presentations.

GROANS AND HISSES.

Everything went along smilingly until Principal Steele announced that the '91 championship had been awarded to Stanley M Brown, and at this decision the crowd let loose and the groaning, hissing and cat-calling was something unprecedented. When the tumult somewhat subsided Mr. Steele explained that the contest between S. M Brown and W. J. Killeen for the championship was very close, and as the judges had awarded it to the former he thought it would be better to let by-gones be bygones and abide by the judges' decision. But the crowd didn't seem to think so and the disorder was renewed. This event has caused a great deal of ill feeling throughout the town, and a great many are of the opinion that it will put a stop to the H. S. annual games altogether. The cause of all this trouble has been referred to in previous issues of THE SUN, but we sincerely trust all animosity will disappear with the decision of the judges, and things resume their normal shape again. The only thing can be done now, if this year's judges did not understand their business, is to avoid such an occurrence in the future.

The programme was brought to a close by the orchestra playing an appropriate selection.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Weakening weather—The sultry summer days stretch the nerves of the feeble and decrepit, and disease may eventuate unless some restorative, such as these Pills, be found to correct the disordering tendency. Holloway's medicine gives potency to the nervous system, which is the source of all vital movements, and presides over every action which maintains the the growth and well-being of the body. No one can ever estimate the necessity of keeping the nerves well strung, or the use with with which these Pills accomplish this end. They are the most unfailing antidotes to indigestion, irregular circulation, palpitation, sick headache and costiveness, and have therefore attained the largest sale and highest reputation.

Robert Bennett of Georgetown, hotel-keeper, will apply to Parliament next session for divorce from his wife, Matilda Bennett, on the ground of adultery and desertion.

Would you like to exchange your sallow cheeks for those showing with healthy roses? Then try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They rebuild the system and make life so bright as childhood's dream.

Bismarck's announced intention to reenter the political arena is received with alarm by the Government.

Beauty is said to be only skin deep; but to possess and preserve a beautiful skin, pure vigorous blood is essential. This is best secured by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla in small but frequent doses. It is the most reliable of blood purifiers.

CREDIT FORKS.

WHO IS IT?—There is considerable curiosity about who your correspondent is here, but as his only writes occasionally there is not much harm done, and if we did know we would not tell.

RECOVERING.—Mr. John Bielby's little boy is recovering from an elongated jaw, and Mr. Ronald McDonald's little boy is recovering from a severe attack of bronchitis and inflammation of the lungs.

THE REASON.—We heard our magistrate say he would not have been so prompt in getting up the stove and pipes in the A.O.U.W. hall for Mrs. Ansley's party, only he had a grist for his mill that afternoon and did not want to freeze his fair clients. Oh! Mr. Justice.

A JUDICIAL GRIST.—The little trouble among some of our "good" people from Brimstone, when on their way home from church last Sunday evening, was ground out at our Justice mill on Thursday and yielded "trash." What do people go to church for anyway? They should behave like Christians.

JUST AT HAND.—There are signs of coming winter here now, frosty mornings, falling leaves, warm underclothing, and some of our boys flocking together getting ready for their annual flight to the woods for the winter. We notice Dan McFarlane, George Norris, Jim Dodds, Wm. Desmorel, Ed. Claridge and many others are for off on Monday. We wish them success, and hope they may come back in the spring with their pockets well lined with the needful.

CLOSING DOWN.—The quarrymen are preparing for winter and as the brown rock cannot be taken out during frosty weather it must be left along. We are all anxiously looking forward to see what the enterprise of our leading men here, Messrs. Carroll & Vick will do to enable us to earn money enough to keep the wolf from the door. We feel encouraged to expect quite a lot of work in the way of stripping rock, cutting wood, clearing land, etc., for we know they have the money to do all these things with, and think it will be to their interest to do so as well as a great benefit to us who live here, and are depending upon our labor for our living. Men who have the energy and capital to tackle a job like the new parliament buildings in Toronto are not likely to shrink from a little job like ours.

A PLEASANT PARTY.—Mrs. Ansley's party came off Thursday evening and was one of the most enjoyable affairs we have been at for a long time, and this is saying a good deal—when we were at Jo Jubb's party the other evening and at another one five or six years ago. At all events there were over 60 people there, every one went in for fun and had plenty of it. Music by James and Tom Rafferty was of the very best and though we may be getting up in years we could not resist shaking our No. 11's just once, at the risk of pains in our knees next day. At 12 o'clock the guests were seated around the hall and a plentiful supply of sandwiches, pies and cakes, tea and coffee were passed around, and some choice grapes by way of dessert. After lunch a few good songs were sung, when dancing was resumed and kept up until three in the morning. After a vote of thanks to the host and hostess and singing God Save the Queen, the guests went home well pleased with their evening's entertainment.

HOCKLEY.

A BIG SHOOT.—The grandest shooting match of the season will take place at D. R. Galbraith's hotel, Hockley, on Friday, the 30th, when a large number of turkeys and geese will be shot for. This contest will be one of the most interesting kind and a large crowd will be present. Dan is the boy to make sport for the masses and we hope they will take advantage of it.

SLESWICK.

(Brampton Times.)

Fall wheat in this locality looks remarkably strong and healthy.

Mr. Jas. Reaburn, of this place, has for some days been suffering from an affection of the throat, but we are informed he is recovering.

Reports say that Mr. John Reaburn and R. Robson of Caledon start this week for Uncle Sam's land to serve on a large cattle ranch owned by Mr. John Rutledge a former resident of Caledon.

Potato digging has been in full blast here for some time. The rot is much less serious than was some time are expected, an average of five bushels to the acre will cover the loss to the crop in this section.

Taking this as his starting point the veteran proceeded to instigate various evils which have sprung up in our midst. Said he:—"When I came to this town some three years ago, I was told by a man of respectability, that if I wished to succeed here I would find it necessary to tendy to a certain rich man. There is nothing in this world so entirely calculated to take away a man's respect for himself as toadying. The spirit of toadying in this part of the country has been reduced to a science. Men will stoop and cringe upon those who happen to have a few shillings more than they have. They are willing to

of the earth for some small favor which they imagine the rich man will give them, when, however, they come to ask for a favor they find that a cold refusal is the only response, and their sole satisfaction is the recollection of their own meanness. I have never cringed nor toadied to any man and I never will.

Now, if I wanted a situation in this town what would I do? I would rent a house from one of the trustees and go around and see the other trustees, and if possible work into their favor, then if the chairman of the board happened to have a daughter to the daughter—if I were that kind of a man; but I'm not it is not kind of a man, and never will be. Would I think of the fitness of the position? No; the thought of fitness would never enter my mind if only I could get there by fawning and favoritism. There is one thing that has struck me of late in this town as being extremely glaring. Only last week we have it announced in public print that gambling takes place frequently at one of the leading hotels in town. Now, if this is so where are our License Commissioners? We have a law on our statute book which says if gambling takes place in any hotel the license of that hotel should be cancelled. If I were a chairman of this board of license commissioners I would have a detective up from Toronto to investigate this matter at once—but they do nothing. Why do not the people of this district rise en masse and turn them out?

Another thing which has struck me as being altogether too

christian country was the disturbance at the town hall on Friday evening last. I was not there myself, but I am informed that there was a disturbance and a great deal of hissing on the part of some dissatisfied high school boys with the decision given by the judges of the sports. I was up at the grounds the day of the sports myself, and I saw a great deal of dishonesty, strife, hatred and spite on the grounds that day. These sports are a good thing, but they should be conducted in a proper manner, and judges who are impartial should always be appointed at such sports.

These boys, with their minds unsullied by contact with the world, know as well as any one what is right and what is wrong, and the judges have sown in their young hearts the seeds of discord and rebellion of their judgment. This is a small thing you will say, but is it right that men should set an example to youth which will be the first step towards the cultivation of a

MEAN, CHURLISH DISPOSITION?

These judges, by accepting the position, intimated they were capable judges, and should have decided the matter at the time, and should not have waited for grandfathers, uncles and other relatives of one of the competitors to influence them during the interval. If I were one of the judges I would hang my head in shame. More than one person went away from the grounds that day feeling that he would not go back to the games in future if they were conducted in that manner.

Another thing that amazes me in this town is your town council. I was down the other evening when a bill was under consideration, and the manner in which the discussion was carried on was something most unmanly and cowardly. One member would get up and say that he was willing to support the bill, but he thought it might do his business harm. Another would say he was ready to support the bill, and intended to bring it in himself next year as it was a good bill, but he thought it was premature and would not vote for it this time.

If I were the citizens of the town, and any men who had stated they would not vote for any measure in which they believed because it would interfere with their business, I would tell them to take their sugar, their tea, and their lemonade, and the Credit. On further consideration, I would not say the Credit, because it is so shallow they would crawl out.

At a previous meeting of the council Rev. Mr. Henderson, myself and other ministers signed a petition praying the council to pass a by law to keep boys of a certain age from running on the streets after 9 o'clock at night. They spoke of ringing a bell. We did not want them to ring a bell; all we wanted them to do was to pass a by law empowering the chief of police to take certain boys home if found on the streets, but we have the mayor get up in the face of the petition of four clergymen and say that the council would not undertake to rule the morals of the boys of the town. And why should not the boys be kept in after 9 o'clock? It is by running the streets in the clouds of the night, by smoking cigarette charged with nicotine, short, bonty clay pipes and stumps of cigars gathered off barroom floors. With these, boys first imbibe

A TASTE FOR VICE.

Wait till the mayor's son grows up, for I am informed he has a son, and perhaps he will regret the day that he opposed the petition of the clergymen of this town. And this very same council have passed a by-law allowing a billiard-room to be opened upon Broadway in your town to be a wide gate of destruction to the youth of this town. They are willing to have a billiard saloon opened where the youth of the town may learn to smoke and chew and drink, for I am informed that the proprietor of the saloon is also the proprietor of one of the hotels, and he will not be slow to lead them from the fascinations of the billiard-table to the gaze of the circling bowl. What kind of council is this to have in a town? There is no use talking about boosting at Ottawa or any where else while we have these fragment

Local Intelligence.

Boom the market.

It is said numerous cases of typhoid fever exist at Alton.

The last October meeting of the town council takes place on Monday evening.

February, 1892, will have 29 days, in other words, 1892 will be a leap year.

The tricky juvenile is lying low until Saturday night—Hallowe'en.

Geo. Booth's new grocery store on east Broadway is now in full blast.

It is rumored that Ald. Youmans and Gillespie are in the field for the deputy reeveship.

A shooting-match is announced to take place at D. R. Galbraith's hotel at Hockley to-morrow.

Guy Bros' minstrels, in aid of the local I. O. Foresters, drew a large crowd to the town hall last night.

Handles on the garden gate this week reminds us that the sleigh-riding season is almost with us.

Remember the Spinsters' High Tea in the basement of the Methodist church to-morrow (Friday) evening.

Orono lodge, S. O. I. P. A., will shortly organize in St. Mark's.

A NEW FIRM.—Messrs. A. G. McKenney and J. J. Kelly have purchased the branch hardware store of A. & W. Johnston and will conduct the business in the old stand, opposite Mill street, under the firm name of McKenney & Kelly. Either gentleman need no introduction to these columns to the public, as "Ab" McKenney and "Jake" Kelly are known far and wide as business men of no mean ability. A lot of new machinery has been added to the plant and it is their intention to carry on a first class hardware and tin ware establishment. We wish the new firm every success.

WEDDING BELLS.—A private but pretty wedding took place in this town on Monday evening, when Mr. John J. Drummond of Albion was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Miss Sarah Lackey, second daughter of Mr. John Lackey of Toronto. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's brother-in-law, Mr. Wm. Hillock, Wellington street, Rev. M. L. Pearson officiating. The happy couple left on Tuesday for Albion township, where the groom is a prosperous farmer, and will take up their permanent residence. Mr and Mrs Drummond will have the best wishes of their friends for a long life of wedded happiness.

JAS. JONES SUICIDES.

HE SHUFFLES OFF THIS MORTAL COIL IN THE COLD

Waters of Jull's Old Mill-Pond.

ONE OF THE MOST DETERMINED SUICIDES ON RECORD

DISGUSTED WITH HIMSELF AND THE REST OF HUMANITY HE RIDS GOOD-BYE TO THE WORLD.

"My life is no good to me, and I'll do away with myself," spoke Jimmy Jones to a bartender in one of the east Broadway hotels last Friday night, but the bartender or no one else who heard this threat paid the least bit of attention to it. Consequently, on Wednesday morning when it was announced that the body of James Jones had been discovered in the old pond above Merrson's shingle-mill in the South ward, a good deal of excitement was caused in town.

HORNING'S MILLS.

SNOW.—Wednesday a slow little flurry of "the beautiful" in this vicinity on Thursday morning which caused our inhabitants to hump their backs and make things look cold and dry.

RETURNED.—Councillor Hudson has returned from Manitoba, and says there is six inches of snow in various parts of the Prairie Province. He also states there is considerable harvest out yet.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.—Rev. Jos. E. Wilson, B. A., L. L. B., preached an eloquent sermon in the Methodist church last Sabbath, and Rev. Mr Boyd delivered a searching and practical discourse in St. Paul's.

WHY?—The all-absorbing question around the Mills now days is:—"Why don't the Orangeville papers report the Orangeville grain market? We searched both THE SUN and the Post in vain for the markets last week. Now, THE SUN is thought something of in this section and we want an explanation.

YES, WHITTINGTON.—The Whittington correspondent of the Economist boasted last week of a young lady in that neighborhood who dug 40 bags of potatoes in a day and did her housework as well. We can beat it. There is a woman in this neighborhood who can dig 40 bags of potatoes in a day and take them 7 miles to market and do her housework as well. Come on, Mr. Whittington.

ORANGEVILLE, 29th Oct., 1891.

Hats and Bonnets.

Where to buy, and what style and shape to buy, is now the absorbing topic of conversation with the ladies, on social occasions. Judging from the increase in our MILLINERY ORDERS and SALES lately, we have conclusive evidence that Miss Robertson's reputation for taste in selection and skill in construction, is becoming more noted.

BEAUTIFUL DRESS GOODS.

Our Shawl Window.

Is creating very favorable comment, and why shouldn't it? Nothing like our Shawls anywhere for style, price, and quality. We bought 5 Dozen Old Country Sample Shawls at sterling cost in Glasgow

Mr. J. H. Hughes of Orangeville with a staff of hands, commenced the brick-work on the new English church here last Wednesday evening, and, weather permitting will have the walls up by Saturday next. Mr. Hughes is a competent and energetic workman.—Hillsburg Beacon

BOARD WANTED.—An elderly lady is desirous of securing a quiet, respectable boarding place. Enquire at Mrs Pugh's residence, opposite St. Mark's church.

SOLD OUT.—Messrs. H N. Young & Bros. have disposed of their hardware business to Mr R H. Hemstreet of Sault ste Marie. The senior partner of the firm, we believe, intends removing to the Sault.

BURT—HUMPHREY.—Last week at Scarboro Mr. W A. J Burt, son of Rev F Burt of Cardwell, was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Miss Lizzie Humphrey of Scarboro. THE SUN extends its congratulations.

YOU ARE INVITED.—The Methodist Spinsters' Harvest Home, High Tea and Hallow e'en Festival takes place Friday evening, the 30th. The charming president of the Spinsterhood will be there. All their lady and gentlemen friends are invited, to whom the promise is made of as fine a supper and as pleasant an evening as can be spent.

HAPPILY WED.—Mr W H Stewart of Corbetton, was married to Miss Mary A Stewart of St Vincent township on Monday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Henderson, rector of St. Mark's, at the parsonage. After the [illegible] they repaired to the Paisley house, where supper was partaken of, and the couple left on the evening train for their home in Corbetton.

ELECTED.—At the regular meeting of Court Gardiner, No. [illegible] held on Monday evening the following officers were elected: T. W. Chapman, C. R.; B. McGuire, P C R; Wm. Collister, V. C. R.; T. J. Bennett, F. S.; A. H. Turnbull, T.; R. Wilson C.; W. T. Hicks, S. W.; A. Carter, J. W.; D. Nicholson, S. B.; R. Robinson, J. B.; Dr. Fraser, S.

A GOOD MOVE.—The board of trade of this town has demonstrated its usefulness by taking hold of the weekly market question and doing all in its power to make the market a greater success than it was last year. At a meeting of the council of the board, held a few days ago, it was decided to offer prizes with a view to encourage farmers to bring their produce to Orangeville instead of taking it to surrounding hamlets, and it now rests with the farmers to make the market a great success. Dodgers containing a list of prizes have been scattered broadcast, and our country friends who have articles to dispose of should procure one and peruse the list of very liberal prizes. You can get as good, if not better, prices in Orangeville for your produce than in any other place, and why not come here? Six prizes will be awarded every week for poultry, butter, etc., commencing on Thursday, Oct. 29, and continuing until Jan'y 1, 1892.

A NEW FIRM.—Messrs. A. G. McKenney and J. J. Kelly have purchased the branch hardware store of A. & W. Johnston and will conduct the business in the old stand, opposite Mill street, under the firm name of McKenney & Kelly. Either gentleman need no introduction in these columns to the public, as "Ab" McKenney and "Jake" Kelly are known far and wide as business men of no mean ability. A lot of new machinery has been added to the plant and it is their intention to carry on a first class hardware and tin ware establishment. We wish the new firm every success.

WEDDING BELLS.—A private but pretty wedding took place in this town on Monday evening, when Mr. John J. Drummond of Albion was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Miss Sarah Lasker, second daughter of Mr. John Lackey of Toronto. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's brother-in-law, Mr. Wm. Hillock, Wellington street. Rev. M. L. Pearson officiating. The happy couple left on Tuesday for Albion township, where the groom is a prosperous farmer, and will take up their permanent residence. Mr and Mrs Drummond will have the best wishes of their friends for a long life of wedded happiness.

A. PORTER HURT.—Leslie Robson, a young man employed as porter at the Gordon house, met with a very severe accident on Wednesday last, and he had about as close a call as he ever hopes to have again. He was in the act of driving the big 'bus out of the stable when the horses commenced to run away and while going out of the door the young man was caught between the top of the vehicle and the door and received a terrible squeeze. Robson's back was badly injured and he remained unconscious for some time after the accident. The young fellow has almost recovered, but he will not forget his experience for some time to come.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—The directors of the Orangeville Mechanics' Institute have added a large list of new books to the library, including popular works in history, general and religious literature, science and fiction. The reading room is also well supplied with all the leading weekly and daily newspapers, the best English and American magazines and illustrated papers. Every evening the reading room is well filled with boys and men; and it is a pleasure to see the former improving their minds instead of running about the streets as they did before the room was opened The public should give this excellent institution their cordial support.

UNDER A DELUSION.—The Orangeville council has passed the famous cow bylaw. All the present members may be prepared to vacate their seats in the council next January. The majority of the people in Orangeville are in favor of cows running at large on the streets. It is truly a rural town.—Shelburne Free Press. Oh, no! dear brother, this is quite a civilized town, at least that is what competent judges tell us; and, moreover, the majority of Orangevillians are not in favor of cows perambulating the streets. In two wards of the town there are extensive commons, and, of course, the cow owners there did not want to pay for pasture when they could get it free. That's the whole case in a nutshell.

BOB AND THE HORSE.—Sunday evening considerable excitement was caused on west Broadway by the announcement that Contractor Maxwell's 3:60-trotter had been stolen from its stable, and as it could not be found around its usual haunts Mr. Maxwell engaged the services of the police force to hunt the animal up Robert Fearns, a blacksmith, took a great interest in the loss and Maxwell thought Bob knew of its whereabouts. When Bob was approached and asked about the matter, he said he didn't know anything about it. Meanwhile the guardians of the law located the trotter in possession of a young town dude a couple of miles from here. It turns out that Bob gave the young coon authority to take the animal out, and it is said Bob's liberality cost him a fiver.

CANADA FOR OCTOBER.—Canada is rapidly winning its way into Canadian hearts and homes. The number for October contains, in addition to the continued articles, a beautiful poem called 'Dua in the Wilderness,' by Thos. C Robson; an imaginative and suggestive essay by pastor Felix, "The Heart on the Sleeve"; a story by L. L., "On the Gatineau"; some fine verses by Eric on "Indian Summer at Montreal"; a rendering in verse of a Danish legend by the Editor; and some choice selections, including a fascinating story from the Independent "Sion McGann's Toboggan Ride." All who subscribe for 1892 now will receive the last three numbers of this year free. One dollar will pay for fifteen months. Published by Matthew R. Knight, Benton, New Brunswick.

SUDDENLY CALLED AWAY.—The uncertainty of life was painfully illustrated in the household of Mr Patrick Kelly at 1 o'clock Friday morning last, when his faithful wife breathed her last after two hours' illness. Mrs. Kelly was enjoying the best of health and on Thursday did a big day's work. She retired shortly after 10 o'clock, and when disrobing a severe pain seized her in the region of the heart and every minute grew more severe. At this time, however, no grave results were looked for, and as the pain continued to grow worse a doctor was summoned, but nothing could be done to relieve her sufferings, death taking place at the time mentioned above. The funeral took place from the Royal hotel, Mill street, on Sunday to the town cemetery, and was attended by a large concourse of citizens. Mr. Kelly and other relatives have THE SUN's sympathy in their sad affliction

ABOUT A HORSE.—A case came up for hearing before the reeve on Saturday regarding the possession of a horse. Mr. Beatty of Orangeville some time ago sold a horse to Chas. DeGraw of of Corbetton, and took a lien note as security. The note was not paid, A. S. McArthur sued DeGraw at last Division Court and got judgment, and Bailiff Vandusen seized the horse, and left it for safety in possession of McArthur. Beatty and DeGraw endeavored to persuade McArthur to give up the horse which he did. Action was entered against Mr. Beatty and a search warrant issued for the horse. As the case was likely to be a serious one, and evidently arose out of a misunderstanding, there was no desire on the part of Mr. McArthur to press it. It was postponed till Monday, when no one appeared, and it was dismissed, it being understood that Mr. Beatty was to pay the costs incurred.—Dundalk Herald.

JAS. JONES SUICIDES.

HE SHUFFLES OFF THIS MORTAL COIL IN THE COLD

Waters of Jull's Old Mill-Pond.

ONE OF THE MOST DETERMINED SUICIDES ON RECORD

DISGUSTED WITH HIMSELF AND THE REST OF HUMANITY HE BIDS GOOD-BYE TO THE WORLD.

"My life is no good to me, and I'll do away with myself," spoke Jimmy Jones to a bartender in one of the east Broadway hotels last Friday night, but the bartender or no one else who heard this threat paid the least bit of attention to it. Consequently, on Wednesday morning when it was announced that the body of James Jones had been discovered in the old pond above Morrison's shingle-mill in the South ward, a good deal of excitement was caused in town.

HE SAW CLOTHES.

Mr. James Dawson, employed at Morrison's shingle-mill, went up to the pond shortly after 7 o'clock on the morning in question, and noticed an overcoat, two lighter coats and a hat piled up on the flume. His suspicions were aroused, but as the morning was rather dark he could not see any trace of a man in the water, which was covered by a rather thick coating of ice. He returned to the mill and informed Mr. Morrison of what he had seen, and said there must be a man in the pond. Mr. Morrison went down town and reported the case to Chief Shields. But in the meantime Orange Jull, Frank Anthony and Constable Thompson had arrived on the scene. This was between 8 and 9 o'clock. After peering into the water for some time the constable on the bottom of the pond, about fifteen feet from the bank, and in about 6 or 7 feet of water. Mr. Anthony ran to the fire-hall and procured a pike pole, and by this means the body was dragged to the shore Up to this time nobody knew who the unfortunate man was, but when the body was recovered there was no difficulty in identifying it as that of Jimmy Jones.

SAW A MAN LYING

Chief Shields procured a wagon at Williamson's pump works and had the remains conveyed to the market-room in the town hall, and Coroner Henry was notified.

Poor Jimmy Jones was a well-known character about town during the past twenty years, and he was his own worst enemy. He was born in London, (Eng) 59 years ago, and spent 12 years with the British army in India. Eleven years ago he attempted to end his life in the stable of an east Broadway hotel by cutting his throat, but he was discovered in time and the gash was stitched up. The remains were conveyed to the town cemetery at 7 o'clock yesterday evening.

THE INQUEST.

The coroner deemed an inquest necessary and a jury was summoned. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the coroner, jurymen, and a large number of citizens assembled in the market-room. The remains were examined by the coroner and jury, after which some evidence was taken. Crown Attorney Myers conducted the examination James Dawson, Orange Jull, James Bennett, J E. Booth, J. Platt were examined as to the finding of the body, and how deceased appeared during the last few days. Joseph Wallace and Wm. Hicks, the latter employed on THE SUN, are believed to be the last persons who saw poor Jones alive. The former met deceased about 9:30 on Broadway and had a few moments' conversation with him, during which Jones remarked that it was pretty hard to be out of a job when winter was so near at hand." The theory is that Jones was on his way to the pond at that time, for the body must have been in the water at least seven hours.

THE VERDICT.

After the evidence was all in the room was cleared, and the jury, after 10 minutes' deliberation, brought in the following verdict:—"That the said James Jones, on the 28th of October, was found drowned and suffocated in Jull's mill pond in the town of Orangeville, and that the deceased had no marks of violence appearing on his body, but how, or by what means the said James Jones became drowned and suffocated, no evidence doth appear to the Jurors."

THE COP STRUCK OUT.—On Tuesday morning several Broadway residents were treated to a pugilistic exhibition. It appears that several months ago County Constable Hubbard sunk a well for Mr. Joseph Leighton of Mono and the latter was not satisfied with the work. He met the cop in front of McKenney and Kelly's hardware store and told him about the alleged bad work, but the "terror to peddlers" held that he fulfilled his part of the bargain, and every second the talk grew louder and louder and the language became less complimentary, when, at last, it is said Hubbard delivered an overshot blow with his right that caught the Mono man on the optic and spread him out on mother earth. Mr. Leighton gathered himself up and before many minutes had a summons issued for the cop, charging him with assault. The constable retaliated by laying an information against Leighton for using insulting language. The dispute will be enquired into by P. M. Pattullo at Saturday's session of the police court.

DON'T PATRONIZE THEM.—Last Saturday a stylishly dressed young man from Toronto was in town taking orders from private and professional individuals for underwear, etc., which is manufactured in Toronto and sent up here We have not the least doubt that the cuss received numerous orders, because certain people would sooner purchase goods out of town than spend their cash where they eke out an existence. Of course our merchants kick, and they are undoubtedly right, for a town cannot be in a prosperous condition when many of its own people will not support home enterprise and home institutions. But certain shopkeepers should not find fault with citizens who buy goods in the city, for they themselves set the bad example by giving their printing to city vags when it should go to a town office. Wouldn't it look nice for the newspaper men of Orangeville to buy clothing and other supplies in Toronto when just as good and just as cheap goods can be procured in town? So it appears to us when merchants order printing in the city which should be done in town. Boom the town and patronize home enterprise!

As a family medicine, Ayer's Pills excel all others. They are suited to every age and, being sugar-coated, are easy to take. Though searching and thorough in effect, they are mild and pleasant in action, and their use is attended with no injurious results.

HORNING'S MILLS.

SNOW.—We had a nice little flurry of "the beautiful" in this vicinity on Thursday morning which caused our inhabitants to bump their boots and make things look cold and icy.

RETURNED.—Councillor Hodgens has returned from Manitoba, and says there is six inches of snow in various parts of the Prairie Province. He also states there is considerable harvest out yet.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.—Rev. Jas R. Wilson, B. A., L. L. B., preached an eloquent sermon in the Methodist church last Sabbath, and Rev. Mr Boyd delivered a searching and practical discourse in St. Paul's.

WHY?—The all-absorbing question around the Mills now a days is:—"Why don't the Orangeville papers report the Orangeville grain market? We searched both THE SUN and the Post in vain for the markets last week. Now, THE SUN is thought something of in this section and we want an explanation.

YES, WHITTINGTON.—The Whittington correspondent of the Economist boasted last week of a young lady in that neighborhood who dug 40 bags of potatoes in a day and did her housework as well. We can beat it. There is a woman in this neighborhood who can dig 40 bags of potatoes in a day and take them 7 miles to market and do her housework as well. Come on, Mr. Whittington.

WORKERS TO INIQUITY.—In this pious village with its four churches, its numerous justices; who are ever ready to tender their timely advice—it is astonishing what evil prevails. Some time ago we mentioned the thievery that was carried on in the orchards around us, and now it is our painful duty to chronicle the startling fact that in the very midst of our village, when the solemn exertions are being sounded from the pulpit, some of our inhabitants are busy sawing and splitting their firewood! Now, if those who indulge in this kind of Sabbath-breaking don't want their names published in THE SUN they had better not repeat their sins. We give you fair warning; such work shall not go uncriticised

CIVIC PROSPERITY.—Our enterprising little town (which is commonly called "The Hollow") is growing apace, and we expect to soon make Shelburne one of our suburbs. We think if a high school is ever erected in this part of the county Horning's Mills will be the location. Of course Shelburne has her railway, but that is all that she has, while we have the best water privileges of any village in the county, and a splendid farming country for miles around it. And then the chief source of our municipal legislation emanates from this quarter: we have the reeve, 2nd deputy, and one councillor—three out of five, and we intend to have more at the next election.

Married.

MARSHALL—LAVERTY.—On Wednesday, October 14th, at the residence of the bride's father, by Rev. Geo. B Morley, Rector of Tullamore, Josiah A Marshall to Annie, eldest daughter of William Laverty, Esq., all of the Township of Mono.

Sufferers

FROM Stomach and Liver derangements—Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick-Headache, and Constipation—find a safe and certain relief in Ayer's Pills. In all cases where a cathartic is needed, these Pills are recommended by leading physicians.

Dr. T. E. Hastings, of Baltimore, says: "Ayer's Pills are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of my profession."

Dr. John W. Brown, of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I have prescribed Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."

"For a number of years I was afflicted with biliousness which almost destroyed my health. I tried various remedies but nothing afforded me any relief until I began to take Ayer's Pills."—G. S. Wanderlich, Scranton, Pa.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years, and am satisfied I should not be alive to-day if it had not been for them. They cured me of dyspepsia when all other remedies failed, and their occasional use has kept me in a healthy condition ever since."—T. P. Brown, Chester, Pa.

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills, and deem it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these Pills every night before retiring. I would not willingly be without them."—G. W. Bowman, 26 East Main st., Carlisle, Pa.

"Ayer's Pills have been used in my family upwards of twenty years, and have completely verified all that is claimed for them. In attacks of piles, from which I suffered many years, they afforded me greater relief than any medicine I ever tried."—Thomas F. Adams, Holly Springs, Texas.

AUTUMN DAYS

Here in the glade, beneath the dying beech
Brook murmuring adieu as it rows more free,
The beautiful in robe drifting down
And falling gently round you and me.

Now and then, thro' the drooping boughs,
The sunbeams flicker and frolic gay,
And the brown speeds on with a noiseless flow,
Mid the hazy lights of the short day.

And sweet old memories of by-gone days
Come floating here like a summer dream,
While lingering sunbeams chase the
And a lovely scene over the landscape wake

And gone seems all promise of life and earth,
And a cold pall of gloom overshadows all
Till hope throws out the bright star of light
Which deeper the lights and shadows fall

For God in Heaven, with infinite love,
Sends peace that transcends the reach of pain;
And the leaves and flowers that died last year
In spring-time beauty will blossom again

University convocation was crowded last week. The speeches from Professor Wilson, the curvable G. W. R. as and many other learned gentlemen were splendid, that is what could be heard of them, for the students came out in their usual demonstrative manner during the proceedings, and the effect of eloquence is much undermined when intermingled with the unclassical strains of, "We won't get home till morning," and "Old Grimes." But, although most people look annoyed and say, "Its disgraceful the way those students act," Still they are witty sometimes, and I am afraid the majority would find convocation extremely dull, if none but prize-winners among the students were admitted.

At the auditorium last Thursday, Master Albert Stettenbenz, the famous boy singer of Buffalo, made his first appearance before a Canadian audience He has a beautiful soprano voice, sweet, and clear as a bell. His finest rendering was "Angels ever bright and Fair," the song that seems to have been written for a fresh, thrilling voice. His high notes were especially fine, and filled without effort the immense hall. He is only a little boy, and he made a quaint picture in his velvet suit and deep lace collar.

THE FIRST SNOW.—On Sunday morning between 7 and 8 o'clock "the beautiful" descended fine before a cold northeast wind.

THANKSGIVING SUPPER.—The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Church will give a bountiful supper on the evening of Thanksgiving Day.

The most singular figure in United States politics just now is Grover Cleveland's week old baby That child is talked of more than its father ever was and it is openly stated by prominent Democrats that the appearance of the little stranger on the political stage has crowded David B Hill out of the race for the Presidential nomination and nothing else could have done it" One big Democrat of New York said: "That event makes Cleveland our candidate. I tell you sentiment rules this country and that infant will win tens of thousands of votes for his father." The surprising influence of a baby was seen in another quarter a few weeks ago Captain Dreyfus, a gallant French officer, is married to a daughter of the late General Boulanger and was in exile at Tunis. Nothing seemed to promise that the exiled couple would again be able to return to France, but to them a son was born and the sympathy of sentimental France was aroused, petitions circulated broadcast and probably by this time Captain Dreyfus and wife are free to return to Paris.

Fortunately for the reputation of the Irish people, the funeral of Charles Stewart Parnell on Sunday passed off without lawless demonstration. The men who had been actively opposed to Mr. Parnell refrained from being present, and the remains of the Irish leader, whose life's close had been so stormy, were borne in peace to the grave. The next few days will show whether any arrangement can be made tending to re-establish unity of action among Irish members of Parliament. It is to be hoped that a speedy and complete reconciliation will take place between the factions.

SUNNYVALE (MELANOTHON)

NEW BUILDING.—Mr. Thos. Nicholls, our energetic merchant, is building an addition to his store over by the river.

TEA-MEETING.—A tea meeting was held in the Methodist church on Monday evening last, and was attended by a large crowd. A huge programme was rendered POTATO ROT.—The farmers are digging their potatoes. They complain of the greater part being tainted with rot If the "murphies spile" we will have to call upon the county town for support.

OFF FOR MUSKOKA.—Mr Geo Richardson left last week for the wild woods of Muskoka, where he will spend some time hunting deer. We expect George will be able to treat our inhabitants to a taste of venison when he returns.

SPORTING.—We notice several sportsmen out daily hunting the game of the surrounding forest. One man saw a bear but was afraid to tackle him. Another says he saw either a bear or a coon up a tree, but he is not sure which; he also passed by the bird without saying a word.

THRESHING.—Our ever energetic yeomen are in the midst of threshing. Able Bros. are taking the cake with their steamer. About one more week will wind up the work for 1891 Of course we don't attend threshings much, but the farmers tell us that the grain is turning out well. Several of our well-to-do farmers are going to buy more land, machinery, furniture, etc.—depending fully upon the large yield of grain to pay for all.

WANTED.—The one thing most needful in this town is a first class hotel. There is a large traffic on the various team roads that lead to the town, besides the vast system of navigation on the "mud." There is some talk of a hotel, a saloon, or something of the kind being started out at Melanethon station, but this place is superior to either the "station" or Riverview, so we think this is the place where aqua vitae should be sold.

THAT GRAVEL ROAD.—There is a good deal of money being expended on several roads in the township taking one time with another, but it seems impossible for the good people of Sunnyvale to get one cent from our township fathers to repair the road leading between here and Riverview. Surely any man that is compos mentis can see at first sight that this road is in need of a few dollars being expended on it. We look for a change.

HYMENEAL.—One of those happy events, that is the duty of every ear to take note of, came off at the residence of our esteemed neighbor and friend, Jas. Watson, Esq., on Wednesday, the 14th inst., when M. W. J. Bennett and Miss Mary Elizabeth Watson, both of Sunnysale, were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony Rev. Dr. McRobbie of Shelburne officiated. Mrs and Mrs. Bennett will please accept our best wishes for their future prosperity and happiness.

OUR FUTURE COUNCIL.—There is some speculation at present as to who will compose our council for 1892. New members are expected at any rate, and we think this side of the municipality should have two representatives instead of one. This time we have a council board composed of economical members, but they hail mostly from the old survey How is it this every year? Or cia bono? The one answer settles both questions—too much Gritism prevails. Imperium in imperio is of no avail We want our councillors apportioned through the township pro bono publico Now, as we need another representative from this side, we think that our old and esteemed friend, Mr H H. Walker, is just the man for the office Mr W. has figured highly as a municipal officer in by-gone days, and thus he is not like one who has his spurs to win. We are not trying to flatter Mr Walker by expressing ourselves in this way but are speaking instinctively However, we leave the matter per interim and await further developments.

EAST LUTHER COUNCIL.

COURT ROOM, GRAND VALLEY, October 1st, 1891

The Council met to day at six o'clock p m. at the call of the Reeve—present John Park Wm McClelland and E W McCulloch.

A by-law was duly introduced and provisionally passed, providing for the draining of the west side of Main Street, in the village of Grand Valley, and for borrowing $630 50 for the completion of the same.

Moved by E W. McCulloch, seconded by Wm McClelland that a copy of the proposed by law to drain the west side of Main Street, in the village of Grand Valley and to borrow $630 50 on the credit of the Municipality, to complete the same, and the notices thereof be served upon each of the several resident owners affected under by law, and a copy and notice be mailed to the address, per registered letter, to each of the non-resident owners on the last revised Assement Roll.—Carried Moved by Wm M Cleland, seconded by E W McCulloch, that W. R Scott and E W McCulloch be appointed a committee to let the contract of completing the drain on the west side of Main Street, in the village of Grand Valley, and inspect the same; and also, that they continue the tile drain across Amaranth Street, provided that satisfactory arrangements can be made with D. B. Clark.—Carried.

Moved by Wm. McClelland, seconded by E W McCulloch, that the solicitors opinion be obtained as to the best mode of changing the system of doing the road work, to a direct tax, and if an expression of the public opinion could be legally taken to the next Municipal election.—Carried.

Moved by E. W. McCulloch seconded by Wm. McClelland, that John Park be appointed as this township's arbitrator in reference to bridges over 100 feet in length.—Carried Moved by E W McCulloch, seconded by Wm McClelland, that the deputy reeve Wm. McClelland, and the clerk go to the clerk of West Luther and procure a copy of the Assessment Rolls for 1867, of the Township of Luther.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned to meet again as per adjournment of last meeting, which is the 15th day of December next, at 9 o'clock a m.

R. E. HAMILTON, Clerk.

The Safest

AND most powerful alterative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the umpteen diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William F. Dougherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child is livelier, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of almost every kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M. D., Wiggs, Arkansas.

The exportation of wheat and potatoes from Russia is to be prohibited.

The Government "rain-making experiments in Texas have proved an unqualified success.

Annie Hames was awarded $1,000 damages against James Hastin at Stratford Assizes Monday for breach of promise of marriage.

Pacaud had to render Mercier an account of the $100,000 bonds collected in the Baie des Chaleurs job. That is what Pacaud told Mr Armstaong, according to the latter's testimony before the commission a few days ago. There are facts that best go home without any driving. This is one of them.

Mr Andrew Nicol, formerly a well known resident of the vicinity of Hereward, in East Garafraxa, died recently at his home at Scrubland, Manitoba, after four weeks' illness of typhoid fever. The many friends of the family in this county will be very sorry to hear of Mr. Nicol's death.

The ministers and citizens of Barrie are trying to stop the granting of a license to a saloon which will open up there, but the inspector and some members of the board of commissioners are helping the saloonist. Come now Mr Mowat, christian premier of Ontario, call off your servants and put your christian views to force by prohibiting this evil.

A year or two ago it was difficult to get tenants for houses in town, consequently rent came down, but we are glad to know that houses have become scarce and every day we have inquires for houses that are to rent, but there is not an empty house, good or bad, to be had for love or money. This speaks well for the prosperity of the town and no doubt will result in a building boom next season Harriston Tribune And sure Bro. Robertson supports the party that declares Canada is going to the dogs! It doesn't look much as if Harriston is on the down grade, doesn't Bro?

Why don't they use onions? For goodness sake, why don't they use onions? Where do they live? I will go up there to-day and tell them to use onions! Such were the exclamations of our mother when we reported yesterday at dinner that a child of Mr G W Dudley was dead, and the whole family including himself, grievously sick with diphtheria Mother was moved to these earnest and interested expressions by a firm belief that she knows several cases saved by the use of onions in diphtheria. In these cases raw onions were placed in a bandage and beaten into a pulp the cotton containing onions, juice and all, being then bound about the throat and well over the ears Renewals may be made as often as the mass becomes dry. In the cases noticed the result was almost magical; deadly pain yielding in short time to sleepy comfort We think this remedy might have a wide enough trial to fully test its usefulness

Court for the revision of the Dominion voters list for Mt Forest was held in the council chamber by Revising Officer Walsh on Wednesday of last week. The sitting lasted from 1 p m till midnight and afforded interesting and at times amusing entertainment for the large crowd of spectators present. Some misunderstanding as to the authority upon which the signature of Mr. James Gardiner was used on the Conservative appeals caused the fate of those appeals to hang in the balance until Monday, when Mr. Walsh sustained them and dashed to the ground the hopes of Mr. McMullen's friends who wished to see all the appeals against them thrown out therefor. The result of the entire work of revision leaves the voting strength of the two parties in this place practically unchanged, a fact which many may doubt, but which a carefully study of the list will reveal. —Mt. Forest Representative.

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

Keep the Works in good order.

NORMAN, ONT., January 15, 1891.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time piece; full and delicate are many of its works. So tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference in perceptible in its time-keeping, but week year; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes a serious ailment. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system from impurity, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours faithfully,
H. F. ARNELL.

ARAGANOUS PORT, N.S., Jan. 19, '91.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—For many years, I have been a true believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills," not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an actual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I always take with me a supply of your Pills, and the whole family including myself, grievously sick with diphtheria Mother was moved to these earnest and interested expressions by a firm belief that she knows several cases saved by the use of onions in diphtheria. In these cases raw onions were placed in a bandage and beaten into a pulp the cotton containing onions, juice and all, being then bound about the throat and well over the ears Renewals may be made as often as the mass becomes dry. In the cases noticed the result was almost magical; deadly pain yielding in short time to sleepy comfort We think this remedy might have a wide enough trial to fully test its usefulness

Court for the revision of the Dominion voters list for Mt Forest was held in the council chamber by Revising Officer Walsh on Wednesday of last week. The sitting lasted from 1 p m till midnight and afforded interesting and at times amusing entertainment for the large crowd of spectators present. Some misunderstanding as to the authority upon which the signature of Mr. James Gardiner was used on the Conservative appeals caused the fate of those appeals to hang in the balance until Monday, when Mr. Walsh sustained them and dashed to the ground the hopes of Mr. McMullen's friends who wished to see all the appeals against them thrown out therefor. The result of the entire work of revision leaves the voting strength of the two parties in this place practically unchanged, a fact which many may doubt, but which a carefully study of the list will reveal. —Mt. Forest Representative.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—This is to certify that I deal in Patent Medicines, including various kinds of Pills. I will say that the Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills there of all the others combined. These sales I find are still increasing. Yours, &c.

The Best of Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows denied salt for a period of seven one week they will yield from 1½ to 2½ per cent less milk and that of an inferior quality Such milk will on an average, turn sour in twenty four hours less than those same cows receiving salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal"

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analyzed 99 84-100 Pure Salt All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock fine and coarse, at

Newspaper Decisions

1. Any person or persons who take a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payments are made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intended fraud.

You are liable to have a cough at any time, and no other remedy is so effective as this world-renowned preparation. In household, with young children, it should be without it. Scores of lives are saved every year by its timely use.

Amanda B. Jenner, Northampton, Mass., writes: "Common gratitude impels me to acknowledge the great benefits I have derived for my children from the use of Ayer's most excellent Cherry Pectoral. I had lost two dear children from croup and consumption, and had the greatest fear of losing my only remaining daughter and son, as they were delicate. Happily, I find that by giving them Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, on the first symptoms of throat or lung trouble, they are relieved from danger, and are becoming robust, healthy children."

"In the winter of 1888 I took a bad cold which, in spite of every known remedy, grew worse, so that the family physician considered me incurable, supposing me to be in consumption. As a last resort I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, in a short time, the cure was complete. Since then I have never been without this medicine. I am fifty years of age, weigh over 180 pounds, and attribute my good health to the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."—G. W. Yonker, Salem, N. J.

"Last winter I contracted a severe cold, which by repeated exposure, became quite obstinate. I was much troubled with hoarseness and bronchial irritation. After trying various medicines, without relief, I at last purchased a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. On taking this medicine, my cough ceased almost immediately, and I have been well ever since."—Rev. Thos. B. Russell, Secretary Boston Conference and P. E. of the Greenville District, M. E. C., Jonesboro, Tenn.

—OR— TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"Who would have thought to find you here?" exclaimed Chadwick, after the first salutations were over. "I should not have given you credit for so much sense. I have news for you. My aunt Gunning is coming to Paris."

"Then she'll interpret your uncle's sense into French, now," said Damerel.

"And, doubtless, in a week she'll persuade him he speaks the language beautifully."

"What an invaluable wife Mrs. Thomas must be," observed Herbert Langley. "I wish I could find such a one. Apropos to that, Flo, I consider you have treated me shabbily. You must know, Trevanes, my sister had picked up a sort of paragon in the shape of a companion or governess, and she filled fulsome pages of her letters with descriptive of her perfections and loveliness; and when I came home from Gib—Gibraltar, you know—expressly to see her, lo! she was flown! And not one word will Flo say about her, except that she still considers her a kind of angel."

Florian and Vivian Damerel exchanged glances during this speech, and then both involuntarily looked at Sir Hilton.

"Well! this is really too bad!" exclaimed Herbert Langley. "This piece of perfection is not only a mystery in herself, but it seems she makes mysteries in others. Here are Florian and Damerel exchanging in looks a romance in three volumes between them, and then they positively pass it on to you, Trevanes!"

"To me!" said Sir Hilton. "I think not Langley; what can I have to do with paragon of beauty? Will you tell me, Miss Langley?"

To his great surprise Florian changed color visibly at this question, and seemed quite unable to answer it.

"Ask Damerel," said Lieutenant Chadwick. "I see, by his looks, he knows all about it."

"I! How should I know?" stammered Damerel.

"Because you know everything my dear fellow," replied Chadwick. "You are a perfect pointer for sticking your nose into people's affairs."

"But there can be no mystery here," said Sir Hilton, who observed Florian much disturbed. "Mysterious people are usually disagreeable, and a friend of Miss Langley's could scarcely be that."

"Oh, but there is a mystery, though," persisted Herbert Langley; "and whether my sister keeps it up for the sake of provoking my curiosity, or whether she hides her paragon, lest I should fall in love with her, I can't say. Now Flo, I warn you, I'll find Miss Vansittart, if she is on the surface of the earth."

"Vansittart?" cried Chadwick. "I am sure I have heard that name somewhere. Oh, ah—yes. I remember. I heard Damerel ask at the police office at Dublin if they had found Miss Vansittart."

"Is that one of your jokes, Chadwick?" asked Herbert Langley, in a voice by no means pleasant. "Because, you see, it is scarcely possible that any friend of my sister's could be inquired for at a police office."

Florian was pale as death, but she bid her face with a book, and looked steadily at her brother.

"I asked at the police office for Miss Fan a setter I had lost," replied Vivian "and hearing 'Fan' and 'setter,' Chadwick, with a scratch of genius I should hardly give him credit for, has cleverly changed the words to Vansittart."

"Surely Florian will owe me some little gratitude for this invention," thought Damerel, as he told his adroit fib with an unmoved countenance. But he was mistaken there, Florian thought only of his persecution of Opal, and the fact, which now oozed out, of his inquiries at Dublin, filled her with resentment. She took advantage of the laugh which followed Damerel's speech, to rise and leave the room.

"Ah! you always put your sins on my back," returned Chadwick. "Of course it was me—Miss Vansittart you inquired for, but neither was it a setter. Was it the fair lady after whom you rushed, when you left your wife and your luggage in my charge? She was the Miss Fan in question, I suspect."

"Tell us that story, Chadwick," said Herbert Langley, eagerly.

Unutterly unable to stop him, Damerel sat silent, and listened in vexation to a ludicrous account of his excitement at the sight of a pretty face, and his hurried departure from the train.

"And the best of it is," continued Chadwick, "he threats a police gazette, or something of the sort, into my hand, and pretends the beautiful little creature he runs after is some dreadful woman, who had been menacing her grandmother—he, her rival—down at some outlandish place in Cornwall——"

Here Chadwick came to a sudden and blank stop, as he caught sight of the face around him. Vivian Damerel and Sir Hilton were both deadly pale, while Herbert Langley flushed to a pallid red. Then, and not till then, did it occur to the unfortunate lieutenant's memory, that the tragical event to which he referred had occurred in the Trevanes family.

"I beg your pardon, Sir Hilton," he stammered. "I really had forgotten. 'Pon my honor, I'm sorry——"

"Make your apologies to Sir Hilton another time broke in Herbert Langley, impetuously; "but explain to me at once the meaning of all this. The place you have described, with the bridge, the river, the house-tress, is my mother's place. Was it on her lawn Mr. Damerel saw a woman standing for whom antecedents he referred you to a police gazette? Was it in the compass gossip of my sister he found her?"

"'Pon my word, you know—on my life! I declare I really don't know any thing about it," said poor Chadwick, helplessly. "I only meant a little chaff, you know, really now, nothing more."

"Then, Mr Damerel, I appeal to you," said Herbert. "This matter cannot rest here; the honor of my sister and mother is concerned in it now, and I fully intend to know the truth." Sir Hilton, I am grieved to refer to an event painful to you in your presence, but you will perceive the necessity of too case obliges me. Now, Mr. Damerel, whom did you believe you saw standing by my sister's side on the lawn at Langley?"

Damerel perceived that no falsehood, no subterfuge would avail now, and the truth wound be the best policy.

"I am glad you have put the question in the way you have, Langley," said he, "because I can answer it without painting you or myself. Mine was, indeed, but a glimpse. I imagined I saw Olive Varcoe on the lawn at Langley—the girl who, justly, or unjustly, is suspected of having caused the death of Eleanor Maristowe. As to whom I really did see there, allow me to refer you to Mrs. Langley."

There was a moment's dead silence. In pity to Sir Hilton whose emotion, by some subtle magnetism, conveyed itself to each heart there, no eye was lifted to his face, and it was evidently with agitation that Herbert Langley spoke again.

"That person you saw must have been Miss Vansittart," he said, uneasily. "Did you tell me why and wherefore you mistook her for Olive Varcoe?"

Vivian Damerel was silent, but he glanced involuntarily at Sir Hilton, and their eyes met. In that glance Sir Hilton knew that Opal Vansittart and Olive Varcoe were one.

"Mr. Damerel, I demand an answer!" exclaimed young Langley. "I demand it as a right. Do you suppose I am going to sit tamely here, and hear my mother and sister accused of harboring an assassin?"

"No one dreams of such an accusation," said Damerel. "I give you my reason candidly. It was a chance likeness—a wonderful likeness if you will—but nothing more."

"And when you saw that Miss Vansittart was not Olive Varcoe, I trust, Mr. Damerel, you must have felt some compunction for the very great pain you must have caused her and my mother, by your vague, and I must say, impertinent suspicion?"

This was Florian's brother speaking, and Damerel, though he winced, was gentle still.

"I grieve to say, I have never had the opportunity of seeing Miss Vansittart again, and ascertaining that she was not Olive Varcoe," he replied.

Herbert Langley stared hard at the speaker, and then, in that quiet voice, which so often hides intense passion, he said, "You will oblige me with a fuller explanation, Mr. Damerel. I do not understand you. Sir Hilton, had you not better leave us? Perhaps regard for your feelings is chaining Mr. Damerel's tongue?"

"Speak, Damerel," said Sir Hilton; "I can bear it."

"Why do you ask me for an explanation, Langley?" exclaimed Vivian; angry at last. "Surely it would be better first to hear what Mrs Langley has to say. I can only say that I saw Miss Vansittart on the lawn, and recognized—I mean, imagined her to be Olive Varcoe. I called to the morning on Mrs. Langley with her friend, Mr. Lyndor, but unfortunately the young lady had already departed."

"Do you mean to say she had fled?" demanded Herbert.

"You force it from me," said Damerel. "Yes, I fear she had."

"Great Heaven!" exclaimed Herbert Langley. "Am I to hear this? Did you call at Langley to arrest this girl?"

"Not exactly," was the reply. "I called to warn your mother; believing her to be deceived by this person, and being anxious to save her pain and annoyance—"

"Say no more," resumed the young man. "I have no right to quarrel with you for doing what you thought your duty. But you must pardon in what course this wild supposition of yours, regarding the identity of Opal Vansittart with Olive Varcoe turns out. It obliges me to leave no effort untried to find this guilty woman, and prove to you, and the whole world, that she was not the accomplice for four months. And so help me, Heaven! I will find Olive Varcoe before this day month, and give her up to justice."

Pale, bowed down with shame and anguish, Sir Hilton heard this passionate oath in silence. He was powerless to shield Olive now; she had gone her own way, and no word, no effort, no effort of his would save her a single pang.

In the lull that followed upon young Langley's hot and hasty words, the unfortunate Mr. Chadwick approached with a propitiatory idea.

"I am sure I am deuced sorry I ever branched such a deuced uncomfortable subject," said he; "in fact, deuced thing altogether; but if you would allow me to suggest an idea. Look here. Miss Vansittart—of course highly respectable, and all that sort of thing. Well, write to her, and make her show up—I mean, come over to Paris on a visit to Miss Langley; then everybody sees her, and knows she's herself, and not that other unpleasant person. That finishes the thing at once, don't you see? And Miss Vansittart, I take it, will be a much more easy lady to find, than one who don't want to be found. In fact, I have no doubt Miss Langley has got her governess's address somewhere. So I should recommend you to follow that scent first, old fellow, if you'll allow me to give advice."

The despairing catch even at straws, and this was a straw which gave a little more hope, a little more breathing time to the unhappy girl whose fleeing foot steps Sir Hilton so often followed in spirit. Hence he said, with an effort, "Allow me to give you the same counsel, Mr Langley. The production of Miss Vansittart would at once silence all slander, if any arose."

"Yes, certainly," returned Herbert slightly embarrassed, "and if I can find her without distressing my mother and sister, I decidedly will. Not that I doubt in the least," he added, haughtily, "that they can give me every particular respecting Miss Vansittart."

"Permit me to advise that you consult your mother before speaking to your sister," said Sir Hilton, who remembered Mrs. Langley's first interview with him, and her request not to mention Olive. He understood her reason now, and he understood also that strange shadowy likeness in Florian, which had so often startled him.

"Of course, of course," returned Herbert Langley, impatiently. "And I shall hope, Mr. Damerel, to have the pleasure of introducing Miss Vansittart to you, and convincing you of your blunder."

"No one will be better pleased than I, to be so convinced," murmured Damerel.

"As to Miss Vansittart's sudden departure from Langley," continued Herbert, "I have not the least doubt my mother can explain it satisfactorily, although she may not have chosen to do so at the time to you, Mr. Damerel."

The young man's increasing coldness and haughtiness tried Vivian sorely. He foresaw the shadow of a coming quarrel, and fearing, dreading to lose the privilege of seeing Florian, he strove to avert it.

"Langley," said he, "I think you take to hard a tone with me. Surely you must perceive this what I did in this affair was done kindly. I see, or I believe I see a guilty woman imposing on two helpless ladies, and I act—as any other man of honor would have done—I call on a friend of theirs, and inform him of the deceit. Meanwhile the girl—who had twice seen me pass by in the train—escapes. If the pretence on which she had entered your mother's house was not false, her name not false, herself not false, why did she take flight? Langley, your sister's honor is as dear to me as to you, and for her sake I shall grieve to see you stir in this affair. I have not yet presumed to offer you my counsel; but now I say—do nothing, that is your best course."

"It might be, sir, if Opal Vansittar were Olive Varcoe," replied Herbert; "but I repeat, that she is not; and I will prove it to you before you are a week older. And we had better not meet again, Mr. Damerel until I can convince you that my sister's friend is a lady worthy of all respect. Have I not heard my sister say a hundred times that Opal Vansittart was a noble and beautiful girl? I will take no one's counsel in this matter but my own. By the living Truth above us, I will find both these girls! I will bring one here as our honored guest, and I will lodge the other in a Cornish jail. Until then, Mr. Damerel, I bid you good day."

"As you will," said Vivian Damerel, sorrowfully.

And there they parted, poor Chadwick, as he quitted the apartment, murmuring confusedly a fervent apology, which seemed to consist only of the words "deuce" and "chaff."

Sir Hilton lingered a moment more with Florian's angry brother, to whom he seemed about to say something; but checking himself, shook hands abruptly, and hurried away.

CURED AGAINST HIS WILL.

AFTER TEN YEARS OF SUFFERING A HAMILTON MAN IS RESTORED TO HEALTH.

A Case Rivalling the Marvellous Cure of John Marshall.

Hamilton Times, Saturday, Oct. 24th.

"A good name is more to be desired than great riches." The truth of this scripture quotation is proven every day. Once a person on a firm or an institution achieves a good name its road to success is short and sure, but to achieve a good name is quite a different thing. Not many months ago the Times brought to light one of the most marvellous cures that has ever been effected. Mr John Marshall, after being for years afflicted with locomotor ataxy, supposed to be incurable, and after having been paid $1,000 from the Royal Templars as being totally disabled for life, was permanently cured by the use of Dr Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Marshall may be seen on the streets any day, a strong, hearty man, with no trace of his old trouble. The case gave Pink Pills a name throughout the length and breadth of the land, and vastly increased sales of the remedy followed. The results are being seen on all sides now in wonderful cures wrought.

The Times came across two yesterday. At No 186 York street Mr. W. J. Clark who is employed in Messrs. John Calder & Co.'s clothing manufactory, was seen at his residence and was pleased with the opportunity of saying a good word for the remedy that had put him in a position to enjoy life, after ten years of affliction. Mr. Clark is a young man of intelligence, and told the story of his cure in an interesting manner. "Ten years ago," he said, "I got a very severe cold, which settled in the small of my back and has ever since, up to a short time ago, defied all the remedies I could hear of and the skill of many doctors. At times I was so bad that I could not work and was seldom free from pain, whether standing, sitting, walking or lying. The only thing that gave me relief was an hour I got from an hypnotist. For two weeks it relieved me and then the pains returned. I got more herbs, but whether they were the same or not, or whether they simply ceased to operate I can't say, but I got no more relief from herbs. Turpentine applied on hot cloths and taken internally gave me relief for a little while, but I gave that up too. Several doctors examined me and said, 'Oh, it's nothing!' They gave me medicines which they said would make it all right, but which didn't. After almost ten years of doctoring I came to the conclusion I would never be cured, and tried to resign myself to my lot. Some months ago I went into the country to see my father. He said to me, 'Will, I have something here I want you to take a box of Pink Pills!' I replied to him: 'You might as well throw them out the door.' 'Take them for my sake,' Will, he said, and I said I would do anything for him, though I had no faith in them.—'They are not worth that,' I said snapping my finger. I took the box and really felt better. They gave me an appetite, at any rate, and lessened the pain. So I resolved to continue them. After using three boxes I stopped. That is over three weeks ago, and I am now well and strong. The pain is all gone and I do my work like a new man. I am now working overtime until 10 o'clock, and stand it well. I have gained in weight and feel better every way. It was no case of faith cure with me, for I had no faith in the pills at all. My mate at work, at my advice, took Pink Pills to build up the system, and says he is much better; he certainly looks it."

"Yes," remarked Mr Clark as the Times reporter was withdrawing, "you may use my name, and if you see any one who has any doubts as to the curing properties of Dr Williams' Pink Pills just send him to me."

Another Case.

Mr. James Wright, No. 129½ Bay street north, is another of the great army of witnesses. For a year he suffered from diabetes, but was restored to health under the attention of Dr. Anderson. The disease, however, left behind it a fearful state of nervousness, debility, lack of appetite, sleeplessness and ringing noises in the ears and head, which at times drove Mr. Wright frantic. From weighing 180 pounds he came down to 118. He was well acquainted with Mr. John Marshall and knew of his trouble. Hearing of his cure he decided to try Dr Williams' Pink Pills and did so in June last. After taking one box, all these troubles began to vanish and eleven boxes completely cured him, appetite returned and sweet sleep was no longer a stranger to him. In two months he recovered eighteen pounds; this lost flesh and health gaining. Mr. Wright is confident that a remedy will have the same effect upon any one who is afflicted as he was, if given a fair trial.

In connection with the wonderful cures resulting from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, it must be gratifying to Canadians to know that they are the discovery of a Canadian doctor, a graduate of McGill College and post-graduate of Edinburgh University. Hitherto the great discoveries in medicine have come to us from abroad, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have conquered diseases hitherto declared by the works of specialists as incurable, and have shed a new lustre on Canadian medical science. What is claimed for Dr Williams' Pink Pills is that they are an unfailing blood builder and nerve tonic, supplying the wants incident to over-work, mental worry, or excesses of whatever nature. They stimulate the system, build anew the blood, and restore shattered nerves, removing the fruitful causes of premature decay and insanity. They are not a specific for the ills peculiar to women, such as suppression, bearing down pains, displacements, alternations, etc. They are a certain remedy for headaches, dimness of vision, palpitation, shortness of breath, and by restoring the blood to a healthy condition, bring back strength and the glow of health, where had been pale and sallow cheeks and broken down constitutions. That these claims are not exaggerated is borne out by the remarkable cures here cited, and by the testimonials from all parts of Canada in the possession of the proprietors.

One thing in connection with the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the comparatively light cost of treatment. They are sold in boxes (never in bulk or by the hundred) at 50 cents a box, and may be had of all dealers or direct by mail, postpaid, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Morristown, N. Y.

At noon the other day, some person entered the Rodney post-office, where Mr. A. Humphrey was getting up his mail, and picked the lock of the door which gave admittance into the private office, and took therefrom a registered letter containing a small amount of money, also a pocket book belonging to Miss L. Humphrey, which contained about $2 50 in money.

"One touch of Nature makes the whole world kin." Diseases common to the race compel the search for a common remedy. It is found in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the reputation of which is world-wide, having largely superseded every other blood medicine in use.

If cooking schools are necessary, why are not washing, scrubbing, sewing, sweeping, dusting and tending on cole proper? A good housekeeper should be up on all these things. And then there is speaking! The future woman should be able to produce her offspring according to the latest scientific discoveries.

SHELBURNE.

(Given Prom and Economist.)

THE REVIVING BARRISTER.—Ezra Grey's Revising Barrister Evans, of Stratford, has been holding court in this neighborhood. On Saturday last he disposed of a number of appeals in Shelburne. The proceedings were not of very great interest.

THE PEDLAR FINED.—Last Friday evening, before Magistrates Graham and Jelly, Geo. S. Hall appeared on the charge of violating the transient traders' by-law. Constable Brandage was the informant. Hall was fined $10 and costs—in all $15 45. He paid under protest, and says he will appeal.

SKIPPED OUT.—William Reid, a farmer in Melancthon, near Augustus, has skipped out, leaving a few creditors to mourn his departure. Reid was living on a rented farm and during the past summer purchased a self-binder and mower. These he left behind him. On Tuesday night of last week he started for Collingwood and is supposed to have shipped his goods on the "Atlantic" bound for some northern port. Reid formerly resided in Nottawasaga. The latest news received is that Reid was captured on reaching Sault Ste. Marie on Tuesday. Messrs. John Hamilton and Wm. McCutcheon leave for the Soo to-day in connection with the matter.

GAME IS PLENTIFUL.—Thursday last was the beginning of the deer-hunting season. We understand that three were shot that day a few miles west of Shelburne. Jas. Hatten shot a fine doe a short distance south of the townline in Amaranth. It was brought to town and purchased by E. Berwick & Co. A large buck, secured by Constable Markle and Mr. Williams of Riverview, was also brought to town Saturday morning and sold to E. Berwick & Co. The same parties shot a yearling buck the same day. Deer are said to be quite plentiful along the Grand River this year. Hunting with dogs should be stopped, however. Partridges and rabbits are being bagged in large numbers, while several bears are reported to be not very far away—the foot track of which is said to measure six inches across, and one on Mr. Joseph Irwin's farm in Amaranth.

THE TRADE OUTLOOK.

The trade outlook seems bright, but to those burdened with bad blood, stomach or liver troubles, etc., the outlook is blue. This may be mystified and humiliating health restored by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, the most effective, prompt and satisfactory medicine for all derangements of the stomach, liver, bowels and blood.

EXCHANGE ECHOES.

A remarkable salt lake has been discovered in the Hawaiian Islands.

Jno. McPhee of Erin township had his back badly injured in a runaway accident at Hillsburg one day last week.

The New York police have discovered the head quarters of green goods operators in that city and have arrested the principals.

The protest against the return of Mr. Watson, the Liberal member for Marquette, Man., will be heard on the 9th prox.

The three youngest children of John Cummings, a Simcoe farmer, were burnt to death yesterday, while his wife was rescued with difficulty from the flames.

Ottawa University defeated McGill 21 to 0 in a Rugby football match on Saturday. S. M. J. Woods, the English cricketer, played for McGill.

Two trains of freight cars collided on the C. P. R. track at London on Saturday night and considerable damage was done to live stock.

Three children of John Cummings, a farmer near Penetang, were burnt to death Sunday. Their mother may die from injuries received trying to save her little ones.

A horse belonging to Mr. Wm. Grose, of the 10th concession of Peel, fell into a well about 35 feet deep with several feet of water in it. The animal was soon extricated from its perilous condition, nothing the worse.

Steam whaling vessels have never yet been employed in the South Pacific. It now begins to be noised about that whales in that region are not so nearly extinct as they were reported to be, and that there is room for the profitable employment of steam whalers. A whaling bark which left Tasmania on August 17th captured in two days two large bank whales, which yielded ambergris valued at $20,000.

The Czar of Russia.

The Czar of Russia probably has his own troubles as well as his commoner mortals. Where we have the advantage in such troubles as dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, bad blood and the like is in being able to procure easily a perfect remedy in Burdock Blood Bitters, nature's grand restorative tonic and purifier.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, the great Methodist minister attending the Ecumenical Conference at Washington, has a thorough appreciation of the press. Speaking of journalism he said: "Treat the newspapers well, I owe much of my success to them. I tell my ushers to treat a duke with courtesy, but a reporter with revverence, for a reporter nowadays is a person of much more consequence."

On Thursday evening, during the temporary absence of his wife, Valentine Aleiderts, a wagonmaker living at Gadshill, near Stratford, made his way to a workshop near his house, and after locking the door and blocking up the window cut his throat from ear to ear with a razor, without, however, severing the jugular vein. No cause is known other than that of temporary insanity, induced by recent ill health, as he has been successful in business and has a wife and seven children, with whom he has always lived happily. He is about 37 years of age.

An old man, who judging by his appearance, had not been indulging in the use of any great amount of soap and water, wandered into town on Saturday last. He visited Warbrick's hardware store and after paying the sum of two cents for a pound of whiting disappeared. In an hour or so he made his appearance with a few small bottles of a reddish colored compound which he was selling at fifteen cents a bottle and which he claimed was unequalled for burnishing copper, brass, tin, etc. Perhaps it was, but we are of the opinion that the parties who bought it at fifteen cents a bottle paid about fifty times as much as it was worth.—Belton Enterprise.

DEATH OF MR. J. S. FEAD

EXPIRED WHILE SITTING AT HIS DESK IN THE BANK YESTERDAY.

The saddest duty falling to the lot of a journal is to chronicle the death of a prominent citizen and personal friend. In the death of Mr. Fead we have no words to express our feeling of sadness in the loss to the country of so estimable a character and to ourselves of a personal friend.

Yesterday morning, to all appearances, Mr. Fead was in excellent health with as good a promise of long years as any other person in the town of a similiar age. But when the bell tolled the hour of one o'clock he was a corpse—dead from the effects of heart failure. In the morning he came to his banking institution before ten o'clock in his usual health and attended to business as usual until shortly before twelve o'clock, when he complained to Mr. Bailey of unusual and excruciating pain in the region of his heart. Mr. Bailey suggested that he should go for a physician, but the deceased said not, as he thought he would be better in a short time. Mr. Bailey then went out for some stimulents, and on his return Mr. Fead was sitting in a chair in his private office, and on taking some of the brandy seemed to revive and to be somewhat at ease. Mr. B. then went to the front office to transact some business and in a very few minutes he observed the deceased fall and in a moment all was over. Dr. Henry was sent for and immediately came, but his patient was past all aid, being then dead through heart failure.

The news was soon on the streets and spread from mouth to mouth until the the announcement had reached the whole town. In a few minutes hundreds who could not realize the report rushed to the office of deceased, all eager to learn the cause of the death of so estimable a citizen.

Friends were not wanting. One conveyed the sad news to his household, another procured the undertaker and another telegraphed the sad news to the bereaved brothers and friends. In a short time the remains were coffined and removed to his residence where they will remain until the funeral, the hour of which is not known at the time of writing, the friends desiring to await the arrival of his youngest brother from Omaha, Neb., which may not be before Saturday. However, the public will be apprised in due season. Our heart is too full to say more in this issue, rather than to subjoin a brief biography of deceased, such as we have in so short a space a time been able to gather from one of the old settlers of the town, people who knew deceased in his youth and in his manhood, and who, of one accord spoke of him in the most kindly manner.

The deceased was born in Brampton years ago, his father, the late William Fead, was then engaged in business as a general merchant in partnership with the late Thomas Whitehead. About the year 1852 the family moved to this town, and for some years carried on the business of saw millers and wagon makers, the deceased being in partnership with his father for several years—even before he became of age. On the death of the head of the firm the business was closed and the affairs of the firm wound up by the deceased. In the year 1862 the deceased determined to study law, and indentured himself to M. McCarthy, now judge of the county court. After remaining with Judge McCarthy for some time he had his articles assigned to Mr. Pattullo, our present police magistrate, with whom he completed his studies. On being called to the bar he commenced the practice of law in Erin village, succeeding to the business of Frank E. Marcon, at present local registrar at Sarnia. While in Erin the deceased enlisted a volunteer company, of which he was captain, holding the position until after he moved from the village, he carrying on all parades the sword used by Lieutenant McEachern at the time he was killed at the battle of Ridgeway with the Fenians, and which was a present to the then new Captain on the day he received his commission. We are told that many offers have been held out to Capt Fead to induce him to deliver the sword to the Queen's Own, of which the gallant lieutenant was a distinguished officer but the deceased prized the sword more than any other of his possessions, and held it in no wise, part with it. After residing in Erin for about three years, he removed to Orangeville, and opened up a office, which he successfully carried on in his own name for several years. Subsequently he formed a partnership with Mr Myers, our present county treasurer, under the style of Fead & Myers. After building an extensive and lucrative business he abandoned the arrangement with Mr. Myers, who has since maintained the prestage of the old firm.

The deceased never had any real taste for the law, and after transferring his interest in the firm to Mr. Myers, naturally drifted into private banking, opening an office next door to the Queen's hotel for a year or two he was alone, but afterwards was joined by Mr MacAdam, and together they remained for upwards of three years, when a dissolution was effected, Mr. MacAdam returning to his old business of grocer, and deceased continuing in his own name (with Mr. T. Bailey as manager) until his death.

In 1875 Mr. Fead was without opposition elected to the office of mayor of the town and the following year he was returned by acclamation for the same high office when he voluntarily retired and for several years after was town clerk, which office he resigned several years ago. Mr. Fead was, at the time of his death, president of the Orangeville Building & Loan association. His death will be severely felt by his co directors and the general shareholders.

As a citizen, it may be said that he was identified with the best interest of the town and was always forward in the march of progress. In all that was calculated to promote the interest of the town his influence and support, financially and otherwise, could be counted upon. He was never behind and to him and others still alive the present generation owes much; more than is generally known, and more than will ever be paid or even acknowledged.

The deceased was an uncompromising Reformer, and but for his unobtrusive nature would, no doubt, have been offered a nomination in more than one riding, but he relished home life and had no desire to embark upon the turbulent sea of party politics. Mr. Fead all his life, as was all his forefathers, was an ardent adherent of the Presbyterian church and his timely contribution could always be depended upon, his house was always open to the friends and many a probationer found an agreeable lodging in his pleasant and magnificent home.

The deceased never married—he leaves three brothers, William, druggist of Woodville, Simon of Cannington, and John W. of Omaha, Nebraska.

It is known that the deceased possessed much wealth, estimated by some at $50000, and by others at double that figure.

By the death of Mr. Fead the country has lost a capable, wise and straightforward business man, the town a valued and honorable citizen, and his family an affectionate and generous brother.

Without disposure was made of his wealth, or whether he made a will or not, is not known at the time of writing.

CRUSHED TO DEATH!

A Monster Stone Rolls on Samuel Leeson, of Erin Township, and Squeezes the Life out Him—He was to leave for British Columbia on Tuesday, but Took a Longer Journey four days before.

On Saturday morning last Samuel Leeson, who resided with his brother on the town-line between Erin and Garafraxa townships, about four miles from Alton, met with a horrible death. Friday afternoon he made an excavation in a field for the purpose of burying an immense stone, but he did not complete the work that night and left it over until the fatal Saturday morning. At 7 o'clock he and his brother John left the house, the latter driving a short distance down the road while the former went to finish burying the stone. About 7.30 John returned and looking over where he supposed his brother was working could not discover any earth coming out of the hole. Upon closer examination he saw that the rock was in the hole, and Samuel's coat and hat were lying on the ground near by. The gravest fears now seized Mr. Leeson, and hurrying to the spot he was horrified to find the wedged in between the great rock and the side of the pit. Poor Leeson was mutilated in a shocking manner, his chest having squeezed to one quarter its normal size and his intestines being crushed out of his stomach. It is supposed the unfortunate man attempted to shove the stone into the excavation, but not succeeding he got into the hole for the purpose of removing some more earth, when the rock rolled in upon him and

INSTANTLY CRUSHED HIS LIFE OUT.

He must have seen the stone coming, for the position in which the body was found indicates that he made a terrible though unsuccessful effort to escape.

Deceased was a brother of Mr. Magnash Leeson of this town and was 62 years of age. Mr. Leeson resided in Erin township for the past forty five years, and twenty years ago he conducted an hotel at Hillsburg. Mr. L. and his daughter intended to leave on Tuesday for a visit to British Columbia and he was anxious to finish the work before that day. But fate had decreed that he should take a longer journey than any this world provides, and instead of going across the continent he was summoned over Jordan to meet his Creator face to face. It is almost unnecessary to remark that the tragic affair cast a gloom over the community, and the relations of the dead man have the heartfelt sympathy of everybody. Mr. Leeson leaves behind a family of one son and two daughters, his wife having died about two decades ago. The remains, which were interred in the cemetery at Price's Corners on Monday, were followed to the tomb by a large and sympathetic concourse of people.

WHIP TROW'S SEAT GOES.

Declared to have been Guilty of Attempted Bribery by Agents.

STRATFORD, Oct. 30.—Before Justices Rose and McMahon yesterday the South Perth election trial was concluded. It resulted in the unseating of James Trow, M. P. for the division, and head Liberal whip. None of the charges were proved until an alleged offer of money by James Trow, jr., son of the respondent, to one Nicholas Schillenberger of Fullerton was watched, Schillenberger swore that young Trow offered him money.

On the reopening of the court Justice Rose stated that he and Justice McMahon held that the Schillenberger charge was proved. Counsel consulted and finally agreed to let the personal charge drop on condition that the respondent pay costs. The election was therefore declared void.

SHOT HIMSELF DEAD.

Melancholy Accident in the Woods Near Riverview on Friday.

CORBETTON, Oct. 31.—A very sad accident occurred last evening about three miles from here near the village of Riverview, by which a young man named James Markle lost his life through the accidental discharge of his gun. As near as can be ascertained three young men, one of whom was young Markle, got on the track of a deer, and decided to separate, each going in a different direction. Not more than one hour had elapsed when the other young men heard the report of a gun. It being late, they decided to return home. Not being able to come across their companion, they commenced shouting and discharging their guns to attract his attention, but received no response. Shortly afterward they came upon the young man and were horror stricken to find his lifeless body lying beside a log with three large buckshot wounds in his arm and two in his head. It is surmised that he was attempting to go over the log when the gun became accidentally discharged. Death is supposed to have been instantaneous. The mother is prostrated with grief.

The Detroit Football Club defeated the Toronto Scots 5 to 0 in Saturday's match at Detroit.

HIT ON THE HEAD!

ANOTHER TRAGEDY IN MONO!

A Fractured Skull Causes the Death of J. A. Montgomery.

WM. SCHINNIMAN AND HIS SON ARRESTED.

THE FATHER RELEASED ON BAIL; BUT THE SON IS STILL BEHIND THE BARS.

A case that somewhat resembles the Glen Cross tragedy has loomed up in the vicinity of Hockley, and the good people of Mono have something interesting to talk about these days. The chief actors concerned in the fatal drama are the two William Shinnimans, senior and junior, both residents of Mono, and John Appleton Montgomery, who resides at Grand Valley. It appears that old man Schinniman and Montgomery had a dispute in Galbraith's hotel at Hockley, on Saturday, October 17, and while they were talking young Shinniman, who is 21 years of age, went out to get the horses for the purpose of going home. The senior Shinniman had his arm in a sling at the time, and Montgomery insisted on trading horses. Shinniman would not consent to exchange animals, when, it is said, Montgomery attacked the old man. Young Shinniman came to the help of his father, but was attacked and had to beat a hasty retreat. It is said Montgomery followed the boy for some distance when the latter turned around and threw a small stone at his pursuer. The missile hit Montgomery on the head, but no attention was paid to it at the time. At the time of the fracas Montgomery was moving his family from Adjala to Grand Valley. The man who was hit began to feel the effects of the blow several days afterwards, and a doctor was called in. He discovered that Montgomery's skull was fractured, and did everything possible to save the man's life, but to no purpose, Montgomery dying at an early hour Tuesday morning. In the meantime the two Shinnimans, father and son, had been arrested and were committed to the Orangeville jail on Friday to await the result of Montgomery's injuries. The elder Shinniman was released on bail on Monday, but his son still occupies a cell at the "castle."

We understand an inquest was held at Grand Valley yesterday, but at the hour of going to press we have not received any particulars.

KILLED BY A KICK!

A Horse Kicks Wm. Laughlin in the Stomach and He Dies Instantly.

Between 7 and 8 o'clock on Saturday evening last William Laughlin, a well-known farmer who resided near Cataract, was kicked on the stomach by a horse, and when those who witnessed the accident arrived at the spot they found Laughlin a corpse. The horse was standing in its stable, and Mr. Laughlin was in the act of removing the harness when the vicious animal made the fatal kick. Deceased was about 50 years of age and unmarried, his sister having kept house for him. Mr. Laughlin had just returned from Credit Forks, where he had been making some purchases, and the sad affair is greatly deplored around there.

AN ORANGEVILLE MAN'S DEATH.

His Lifeless Body Found in False Creek—Was He Murdered?

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 3.—The body of W. P. West, city poundkeeper, was found lying on the mud of the tidal flats, on False Creek, yesterday morning. The police set to work to find, if possible, the cause of the death. There were some things observable about the body which would lead one to suspect that death may not have been wholly accidental. There was less foam at the mouth than there is usually in a case of drowning. Blood was visible behind the left ear, and upon feeling the head several lumps were found, one near the crown being especially large. West was also known to be a fairly good swimmer, and even at high tide there was scarcely more than five feet of water in the place where he was found.

Sergeant Haywood spent a busy day and was finally rewarded by finding the only man who knew anything about West's death. This was William McCullough, a teamster, who boards at the Granville Hotel. McCullough was arrested as a material witness.

There are two or three incidents in West's life which give grounds for suspicion of foul play. The bruises on his head were swollen, and were so placed as not likely to be struck where he fell off the wharf, and frequently during his sleep he is said to have muttered something about people who would do him up if they caught him out alone. McCullough and West had gone to school together near Orangeville, Ont.

The dead man mentioned in the above dispatch at one time was a resident of Alton, and is well known to the people of that part of the country. William McCullough, the man arrested as a witness, is well known in and around this town. Several years ago he conducted a livery on Mill street, and was well off. Two or three years ago he went to Vancouver and has been there ever since. His wife and young son still reside in Orangeville.

VANATTAR.

THE DOG LIKED LAMB.—Several days ago Mr. W. H. Hunter had a lamb worried to death by a dog, but Mr. H. could not get a glimpse of the destructive canine. Finally he set a wolf-trap, but on two different nights the dog returned and got the bait from the trap. Mr. Dog must have got careless, for on Sunday night of last week he returned again and got caught. The animal was kept for two days and nobody claimed it. After a while it was found the animal belonged to the "Queen," but she denied the ownership and Mr. Hunter had the mutton-liking shot.

A TURKEY WITH A BELL.—On Tuesday of last week Harry Walker was ploughing with his famous team of bloods and a sulky plow, when the bloods ran away and smashed the plow considerably. The accident was caused in a singular way. Mrs. R. Cooper has a great flock of turkeys and she tied a bell around the leader's neck. The big turkey jumped upon the fence, the bell rang out, the bloods got frightened and ran away, and the man who repaired the bursted-up plow got $10.

The consciousness of having a remedy at hand for croup, pneumonia, sore throat, and sudden colds, is very comforting to a parent. With a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, one feels, in such cases, a sense of security nothing else can give.

BURNED TO DEATH!

Terrible Fate of Mary Jane Hammond.

SHE SAT ON THE STOVE-HEARTH TO GET WARM

AND HER CLOTHES CAUGHT ON FIRE.

HER 8-YEAR-OLD BROTHER PROVES HIMSELF A LITTLE HERO.

One of the most shocking accidents that has ever taken place in the vicinity of Orangeville occurred at the residence of William Hammond, near Caledon lake and about two miles from town, shortly before 12 o'clock yesterday. Mary Jane, the 12-year old daughter of Mr. Hammond, and her 8 year old brother were the sole occupants of the house at the time the distressing accident took place, the parents being at Orangeville. It appears the girl was sitting on the hearth of the stove when her clothing caught fire and instantly she was

ENSHROUDED BY FLAMES

Quick as thought her little brother ran down to the spring and returned with a pail of water, which he dashed upon her blazing garments. The brave little fellow managed to extinguish the fire, but not before the unfortunate girl was horribly burned. He then ran to the school house a quarter of a mile away, and the school teacher summoned several neighbors. A messenger was dispatched to Orangeville for a surgeon, and Dr. T. H. Henry promptly responded to the call. The doctor found the burns to be much more serious than he supposed, and a glance was sufficient to tell him that the girl's hours were about number ed. The doctor describes the sight as most shocking, the poor girl's legs, arms, breast and back being burned in

A TERRIBLE MANNER.

The young sufferer lingered in terrible agony until 11 o'clock last night, when death kindly put an end to her awful sufferings.

PERSONAL.

Reeve Jelly of Shelburne was in town yesterday.

Ald. H. N. Young has removed to the Canadian "Soo."

Editor Mortimer of the Shelburne Free Press paid us a brief visit Wednesday morning.

Messrs. Thomas Reeburn of Walkerton and Robert Reeburn of Hanover were in town this week.

Mr. Harry Stewart of the Bank of Hamilton, Hamilton, is spending a few days with his parents in town.

Mrs. John Skelton of Mono, who has been in indifferent health for a number of years, is slightly improved.

Mr. Ed. Inglehart was in town last week. Mr. Inglehart has disposed of his photography business at Owen Sound.

Miss Moore, who has resided at the residence of Mr. W. R. C. Hewat for a number of years, died at Guelph yesterday.

Dr. Henry, sr., who has been confined to the house for the past several days owing to a severe cold, is able to be around again.

Mr. J. A. Leighton, son of Mr. James Leighton of this town, has been elected secretary of a newly formed Canadian club at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Miss Vandusen of the public school teaching staff, who was called to Owen Sound a couple of weeks ago owing to the serious illness of her mother, resumed her duties on Monday. Mrs. Vandusen died on Tuesday of last week.

Mr. Harry Culp, son of Mr. John Culp of the Prince of Wales road, Mono, left Monday morning for Toronto to take a course in the Ontario Veterinary College. Harry is an estimable young man and we wish him the greatest success in his studies.

CAMILLA.

LEG BROKEN.—On Sunday Master Willie Cooke, while getting into a wagon, fell and broke his leg. The little sufferer is doing nicely.

PASSED AWAY.—Mr. Andrew Cobean, harness maker, of Shelburne, who has been suffering from lung disease for some time past, died at his father's residence, Mono Mills, on Saturday of last week. The funeral took place on Tuesday and was largely attended. The deceased was a member of the L. O. L., and A. O. U. W., of which three lodges of the former and four lodges of the latter attended. A widow and small family survive him. Deceased was a brother of Mr. E. J. Cobean of Camilla.

COME ON, PINKERTON!—We hear no more inquires about who THE SUN'S Camilla correspondent is, and we have come to the conclusion that we have sickened them. They now realize that they need a Pinkerton detective. Whew!

GLENCE TO THE FORE.—It is said Glence has challenged Camilla to fight it out to the knife, the challenge being signed by Tom Marharg and Herb Christian. Glence put in a stipulation that only men and boys, no dogs or other animals, are to fight. This will considerably weaken us, but say nothing and keep your eye on the gun.

HURT AT FOOTBALL.—Last Friday evening while the H. S. boys were participating in a game of football Godfrey Campbell, son of Mr. Geo. Campbell, tripped and fell and a companion stumbled over him. A small bone in the young fellow's ankle was fractured, and he will be laid up for several weeks.

AN AFFLICTED TRAVELLER.—On Saturday evening a young girl, apparently about 17 years of age, boarded the G. T. R. train at the Union station, Toronto, for the purpose of coming to Orangeville. Shortly after leaving the city some of the passengers noticed that the young lady was ill, and it finally transpired that she was suffering from diphtheria in its worst form. Several of the less heartless travellers hauled Conductor Hassard over the coals for allowing the unfortunate girl to ride on the train, but the conductor was not aware of the girl's condition until they were some miles from the city. Other sympathetic passengers made a bed out of cushions and attended to the poor girl until Orangeville was reached. She was running worse all the time, and before her disembarkment her throat was so badly swollen that her tongue protruded from her mouth.

DEATH OF MR. FEAD

A PROMINENT CITIZEN PASSES AWAY FROM THIS TO THE GREAT BEYONDS YESTERDAY.

The saddest duty falling to the lot of a journal is to chronicle the death of a prominent citizen and personal friend. In the death of Mr. Fead we have no words to express our feeling of sadness in the loss to the country of so estimable a character and to ourselves of a personal friend.

Yesterday morning, to all appearances, Mr. Fead was in excellent health with as good a promise of long years as any other person in the town of a similiar age. But when the bell tolled the hour of one o'clock he was a corpse—dead from the effects of heart failure. In the morning he came to his banking institution before ten o'clock in his usual health and attended to business as usual until shortly before twelve o'clock, when he complained to Mr. Bailey of unusual and excruciating pain in the region of his heart. Mr. Bailey suggested that he should go for a physician, but the deceased said not, as he thought he would be better in a short time. Mr. Bailey then went out for some stimulants, and on his return Mr. Fead was sitting in a chair in his private office, and on taking some of the brandy seemed to revive and to be somewhat at ease. Mr. B. then went to the front office to transact some business and in a very few minutes he observed the deceased fall and in a moment all was over. Dr. Henry was sent for and immediately came, but his patient was past all aid, being then dead through heart failure.

The news was soon on the streets and spread from mouth to mouth until the announcement had reached the whole town. In a few minutes hundreds who could not realize the report rushed to the office of deceased, all eager to learn the cause of the death of so estimable a citizen.

Friends were not wanting. One conveyed the sad news to his household, another procured the undertaker and another telegraphed the sad news to the bereaved brothers and friends. In a short time the remains were coffined and removed to his residence where they will remain until the funeral, the hour of which is not known at the time of writing, the friends desiring to await the arrival of his youngest brother from Omaha, Neb., which may not be before Saturday. However, the public will be apprised in due season. Our heart is too full to say more in this issue, rather than to subjoin a brief biography of deceased, such as we have in so short a space a time been able to gather from some of the old settlers of the town, people who knew deceased in his youth and in his manhood, and who, of one accord spoke of him in the most kindly manner.

The deceased was born in Brampton years ago, his father, the late William Fead, was then engaged in business as a general merchant in partnership with the late Thomas Whitehead. About the year 1832 the family moved to this town, and for some years carried on the business of saw millers and wagon makers, the deceased being in partnership with his father for several years—even before he became of age. On the death of the head of the firm the business was closed and the affairs of the firm wound up by the deceased. In the year 1862 the deceased determined to study law, and indentured himself to M. McCarthy, now judge of the county court. After remaining with Judge McCarthy for some time he had his articles assigned to Mr. Pattullo, our present police magistrate, with whom he completed his studies. On being called to the bar he commenced the practice of law in Erin village, succeeding to the business of Frank E. Marcon, at present local registrar at Sarnia. While in Erin the deceased enlisted a volunteer company, of which he was captain, holding the position until after he moved from the village, he carrying on all parades the sword used by Lieutenant McKachern at the time he was killed at the battle of Ridgeway with the Fenians, and which was a present to the then new Captain on the day he received his commission. We are told that many offers have been held out to Capt Fead to induce him to deliver the sword to the Queen's Own, of which the gallant lieutenant was a distinguished officer but the deceased prized the sword more than any other of his possessions, and did in no wise part with it. After remaining in Erin for about three years, he removed to Orangeville, and opened up office, which he successfully carried on in his own name for several years, subsequently he formed a partnership with Mr. Myers, our present county treasurer, under the style of Fead & Myers. After building an extensive and lucrative business he abandoned it by arranging with Mr. Myers, who has maintained the prestage of the old firm.

The deceased never had any real taste for the law, and after transferring his interest in the firm to Mr. Myers, naturally drifted into private banking, opening an office next door to the Queen's hotel. In a year or two he was alone, but afterwards was joined by Mr MacAdam, and together they remained for upwards of three years, when a dissolution was effected, Mr. MacAdam returning to his old business of grocer, and deceased continuing in his own name (with Mr. T. Bailey as manager) until his death.

In 1875 Mr. Fead was without opposition elected to the office of mayor of the town and the following year he was returned by acclamation for the same high office when he voluntarily retired and for several years after was town clerk, which office he resigned several years ago. Mr. Fead was, at the time of his death, president of the Orangeville Building & Loan association. His death will be severely felt by his co-directors and the general shareholders.

As a citizen, it may be said that he was identified with the best interest of the town and was always forward in every march of progress. In all that was calculated to promote the interest of the town his influence and support, pecuniarily and otherwise, could be counted upon. He was never behind and magnificent home.

The deceased never married—he leaves three brothers, William, druggist of Woodville, Simon of Cannington, and John W. of Omaha, Nebraska.

It is known that the deceased possessed much wealth, estimated by some at $50000, and by others at double that figure.

By the death of Mr. Fead the country has lost a capable, wise and straightforward business man, the town a valued and honorable citizen, and his family an affectionate and generous brother.

What disposure was made of his wealth, or whether he made a will or not, is not known at the time of writing.

CRUSHED TO DEATH!

A Monster Stone Rolls on Samuel Leeson, of Erin Township, and Squeezes the life out Him—He was to leave for British Columbia on Tuesday, but took a Longer Journey four days before.

On Saturday morning last Samuel Leeson, who resided with his brother on the town-line between Erin and Garafraxa townships, about four miles from Alton, met with a horrible death. Friday afternoon he made an excavation in a field for the purpose of burying an immense stone, but he did not complete the work that night and left it over until the fatal Saturday morning. At 7 o'clock he and his brother John left the house, the latter driving a short distance down the road while the former went to finish burying the stone. About 7.30 John returned and looking over where he supposed his brother was working could not discover any earth coming out of the hole. Upon closer examination he saw that the rock was in the hole, and Samuel's coat and hat were lying on the ground near by. The gravest fears now seized Mr. Leeson, and hurrying to the spot he was horrified to find the wedged in between the great rock and the side of the pit. Poor Leeson was mutilated in a shocking manner, his chest having squeezed to one quarter its normal size and his intestines being crushed out of his stomach. It is supposed the unfortunate man attempted to shove the stone into the excavation, but not succeeding he got into the hole for the purpose of removing some more earth, when the rock rolled in upon him and

INSTANTLY CRUSHED HIS LIFE OUT.

He must have seen the stone coming, for the position in which the body was found indicates that he made a terrible though unsuccessful effort to escape.

Deceased was a brother of Mr. Manasseh Leeson of this town and was 62 years of age. Mr. Leeson resided in Erin township for the past forty five years, and twenty years ago he contended an hotel at Hillsburg. Mr. L. and his daughter intended to leave on Tuesday for a visit to British Columbia and he was anxious to finish the work before that day. But fate had decreed that he should take a longer journey than any this world provides, and instead of going across the continent he was summoned over Jordan to meet his Creator face to face. It is almost unnecessary to remark that the tragic affair cast a gloom over the community, and the relations of the dead man have the heartfelt sympathy of everybody. Mr. Leeson leaves behind a family of one son and two daughters, his wife having died about two decades ago. The remains, which were interred in the cemetery at Price's Corners on Monday, were followed to the tomb by a large and sympathetic concourse of people.

WHIP TROW'S SEAT GOES.

Declared to have been Guilty of Attempted Bribery by Agents.

STRATFORD, Oct 30.—Before Justices Rose and McMahon yesterday the South Perth election trial was concluded. It resulted in the unseating of James Trow, M. P. for the division, and head Liberal whip. None of the charges were proved until an alleged offer of money by James Trow, jr., son of the respondent, to one Nicholas Schillenberger of Fullerton was watched, Schillenberger swore that young Trow offered him money.

On the reopening of the court Justice Ross stated that he and Justice McMahon held that the Schillenberger charge was proved. Counsel consulted and finally agreed to let the personal charge drop on condition that the respondent pay costs. The election was therefore declared void.

SHOT HIMSELF DEAD.

Melancholy Accident in the Woods Near Riverview on Friday.

COBRTTON, Oct. 31.—A very sad accident occurred last evening about three miles from here near the village of Riverview, by which a young man named James Markle lost his life through the accidental discharge of his gun. As near as can be ascertained three young men, one of whom was young Markle, got on the track of a deer, and decided to separate, each going in a different direction. Not more than one hour had elapsed when the other young men heard the report of a gun. It being late, they decided to return home. Not being able to come across their companion, they commenced shouting and discharging their guns to attract his attention, but received no response. Shortly afterward they came upon the young man and were horror stricken to find his lifeless body lying beside a log with three large buckshot wounds in his arm and two in his head. It is surmised that he was attempting to go over the log when the gun became accidentally discharged. Death is supposed to have been instantaneous. The mother is prostrated with grief.

The Detroit Football Club defeated the Toronto Scots 3 to 0 in Saturday's match at Detroit.

people of Mono have something interesting to talk about these days. The chief actors concerned in the fatal drama are the two William Shiniuman, senior and junior, both residents of Mono, and John Appleton Montgomery, who resides at Grand Valley. It appears that old man Schiniuman and Montgomery had a dispute in Galbraith's hotel at Hockley, on Saturday, October 17, and while they were talking young Shiniuman, who is 21 years of age, went out to get the horses for the purpose of going home. The senior Shiniuman had his arm in a sling at the time, and Montgomery insisted on trading horses. Shiniuman would not consent to exchange animals, when, it is said, Montgomery attacked the old man. Young Shiniuman came to the help of his father, but was attacked and had to beat a hasty retreat. It is said Montgomery followed the boy for some distance when the latter turned around and threw a small stone at his pursuer. The missile hit Montgomery on the head, but no attention was paid to it at the time. At the time of the fracas Montgomery was moving his family from Adjala to Grand Valley. The man who was hit began to feel the effects of the blow several days afterwards, and a doctor was called in. He discovered that Montgomery's skull was fractured, and did everything possible to save the man's life, but to no purpose, Montgomery dying at an early hour Tuesday morning. In the meantime the two Shiniumans, father and son, had been arrested and were committed to the Orangeville jail on Friday to await the result of Montgomery's injuries. The elder Shiniuman was released on bail on Monday, but his son still occupies a cell at the "castle."

We understand an inquest was held at Grand Valley yesterday, but at the hour of going to press we have not received any particulars.

KILLED BY A KICK!

A Horse Kicks Wm. Laughlin in the Stomach and He Dies Instantly.

Between 7 and 8 o'clock on Saturday evening last William Laughlin, a well-known farmer who resided near Camilla, was kicked on the stomach by a horse, and when those who witnessed the accident arrived at the spot they found Laughlin a corpse. The horse was standing in its stable, and Mr. Laughlin was in the act of removing the harness when the vicious animal made the fatal kick. Deceased was about 50 years of age and unmarried, his sister having kept house for him. Mr. Laughlin had just returned from Credit Forks, where he had been making some purchases, and the sad affair is greatly deplored around there.

AN ORANGEVILLE MAN'S DEATH.

His Lifeless Body Found in False Creek—Was He Murdered?

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 3.—The body of W. P. West, city poundkeeper, was found lying on the mud of the tidal flats, on False Creek, yesterday morning. The police set to work to find, if possible, the cause of the death. There were some things observable about the body which would lead one to suspect that death may not have been wholly accidental. There was less foam at the mouth than there is usually in a case of drowning. Blood was visible behind the left ear, and upon feeling the head several lumps were found, one near the crown being especially large. West was also known to be a fairly good swimmer, and even at high tide there was scarcely in re than five feet of water in the place where he was found.

Sergeant Haywood spent a busy day and was finally rewarded by finding the only man who knew anything about West's death. This was William Mc Cullough, a teamster, who boards at the Granville Hotel. McCullough was arrested as a material witness.

There are two or three incidents in West's life which give grounds for suspicion of foul play. The bruises on his head were swollen, and were so placed as not likely to be struck where he fell off the wharf, and frequently during his sleep he is said to have muttered something about people who would do him up if they caught him out alone. McCullough and West had gone to school together near Orangeville, Ont.

The dead man mentioned in the above dispatch at one time was a resident of Alton, and is well known to the people of that part of the country. William McCullough, the man arrested as a witness, is well known in and around this town. Several years ago he conducted a livery on Mill street, and was well off. Two or three years ago he went to Vancouver and has been there ever since. His wife and young son still reside in Orangeville.

VANATTAR.

THE DOG LIBEL LAWS.—Several days ago Mr W. H. Hunter had a lamb worried to death by a dog, but Mr. H. could not get a glimpse of the destructive canine. Finally he set a wolf-trap, but on two different nights the dog returned and got the bait from the trap. Mr Dog must have got careless, for on Sunday night of last week he returned again and got caught. The animal was kept for two days and nobody claimed it. After a while it was found the animal belonged to the "Queen," but she denied the ownership and Mr. Hunter had the mutton-liking slut,

A TURKEY WITH A BELL.—On Tuesday of last week Harry Walker was ploughing with his famous team of bloods and a sulky plow, when the bloods ran away and smashed the plow considerably. The accident was caused in a singular way. Mrs. R. Cooper has a great flock of turkeys and she tied a bell around the leader's neck. The big turkey jumped upon the fence, the bell rang out, the bloods got frightened and ran away, and the man who repaired the bursted-up plow got $10.

The consciousness of having a remedy at hand for croup, pneumonia, sore throat, and sudden colds, is very consoling to a parent. With a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, one feels, in such cases, a sense of security nothing else can give.

HURT AT FOOTBALL.—Last Friday evening while the H. S. boys were participating in a game of football Godfrey Campbell, son of Mr. Geo. Campbell, tripped and fell and a companion stumbled over him. A small bone in the young fellow's ankle was fractured, and he will be laid up for several weeks.

AN AFFLICTED TRAVELLER.—On Saturday evening a young girl, apparently about 17 years of age, boarded the T. G. & B. train at the Union station, Toronto, for the purpose of coming to Orangeville. Shortly after leaving the city some of the passengers noticed that the young lady was ill, and it finally transpired that she was suffering from diphtheria in its worst form. Several of the less heartless travellers hauled Conductor Hassard over the coals for allowing the unfortunate girl to ride on the train, but the conductor was not aware of the girl's condition until they were some miles from the city. Other compassionate passengers made a bed out of seats and attended to the poor girl until Orangeville was reached. She was moaning worse all the time, and before she disembarked her throat was so badly swollen that her tongue protruded from her mouth.

Several of the less heartless travellers hauled Conductor Hassard over the coals for allowing the unfortunate girl to ride on the train, but the conductor was not aware of the girl's condition until they were some miles from the city. Other sympathetic passengers made a bed out of cushions and attended to the poor girl until Orangeville was reached. She was growing worse all the time, and before she disembarked her throat was so badly swollen that her tongue protruded from her mouth.

COUNTRY HOME.—Mr. John Perry and son, Robert, of Vernon, B. C., are on their way home, and it is expected they will arrive in town on Saturday. Several weeks ago a local paper reported that Mr. P. was dead, but, of course, the report was without foundation. Though not enjoying the best of health, Mr. Perry is still in the land of the living.

A HALLOWE'EN PRANK.—Mr. Samuel Wallace has been engaged sinking a well in the rear of the market for some time and on hallowe'en night he had reached a depth of twenty two feet. During the night some mischievous persons dropped a large iron bolt down the well and when Mr. W. commenced operations on Monday morning the drill wouldn't work. After considerable work the bolt was taken out and the work proceeded. If the iron could not have been removed the contractor would be out $52.

THE SCAFFOLD COLLAPSED.—On Wednesday afternoon of last week Contractor Jos. H. Hughes of this town met with a painful accident at Hillsburg. He was finishing the brickwork on the new English church in that place, when the scaffold on which he was standing collapsed and precipitated him to the ground. In the fall Mr. Hughes' left arm was broken at the wrist and he received some slight bruises about the body. Dr. McKinnon attended to his injuries, and we hope he will soon be around again.

HAPPY SPINSTERS.—The Spinsters' English tea was held in the basement of the Methodist church on Friday evening last and, as is always the case when the ladies are at the helm, was a grand success. The bill of fare was magnificent and the most fastidious was satisfied with the spread. The town orchestra was present and rendered appropriate selections. The spinsters are to be congratulated on the success of the undertaking and it is rumored several engagements have grown out of the affair. The receipts amounted to $70.

A FAST MOVE.—The electric light plant was moved from McDonald's planing mill to the new building on Mill street last Friday, and taking all in all it was a rapid move. After shutting down at 12 o'clock Thursday night some of the lighter instruments were moved and during the day the dynamos were transferred. The lights were turned on again at about 7 o'clock Friday evening. The new station is equipped with a 100 horsepower Browne engine and an immense boiler, and there will be plenty of power to drive the the machines.

CONCERT AT CAMILLA.—A grand Orange concert will be held in Morrison's hall, Camilla, on Friday evening, Nov. 20, for the purpose of raising funds to pay off the debt on the new hall of L. O. L. No. 84. The committee in charge have made every arrangement to make the affair a grand success, and the program includes vocal and instrumental music, addresses, etc. Mr James Snell will occupy the chair and addresses will be delivered by Dr. Barr, M. P. P., Shelburne; Rev M. L. Pearson, Dr Lewis Orangeville; Rev. F. Burt, Cardwell, and R. S. White is also expected to be present.

'TWAS MARKET DAY.—Last Thursday was practically the opening day of Orangeville's weekly market this year, and, as advertised, prizes were awarded for the best products. The attendance was very large, farmers coming from all parts of the county. Mrs J J Young of Ballycroy took the prize for the best two pairs of ducks and Mrs Lyness of Mono Mills captured the prize for the best pair of chickens. In the butter competition Mrs Wm Babe of Mono distanced all others Good prizes will be given every week until next spring. The board of trade have acted wisely in this matter, and the market will boom.

FUN FOR THE P M.—Two cases of more or less interest were tried at P M. Pattullo's court on Saturday and both charges grew out of a "tiff" County Constable Hubbard and Mr Jos Leigston of Mono had on Broad way on Tuesday of last week A report of the affair and "tiff" appeared in THE SUN of last week, and, as we announced, the matter was referred to P M Pattullo. The first charge tried was that against Hubbard for assaulting Leighton The evidence showed that each man was very much excited and both of them used language that would not look well in print After this charge was ventilated the information of Hubbard against Leighton for using insulting language was called, but the litigants came together and an understanding was arrived at each agreeing to withdraw his charge and pay his own costs. And thus the affair terminated

A SLIPPERY GRANGER.—About a year ago a man named George Richardson rented a farm in Mono from Mrs Island of Toronto, formerly of this town, and resided on it until Thursday last. Richardson agreed to pay an annual rental of $175, and also pay taxes. Mrs. Island fulfilled her part of the bargain, but Mr. Richardson did not even make an effort to carry out his part of the agreement. The rent fell due on Monday, but the preceding Thursday found the farm without a tenant, Richardson having left for parts unknown. It appears that the gallant skipper shipped his furniture to his unknown residence some day last week and he did not leave enough stuff behind to commemorate his silent departure. At the beginning of summer he purchased a mower, a self binder, a seeder, wagons, etc, from local agents and had the use of them this year, but now they are glad to get them back. Nothing has been heard of the absconder, and it is very unlikely he will make his place of residence known.

HE GOT A CUP.—The teachers of the Orangeville high school purchased a silver cup and presented it to W. J. Killeen on Tuesday afternoon. The race for the championship between S. M. Brown and Killeen was very close, and the judges decided in favor of the former. Killeen claimed to have been swindled out of the prize, and a great many people thought so, too He said he would not take a prize or anything else, but from Tuesday's proceedings it seems he has changed his mind. In response to an invitation from Head Master Steele a SUN reporter was present at the presentation. Mr. John McLaren, chairman of the H. S. board, was master-of-ceremonies, and discharged that duty in his usual good style. Mr. Steele delivered a rather long speech dealing with the teachers connection with the games and the general morality of the school. The latter, he held, and he had evidence to back up such an assertion, was as high and in numerous cases higher than any other high school in the province. After the principal's oration Mr. McLaren presented Killeen with a cup, the latter making a brief speech in reply.

HOW THEY TAKE IT.

I didn't mind what Hossack said about my trimming on the cow bylaw, I was only one of many sinners; but do you know, sir, I was afraid he would go for the taxation on my $1800 elevator. I can down Bailey for mayor if Hossack only keeps away from that weak spot; I have too much sheet iron for Bailey, but one never knows how things will end when these preachers go at a person from the pulpit.—Reeve Lindsay.

I fail to see anything wrong in my action on the bylaw. Some say I was working for popularity, and others say Hossack is doing the same thing every Sunday night.—Deputy reeve Endacott.

Of course people may say I was always in favor of the cow bylaw, but when it comes to looking after one's own scalp at election time it is a different thing, and I think I was justifiable in doing as I did.—Ald. Ketchum.

I hear that man Hossack went pretty rough for Pattullo over that apple stealing business about a year ago, and he never let on he heard him. I hold that the P. M. is wiser than any of us—that is where his Scotch comes in. Hereafter Hossack may say what he likes about me and Kearns, but we will never answer back, that we won't.—R. McKeown.

It is plain to be seen that our preacher and the Post have formed an offensive and defensive alliance. Man is after the Presbyterian printing and you can "bet your neck" he and Blaney are going to get it. I must see Father McPhillips and do him out of St. Peter's.—Tiger Wallace.

I won't say anything more until I see how my letter to the press takes with the public. The license commissioners know how to size up the newspapers of this town.—Dr. Smith.

You can talk as you like, no matter what the ministers say about Lewis it won't make a bit of difference to the great Reform party. The Tories are so permeated with the wicked virus of Sir John that they really do not know right from wrong, and the more intrigue and chicanery Lewis employs the closer they will stick to him.—Crown Attorney Myers.

I'm too busy getting up my income figures to say a word. In the meantime Hossack admits a $300 deficiency in his taxation and I hope he'll be honest enough to forward the "conscience money" to the town treasurer. I still stand by "religious fakir," the English is good enough to express my meaning.—Mayor Walsh. P. S.—There are a couple of Presbyterians whose incomes want looking after, notably the crown attorney and the police magistrate.—M W.

It is well enough for ministers of the gospel to talk about acts of the public school trustees, but let them attend the meetings of the board and see for themselves. (sub rosa)—that is if they can find when and where the meetings are held.)—Chairman Savage.

I have not had any communication with Mephistopheles for some time, but I really believe Rev. Mr. Hossack is honest in what he says. I don't pretend that he has any of this denominational religion in his composition, but it is this way: he has become disgusted with this god darned toadyism and has opened the flood gates of his indignation on this community, and told them what he thinks of them, and he feels better. It will do good, and I'm with him every time.—Barrister McKay

What means this tempest in a teapot! What have I done! I am sure any of the Grits would have done the same Look at their royal arch schemer, Pattullo; he has been getting up their games for a quarter of a century and is considered almost a saint. And just because an unfortunate doctor tried to wire in a couple of juvenile voters the heather must be fired and the slogan of "Tory corruption" echoed from hill to vale throughout the whole country Sermons, letters to the press and denunciations have been hurled at me Enough! I am no worse than the Grits, and don't you forget it.—Dr Lewis

All the wits in town congregate at my shop and I am getting plenty of free advertising, but I tell you, boys, we are having lots of fun out of this, more than you could get out of a cage of monkeys. I think they should let up on Gillespie, "the game is not worth the candle."—Andy Harkness.

Balls a rolling—ten pins a flying—nothing like advertising!

I must build my alley bigger
To let in the Councillor,
To Let in the Doctor,
To let in the Preacher

Come one, come all. Tally a straight to Brown—six to Gillespie—that's a bazaar for Green—no swearing, boys—spit in the sawdust—And thus the game goes merrily on.—Grand ja

Two weeks ago I said I was cuchred out of the H. S. championship, but the teachers bought me a cup and that's all I wanted. I'm afraid the boys will turn around and hiss me.—Killeen.

I care not who you are, or what you are, if you're a doer of evil I shall expose you.—Rev. D. C. Hossack.

Diseases of the Liver.

You may always know when your liver is out of order, or when you are weak is called bilious, by any of the following symptoms: Pain in the side and back, dizziness, dull headache, a bad taste in the mouth in the morning, sallow colored complexion, yellowish tint in the eyes, costiveness or diarrhoea, of slimy dark color, low spirit, and dismal forebodings. It is acknowledged by all physicians and others, who have seen their action, that Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are a perfect cure for all bilious affections. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all medicine dealers.

DEATH RODE ON THE SQUALL

Four Boys start on an Expedition and Their Boat Overturns.

MIDLAND, Ont., Nov. 1.—A drowning accident occurred here Saturday night, whereby four boys, between the age of 12 and 15, lost their lives. They are: John Clarkson, son of A. E. Clarkson, Peter Hewis, son of David Hewis, Leo. Johnston, son of J. P. Johnston, and William Allliston, son of William Alliston, all of Midland. The boys left town yesterday afternoon in a sail boat to cross over to Present Island, and when returning about 5 o'clock p. m. were caught in a squall, upsetting their boat. Searching parties have been out all day. The boat was found Sunday afternoon, but no bodies as yet.

OVER THE OCEAN!

The Canadian-American Footballists in Great Britain.

Dr. T. H. Henry of this town has received the following letter from one of the players in the Canadian American football team which is making a tour of Great Britain and Ireland:

DOUGLAS HOTEL,
MANCHESTER, Sept. 22, '91.

MY DEAR TOM:—

I expect you have seen by the papers something about our doings since we landed on this side of the water and rather perhaps disappointed at the results. Well I will tell you something about our trip across the water as we were eleven days coming over and had it very rough in that time We arrived in Glasgow Aug. 17th in a heavy rain and mist. We had two deaths on board which made the trip sadder, as all were greatly impressed, and it put a damper upon the sun for awhile.

Both bodies were wrapped in the Union Jack, service was held and they were given to the ocean for a grave. It was one of the saddest sights that I ever saw, one was a detective about 30, who took sick—drank so much whisky that he got the "D. T.'s" and died; the other was a little boy who died from want of proper care.

I was pretty sick for two days, could not drink or eat at all as it would all come up again, and as for sleeping in my berth, there was such a smell it was very hard to do so. After my sickness I had a ravenous appetite, and could eat like a horse and it did me a great deal of good to be sick as I felt far better afterwards. Nearly all on board were sick but most of them got over it easily.

We had a very nice party on board who made it a bit lively, but being so long on the water it gets altogether too monotonous, as you get tired of it.

One day we had it very rough and the boat was tossed about like a feather, but it was a fine sight to see the huge waves dashing mountains high and washing over the deck of the boat just like a speck ploughing among them. We only went at the rate of eleven miles an hour on an average, but we had a heavy load of grain, so could not make good time. Promenading was one of the principal amusements on board and it was a very good way to put in the time. It is a grand sight in the evening when the ocean was quiet to sit on the upper deck and see the sun setting—something that cannot be imagined and it is very restful. After we landed in Glasgow a day or so we practised in Hampden Park and most of the boys were stiff and sore but was in good trim myself. The first match was played Aug 22nd, against 3rd Lanarks at Glasgow and our boys on account of being out of condition lost by 3 to 0. It was a well fought match and was no disgrace to be beaten by such a first class team. The forwards we have over here, have been the cause of us losing so many matches and there are only two or three that are any good, so it is rather discouraging to our defence when the forwards don't show up well. They cannot shoot on goal even when the ball is given to them, Boonam and Mannison are simply no good at all and both of them are going to be sent home, which is rather hard lines, but it cannot be helped. The first two or three matches there was no combination at all; but now we are getting down to work and will do something before we start for home, which will be the middle of January. From Glasgow we went to Stirling and played a hard game in the rain and were beaten again, and the fault was the same as I mentioned before—Stirling is a great place for sight seeing: A reporter in the town took me all through Stirling castle a place of historic fame—then we went to the place where the battle of Bannockburn was fought—then to the Wallace monument, where you get a fine view of the town. The scenery is fine over here especially in Scotland and the mountains are simply grand to look at them is no end of fine scenery—in fact everything seems fine to a person who has never been over before.

We then went to Belfast where we had a splendid time and were treated in a fine manner. We were driven to Lord Dufferin's residence in Claudebaege in a lake and four and were shown through his house which is something grand and his library is very handsome. His estates are immense and cover a lot of ground Mr Kins, manager of our team, and myself had the pleasure of having a glass of wine with his lordship the first time we called on him.

Our team was shown all the large linen factories there and were entertained to banquets, given boxes for the theatre in the evening and all the boys enjoyed themselves. We were treated better in Belfast than in any place we have been yet, so all cannot help having a good impression of the place and the people. Belfast itself is a fine large place and quite a centre for manufacturing. Lacrosse is quite a game there and well patronized. The last time we were over "All Ireland" beat England by 12 to 1 in an International game—rather a big score. They have good grounds there and a good team. We should have won both our football matches then, but somehow we seem to have hard luck, since we came over—as the Referee's roast us whenever they get the chance so we cannot get fair play. I am getting rather a hard name over here for rough play and am knocking the men about in great style. Some of our fellows got badly hurt—Buckingham had his ankle sprained, another his back, and middle metatarsal or one of them broken in two places, so it is no fun playing over here. So far I have had no injuries except a few bruises.

Last Monday we played all Wales at Wrexham and beat them 1 to 0 in a heavy downpour of rain and it was mighty cold and we were completely soaked at the finish, but we did them, so didn't mind.

Football over here is altogether different from what the game is in Canada and I didn't know how I could play until I got over here. We have played some of the best teams a close game for instance Sunderland only beat us 3 to 2; Everton 3 to 1 and we played a tie with the Bolton Wanders, so that is not so bad—if we only had decent forwards we would have won those matches and as soon as we get Watty Thompson over we will do better.

Our headquarters are here for quite a while and I am very glad we have one settled place to stay in, as it was a nuisance going from one place to the other.

We have a private car of our own and it is very convenient going around in it.

Well I must close—I am sending you some papers with account of matches. Let me know all about lacrosse and write soon. My address is Aciesfield, Bolton, Lancashire, Eng., care of J. J. Beatty.

We have played a game of baseball here and was and expect to play a few more games.

Ever Your's,

JACK.

CHARGED WITH BIGAMY.

GUELPH, Oct. 26.—On Saturday night Alex. McK. Barclay, a farm laborer in Nichol, was tried before Mr. Justice A. Darby, J. P., and committed to the county jail on remand until Friday on a charge of bigamy. On the 19th inst. he was married at the rectory by Ven. Archdeacon Dixon to Kate O'Neil of Nichol, when every publicity was given to the wedding. A large number of the bridegroom's friends were present and a jollification was held in the city after the event. It is alleged now, however, that Barclay was married previously to Martha Cruikshank of the County of Bruce, where Barclay resided at one time. This statement the prisoner denies, although he admits that he kept company with Martha Cruikshank, who, he alleges is now a married woman somewhere in the Northwest. The defendant, is about 33 years of age, is rather an intelligent man, has travelled considerably and has only one arm.

QUEBEC, Oct 24.—Robert McGreevy and J. E. Murphy have fled to the United States. Murphy crossed to Point Levis at 8 o'clock on Thursday night and McGreevy followed soon after, leaving there on the late train for Newport, Vermont, a small town, nearly opposite Sherbrooke.

When the court opened yesterday morning, of course, neither of them was present, and High Constable Gale was sent out to look for them and was told at their homes that they had "just started down town."

Judge Bossé's charge was strong and incisive and the jury retired, but every mind had been already made up, and they immediately returned with an unconditional

VERDICT OF "GUILTY."

In the absence of the fugitives judgment cannot be rendered, but to-morrow morning bench warrants for their arrest will be issued and their bail bonds will be estreated.

When Mr. Israel Tarte, who is bondsman for Murphy, heard of his flight his face grew livid and he fell back in his chair exclaiming "Mon Dieu."

Not only are Murphy and McGreevy gone but the famous big box with the logging chain gone with them. Mr Todd, clerk of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, accompanied by Mr. C P Angers, advocate, were about leaving for Ottawa by the 10 o'clock train last night when on their arrival at the station they were met by a bailiff of the Superior Court who, in the virtue of such court, issued at the instance of Larkin, Connolly & Co., took possession of the books, notwithstanding all protests.

[illegible] and a half ago, while the Gurdens were on strike, Wm [illegible] and Joseph Maroney were convicted of intimidating men who were [illegible] the places of the strikers. They were [illegible] to ball, and coming across one of the witnesses who committed them [illegible] Henry on the night of the [illegible] trial, they beat him badly. Maroney was arrested for this assault and sentenced to two concurrent sentences of eighteen months imprisonment. He escaped and went to Rochester. That was in May, 1890, and he returned Monday under the belief that the memories of the police would not keep him in mind so long. His wife lives in Oshawa and he came to visit her and was arrested Wednesday. Detective Cuddy brought him to Toronto a few nights ago.

A Severe Attack.

DEAR SIRS,—My children were taken ill with ulcerated sore throats bordering on diphtheria. I had nothing in the house but Hagyard's Yellow Oil which I used with great benefit. I am sure if it had not been for it the disease would have developed into diphtheria. It is a splendid medicine.

MRS. E. CAMERON, Moore's Falls, Ont.

The popular impression that every family possesses a Bible as well as a dictionary and a copy of Shakespeare, like many other popular impressions, seems to be an erroneous one, for there is in town a firm that makes a business of renting out Bibles of an expensive and hand-some kind suitable to hand a Bishop or fashionable clergyman on the occasion of a christening, wedding or funeral in the family. If on the occasion of these religious episodes in the family the big church dignitary should turn to the blank leaves in both the Old and New Testaments he would find them devoid of genealogical records, to the consternation of the family. A deposit is demanded when the Bibles are hired, and a charge of $2 a night is the regular price.

A very unfortunate occurrence took place near Mansfield last Wednesday afternoon, and one that is very seldom heard of. While the procession was moving along the centre side road to Rykiney cemetery at the funeral of Thos McKee's child, the team drawing the corpse got frightened at something in the camp grounds and ran away, taking the democrat and throwing the casket containing the corpse on to the top down. The cortege was a long one for a child so young, and a time great confusion prevailed, however, so far as heard of, no person seriously hurt. Mr McKee has the sympathy of his numerous friends in his bereavement, having buried his wife a short time since.—Harriston Tribune.

A Sea Voyage.

A sea voyage is an expensive prescription, especially when equally good results as to health, are to be had by simply taking Burdock Blood Bitters according to directions. It is a specific for dyspepsia, purifies the blood, regulates the liver, bowels and kidneys and removes all impure matter from the system.

Five small boys of Hanover, of not more than 10 years of age, purchased several yards of factory cotton the other day, and had one of the tailors make a lasso for them. They repaired to the back yard of the Johnson property and dug a trench, started a fire to it and placed the cotton in position. Pretty soon it began to expand, and a clothes basket was then tied to the bottom. Herman Wendorf climbed into the basket and called to the boys to let her go. As she went with a rush over the barn and trees with the boys on ahead clinging to the basket for dear life. He was about to jump, when he fortunately remembered his jack knife. A long gash in the cotton was the work of an instant, the gas commenced to escape and the balloon began to descend. When still some distance from the ground the badly frightened boy jumped out, but was not badly hurt.

FATAL SCAFFOLD ACCIDENT.

LISTOWEL, Oct 26.—A gang of men set to work this morning for contractors Heard at the carpentry work on the new building of the Listowel furniture factory. A scaffold was built out of the top window of the tower 50 feet from the ground, and on this two men, Thos. Bailey of 12th Kenn, and a young man, son of John Lathe of the Silver Corners cheese factory, Kenn, were working. Contractor Harge was standing beneath and called to them that he did not think they were safe, but his warning was too late, for just as he spoke he saw the scaffolding give way. The men fell heading to the ground and were rendered instantly unconscious and died in a few minutes. Large had a narrow escape, a heavy plank just striking his foot as he ran out. The children near by were struck with scattering shingles, but not injured. Bailey was married. Little was single.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Some occupations tend to the development of certain diseases, and those who toil as miners are peculiarly liable to rheumatism, lumbago, and other allied complaints. In the gold fields and copper mines, Holloway's remedies have been largely patronized by the workers to their very great advantage, and they can be confidently recommended as invaluable remedies for inward congestions, spasms and cramps in the bowels, and all those conditions of the lungs and liver to which those who work underground or in impure atmospheres are so peculiarly liable. For cuts, bruises, sprains and stiffen of joints, the action of Holloway's Ointment is eminently healing and soothing and a supply should always be at hand in case of need.

People Wonder

WHEN they find how rapidly health is restored by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The reason is that this preparation contains only the purest and most powerful alteratives and tonics. To thousands it proves a veritable elixir of life.

Mrs. Jos. Lake, Brockway Centre, Mich., writes: "Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an in my condition, my appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life, and I cannot thank you too much."

"We, the undersigned, citizens of Brockway Centre, Mich., hereby certify that the above statement, made by Mrs. Lake, is true in every particular and entitled to full credence."—O. P. Chamberlain, G. W. Waring, C. A. Wells, Druggists.

"My brother, in England, was, for a long time, unable to attend to his occupation, by reason of sores on his foot. I sent him Ayer's Almanac and the testimonials it contained induced him to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using it a little while, he was cured, and is now a well man, working in a sugar mill at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia."—A. Attwell, Sharbot Lake, Ontario.

THE NIMRODS.—Our local sports are making life miserable for the poor, innocent deer. We are informed that in several of the localities a little north of here these harmless creatures are chased to utter fatigue by vicious mongrels and hybrid breeds. There are very few deer in this section now, and we fail to see what pleasure there is in chasing them to death as the wild Indians would do. A civilized populace should know better.

The Restof Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of even one week they will yield from 15 to 25 per cent less milk, and that of an inferior quality. Such milk will on standing, turn sour in twenty four hours less than that from cows which have had access to salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analysed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is said cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock fine and coarse, at

MANY A LIFE

HAS been saved by the prompt use of Ayer's Pills. Travellers by land or sea are liable to constipation or other derangements of the stomach and bowels which, if neglected, lead to serious and often fatal consequences. The most mild means of correcting these evils is the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. The prudent sailing master would as soon go to sea without his chronometer as without a supply of these Pills. Though potent and energetic in operation, Ayer's Pills leave no ill effects; they are purely vegetable and sugar-coated; the safest medicine for old and young, at home or abroad.

"For eight years I was afflicted with constipation, which at last became so bad that the doctors could do no more for me. Then I began to take Ayer's Pills, and soon the bowels recovered their natural and regular action, so that now I am in health."—Mrs. C. B. Clark, Tewksbury, Massachusetts.

"I regard Ayer's Pills as one of the most reliable general remedies of our times. They have been in use in my family for affections requiring a purgative, and have given unvarying satisfaction. We have found them an excellent remedy for colds and light fevers."—W. H. Woodson, Fort Worth, Texas.

"For several years I have relied more upon Ayer's Pills than upon anything else in the medicine chest, to regulate my bowels and those of the ship's crew. These Pills are not severe in their action, but do their work thoroughly. I have used them with good effect for the cure of rheumatism, kidney troubles, and dyspepsia."—Capt. Mueller, Steamship Fulda, New York City.

"I have found Ayer's Cathartic Pills to be a better family medicine for common use than any other pills within my knowledge. They are not only very effective, but safe and pleasant to take—qualities which must make them valued by the public."—Jules Hanel, Perfumer, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE THREE RIDERS.

Three riders set out for the temple of Fame,
Rash hearts and spurred and whipped the same.
The first rode forth at a rattling pace,
Like a racer who wins at a dashing race.
The second set out with a cautious, slow,
So that, when need was, he might faster go.
The third rode steadily, quietly on,
As a quiet jog trot he could reckon upon.
And which do you think will the winner be—
The hare, the tortoise, or number three?

The first one soon broke down, of course, I
He saved the saddle, but lost his horse,
The second met the regular fate,
Dallied too long, and was just too late.
The third, I grieve and regret to say,
Did not get there, for he lost his way;
He thought so much of his regular trot,
That to look at the signs he quite forgot.

See how strangely things befall,
Another, not thinking of fame at all,
Who on his way to the broad fruit tree,
To provide for his wife and children three,
Went straightway into the temple of Fame,
And innocently asked its name.
They answered him. And with a quizzical face,
He remarked, "It's a most uncomfortable place."
Then he went on to the broad fruit tree
And home to his wife and children three.

CHAPTER XIX

THE old mansion of Bowigo slept—slept in deep tranquility, with its belt of giant fire keeping watch and ward around it, and all the shadows of its quaint gables and latticed windows lying stilly on the moonlit lawn. Down in the courtyard at the back lay other shadows, unquiet with the quivering of leaf and flower, and changing fitfully as the great branches of evergreen oak and bay, standing at the gate, swayed in the uncertain breeze. Now as the shadow of the great oak trembled on the pave stones, there glimmered distinctly among the leaves the gray and ghostly likeness of a man. Then a tawny dog sprang from his kennel in his whole chain's length and with one short angry bark, waited with watchful eye upon the trees till the branch shook violently and the man himself swinging at arm's length, dropped noiselessly upon the pavement. Then the dog snapped his chain and rushed upon him with one wild spring.

"Bolster! good Bolster, down!" said the man, in a low voice.

The dog crouched at the man's feet; but his short barks of joy, and his eagerness and suppressed excitement showed that Bolster knew his master.

"Have you got the dog?" whispered another voice, and a face peered anxiously over the wall.

"Yes," said Charles Vigo, shortly. "Recollect your master has pledged his word to me that the dog is to be well treated, and to be brought back to Bowigo as soon as this strange hunt is over."

"All right, Mr. Marcombe; it shall be done. And I shall be glad when the dog is back," said Sir Anthony's man, whisky; "for this here work do look more like dog stealing than anything I've ever seed."

Charles Vigo smiled at the man's words, and seizing the bough of the oak, he once more swung himself on to the wall, and dropped down on the other side, whistling lightly to the dog as he went. Bolster flew frantically to the wall, then to the locked gate, which he finally succeeded in surmounting. Sir Anthony's man looked on with great admiration.

"I declare he do come arter you just as if you was his master," said he.

Again Charles Vigo stooped to pat Bolster, in order to hide the smile that passed over his face.

"I have begged a pair of old shooting gloves from Mr. Vigo's servant, that once belonged to his master," said Charles; "and it's wonderful how these retrievers will recognize the scent."

"Ah, it's very queer altogether," returned the man. "I can't pay him a hunt as I shall like to fellow."

They walked on silently through the grounds into the road, where a light cart awaited them, into which they sprang, and drove away.

It was about an hour after this, when Charles Vigo returned to Mohenlot Farm, and laid his hand on the shoulder of its gloomy master, who sat cowering over a turf fire, which smouldered on the hearth, in an old fashioned wide chimney.

"Skews," said he, "you must go to this man hunt."

"You—you can't mean that you are going to let this be?" stammered the farmer, bending his white face still lower over the embers.

"Yes—why not?" said young Vigo. "Let them hunt, and find, if they will."

"Here?" asked Skews, hurriedly.

"Here!" repeated Charles. "No. Are they likely to find Mr. Vigo at your house, or any other helper in a murder?—eh, Skews?"

The miserable man glanced upwards into his questioner's face with a look of cowardice and fear; but he uttered not a word.

"Bolster will not come hither to look for his master," continued the other. "Never fear that, man."

"Where is the dog?" asked Skews trembling in his terror.

"In Sir Anthony's stable," was the reply. "He will be let out at three o'clock; and Sir Anthony and a deal of his, who is in the secret, will follow him on horseback."

"Will the secret be well kept, Mr.—Mr. Marcombe?" asked Skews, with his eyes still on the fire.

"Trust Bolster for making no mistake," replied Charles. "It is was only an old glove he'd find it."

Skews was silent for a moment; then curiosity evidently got the better of his fears.

"Where do you mean to go, sir, if you don't stay here?" he asked, in his nervous, hesitating way.

"Oh, we'll go together Skews," said he. "We shall have some rare sport."

Skews seemed by no means to relish this prospect; he moved uneasily on his seat, and said, gloomily, "What's the good? I don't see the good. I can't make out what you are going to do."

"Come with me, and then you'll see what I am going to do," said the other. "I have chosen a splendid hiding place."

The commanding voice was in his ear, the firm hand was on his shoulder, and the coward Skews dared not disobey his guest. Yet he rose sullkily, and as he stirred the embers together with his foot, he said, in his moodiest tone, "I'm a doomed man. I don't care where I go. But I suppose you'll let me have a sup of something warm before you pull me out in the cold."

"What are you afraid of?" returned the other contemptuously. "Arm yourself with Dutch courage, if you will; it matters little to me."

The young man walked up and down whistling softly, as Skews mixed himself a glass of strong toddy, which he drank in a fierce way, as though in drink, as in all else, he could not help showing the desperation that was growing in him.

"Are you ready?" asked his guest, as he set the glass down. "Then come at once."

As he spoke, Charles Vigo took a pistol from his pocket, and looked at the priming. The action was not lost on Skews.

"I hope, sir, whatever happens, that you'll keep your temper," he said submissively. "I'm sure I am willing to go with you, although I can't see what you are going to make a fool of Sir Anthony Roskelly for."

Both stood beneath the night sky as the last words were said, and, without answering, Charles Vigo strode on towards Trewavas woods.

The moonlight was clear and piercing, but beneath the trees the arched branches, leafless though they were, intercepted its rays, and the path was dark and gloomy. A thousand fantastic shadows lay upon the rank grass; and here and there, where a huge oak or a silver birch reared a giant crown, the shadows grew funeral in blackness, and the darkness was intense. From such black spots in their path the coward Skews emerged with a colder and colder fear trembling at his heart. Yet he dared utter no word of remonstrance, his fear of the stalwart young man by his side being greater than the imaginary terrors that tormented his shrinking conscience. Nevertheless, when Charles Vigo struck into the heart of the wood, and turned towards the Lady's Bower, fright unchained his speech.

"I hope you won't ax me to go to that lonesome pool, sir," said he, "especially on such a night as this."

"What better place for the hunters to find the aider and abettor of a murderer than the spot where the murder occurred?" asked his companion, sternly.

"But there's no friend of murderers here," stammered the farmer, as his face grew white and ghastly in the moonlight.

"Nevertheless," said the young man, "the friend of Olive Varcoe is here, and I intend that Sir Anthony Roskelly shall find him at that very spot where—where you and I, Nathaniel Skews, saw her on the day that Eleanor Maristowe lost her life."

"You! Did you see her too?" exclaimed Skews, with a tremulous quiver in his voice.

As he spoke, Charles Vigo turned, and seized him by the collar.

"You saw her, you miserable scoundrel," he exclaimed, "and yet you have held your peace. You have heard her tradduced on all sides, you have seen her hunted as a criminal, driven from her home, execrated and hated, and you have not spoken, because you have taken blood-money, and sold your soul for a few dirty acres of Trewavas land."

Held in his powerful grasp, Charles Vigo dragged the wretched man along at a rapid pace, until he reached the margin of the lonely pool, where the moonlight lay, white and silvery. Here on the long, rank grass, where he had seen Olive's robe, trailing as it touched the water, he flung him down, and stood over him, pistol in hand.

"Understand, Skews," he exclaimed, "that you have to speak now, else I fling you into this pool, where you saw Eleanor Maristowe fling, and never raised a hand to help her, cowed and amazed that you saw!"

"I cannot speak," gasped Skews. "I'm a ruined man if I do."

"There is no escape for you," said Charles Vigo, sternly. "Unburden your guilty soul, rain or no rain. I mean to hear the truth, even if you die in telling it."

"Now, look here, sir," moaned the miserable Skews, "that is fair what you're doing? You came into my house to disturb me on purpose to ruin me. You hadn't been with me a week afore I knowed you, Mr. Vigo, yet I never said a word to no one."

"You dared not," returned Charles Vigo.

"I don't know about that, sir," said Skews. "I only know you're a rich man and I'm a poor one. And if I don't keep my word with Sir Hilton Trewavas, I am ruined. What do you want to ruin me for? I haven't hurt anybody. Miss Varcoe is safe enough. And I don't see why I should tell tales about her—or—or any one else," he roared, as Charles Vigo, exasperated by the insolent tone of his last words, again seized him by the throat, and pressed his face close to the cold shining water.

The horror, the shrinking horror, which the miserable man felt at the chill touch of the doleful pool, stopped for a moment the very beating of his dull heart. For months he had avoided the place in painful cowardice. For worlds he would not have dipped his hands in that accursed water; and now the eyes glared into it, its touch wetted his white lips, and he knelt face to face with the cold death he had let Eleanor Maristowe die. When Charles Vigo lifted his livid face from the pool, and flung him on the grass again, he was utterly abject and spiritless.

"Give me five minutes—only five minutes, Mr. Vigo, and I'll tell you all," he gasped hurriedly, as breath and life came back to him.

"Very well," said Charles Vigo, "I grant you five minutes in which to recover yourself, and get some courage into your dastardly veins if you can. I shall stand by this tree; but you see this pistol, and you know that it is loaded, and if you attempt to stir I shall fire."

Charles Vigo moved away to a short distance, and leaned against a tall bay tree, the fragrant leaves of which shook with a mournful rustling in the night air.

"Not so far, Mr. Vigo!" cried the coward, in abject fear. "Don't go so far away for mercy's sake! I can't see you, sir, and I can't abide to be alone in this ghastly place."

"I can see you," said Charles Vigo, "and that's enough. You have asked for five minutes; I grant them, but I will not place myself in your sight."

Compelled to look around him in the weird and waning light, and see only the trees, the still shadows, and the gleaming pool, which, like a ghostly mirror, doubled all the shapes of horror that haunted his coward spirit, Skews trembled in every limb, and tried vainly in his baffled mind to find some loophole or corner of escape. It was for this he had asked for five minutes' grace, to invent a lie, or to shuffle Charles Vigo off with a coil of wily excuses, which should tell the truth and yet hide it. But the tale, that by his fireside would have been easy to make, would not come to him here by the margin of the dismal lake, where Eleanor Maristowe died. And so he wavered from one cowardly fear to the other till the minutes of grace were gone. At last, he took to counting them, crouched as he was on the wet grass, with all thoughts of excuse or invention vanished, and nothing in his mind but the floating corpse of Eleanor and the pointed pistol of Charles Vigo. When the time was up, and his tongue had ceased to count, the blank silence that fell upon him was more horrible than the threatening voice or pistol of his foe, or even than the touch of that death cold water.

"Mr. Vigo! Mr. Vigo!" he said softly.

Silence still. Then he began to count again. He had made a mistake surely, and he knew Mr. Vigo would not speak till the minutes of grace were gone. He counted with a dry tongue and a cracking throat, for every moment was a torture now. Suppose the young man had gone away, and left him here by this hideous pool alone? The thought lifted his hair as though an unseen hand had passed through it, and brought cold beads of sweat upon his brow. And the moon was going down, the face of the pool was darkening slowly, with here and there a gleam and flash, a ripple of ghastly light always showing him the corpse of Eleanor floating towards him in horrible distinctness. The dark shadow on the water creeping ever nearer, nearer, appalled him more than the glistening light had done; and the waving of the tall rushes on the pool's brink, the crash and sway of unseen boughs moaning around him, all shook his abject soul with supernatural terrors. And now a branch on the opposite side of the pool swayed wildly to and fro. It swayed without any sudden gust or moan of wind. He saw it by a long line of light, which glanced between the trees from the setting moon, and struck the water like a ghostly lance, showing the branch swaying to and fro without a single good-enough human hand. Then the light quivered and went out, but as it vanished, a face rose up among the leaves of the swaying branch, and looked at him. The sight was too horrible, and he fell down to the earth, biting the wet grass with quivering lips, and grasping at gnarled roots and weeds with clutching fingers.

"Mr. Vigo!" he shrieked, "for Heaven's sake, speak to me, sir!"

He held his breath to listen for an answer, but none came. He heard only the swaying of the bough, and the moan of the wind among the tree tops. Then, gathering courage, he thought to rise and escape; but as he gained his feet, a strong, firm hand pressed him down upon his knees, and a voice—not Charles Vigo's—said in cutting accents, "Tell the truth and shame the devil, Farmer Skews. I am Mr. Vigo's friend. You might deny what you said to him, but to the mouth of two witnesses such a testimony be approved. Now, let us hear why you stood by, and saw a helpless girl murdered, and never stirred a finger to help her."

The thought had flashed through the coward's dull brain that he might deny his confession to Charles Vigo; but now, as he felt Mr. Heriot's strong hand upon him, he knew that he was baffled at every turn, and all hope was gone.

"Don't be hard upon me, gentlemen," he whined, as he held out his hands towards the dim figure of Charles Vigo, standing between him and the pool. "I'm a ruined man from this night. You won't make public what I say? You won't turn me out of house and home?"

"We shall do what is right and honest," replied Mr Heriot. "If the consequences to you are disastrous, you must bear the just punishment of your sin."

"I was a poor man; I owed rent," groaned Skews, rocking himself dismally to and fro. "I feared Sir Hilton would ruin me if I said anything. And I thought it grand to get such a big man in my power. But I'm sure I never had no peace since. I've been haunted day and night. Aunly a minute ago I seed a face by the pool watching me."

"You saw me, you simpleton," said Mr. Heriot. "Go on; we waste time here."

"Any other man would ha' done what I did," continued the shuffling Skews, "if he was as poor as I be. I went to Sir Hilton, and axed him to let me have Mohenlot farm; and he said no, very short, as he'd promised it to some one else. Well, then, when I had my chance afterwards, you can't wonder I took it."

"Afterwards! You mean after the murder?" said Mr. Heriot, in a sharp tone.

"What a shuffling, lying throat the man has!" exclaimed Charles Vigo, indignantly. "My hand tingles to kill him, as I would a reptile."

Skews shrunk, and crouched his abject head nearer to the grass at these strong words, glancing like a whipped dog at the pistol shining in Charles Vigo's hand.

"Softly, my dear young friend," said Mr. Heriot. "Leave this creature to me. Now go on, man—and faster, if possible."

"Yes, sir, said he, "I went to Sir Hilton—the day afore the inquest it was—and told him I'd been in the wood the day Miss Eleanor died. He didn't speak for full a minute; and then he says, 'What part of the wood?' 'Near the Lady's Bower,' I answers. 'And I saw a red cord there.' Then Sir Hilton dropped his face upon his hands, and when he lifted it again 'twas white as snow, and ghastly as a dead man's. 'I don't want to do the farm no harm,' I says. 'I've always been a tenant of yours and your father's, Sir Hilton. I mean to hold my tongue about the matter.' He seemed relieved when I said that, but he kept his eyes down upon the floor, and never looked up once again while I was there. 'Of course you shall have the farm, Skews,' he says, 'and three hundred pounds to stock it with. You understand that?' 'I understand, sir,' I answered; 'and you may make sure you'll never hear no word of this so long as you live.' He bit his lip hard at this, and said, in a hesitating way, 'You did not see any one at the pond, Skews, I suppose?' 'I'm sorry to say sir, I did,' says I. 'I mention no names, I saw some one.' 'Never mind,' he said, holding up his hand suddenly. 'I don't want to hear anything. You shall have the farm in a few weeks' time, you know, when things are quiet; meanwhile, you had better be careful.' I saw he meant that he was afraid I should talk, though he was too proud too say it; so I made haste to let 'em know that never a word had passed my lips, or should pass; and it never would, Mr. Heriot, to this day, if young Mr. Vigo hadn't come into my house disguised like, and hunted me down like a forest."

Skews whimpered here, and then burst into a howl of despair, as, looking up he saw no sign of pity on Mr. Heriot's stern face.

"You see," said Charles Vigo, sarcastically, "what a miserable creature is Sir Hilton Trewavas! Heavens!" he added inwardly, "to think that Olive should love such a man!"

"Softly, again, my dear boy," said Mr. Heriot. "Did Sir Hilton know when you saw in the wood, Farmer Skews?"

"In course he did, sir," replied Skews. "Why did he go so ghastly white else? Why did he give me the farm, and loan me three hundred pounds besides? And now I've gone agin him and ruined myself and him too."

"The miserable coward!" said Charles Vigo, as he stamped his foot on the ground; "anything to save his own name."

"You say you mentioned no names to Sir Hilton," observed Mr. Heriot, standing over his abject witness with intense delight. "Now, will you have the goodness to mention to me the name of the person you saw in the wood, and add also your own share in this transaction?"

Skews shivered and trembled, and bowed his miserable head upon his hands, but made no reply.

"You are dumb," said Mr. Heriot. "Well, I can tell you your share in the murder myself. You had shot a hare in the wood the night before, and lost it—for you try the poacher's trick now and then; and coming hither the next day, knowing that you would find the hare hereabouts dead—you had just picked up the stolen game and pocketed it, when you heard voices—the voices of two young ladies in anger—and fearing to be seen, you hid down yonder among the tall fern and watched them. Then one young lady swept away in a tempest of passion, brushing the edge of the pool with her long dress, just here where we stand; and being in a fierce mood, she dragged the trailing silk hastily from the water, and gathered it up around her. In doing this her girdle fell upon the grass, and remained there unregarded. And you, after lingering among the fern a few minutes more, were creeping away on your hands and knees, when once more you heard voices, and you turned back to your old hiding place, and watched again."

Here Skews broke in with an injured air. "See now!" he cried. "Only think of a gentleman coming disguised into a man's house and worming this out of him!—gathering it from words spoken in sleep, or idle things said over a glass at night! Oh, it's mean—I say it's mean in a gentleman to do such things!"

Mr. Heriot seemed for a moment to hesitate whether or no he should kick the reptile that crouched at his feet; but he refrained shrugging his shoulders at his own impatience.

"You miserable scoundrel! said Charles Vigo, coming forward from the shadow where he stood; "is it true I have eaten of your bread, and slept under your roof; and because of this—counting all the money I have given you for nothing—I do not mean to harm one hair of your wretched head. Before I brought you hither, I had taken measures for your escape from the exactions that await you. My motive has been, not to punish you, but to clear an innocent girl from the horrible shadow of guilt cast over her by you and your confederates. But why do I talk to you? Heriot, I am sick of this. Take this wretch away, as we agreed on; and write out his confession, and make him sign it; then let him go out of our sight for ever. I care not to hear his words. He can tell me nothing that my own conviction did not tell me long ago. And I swear solemnly, that the murderer of Eleanor Maristowe shall be in my hands before the world is a month older!"

He went back, as he spoke, to the deep darkness amid the trees, and remained silent, like a man firmly sure of himself, and heeding little what others thought.

(Crowded out last week.)

HAPPY WEDDING.—An event that occurred too late for our last budget took place at the residence of Mr. William Howard on Wednesday, Oct. 21. The occasion was the marriage of his daughter, Maggie, to Mr. Frank Crowe, the ceremony being performed by Rev. John Nell. After the happy couple were made one a most enjoyable time was spent in dancing, which was kept up until daylight next morning. The presents were many and handsome, and THE SUN's rustic young man wishes Mr. and Mrs. Crowe every success and a long life of wedded bliss.

CRAIG DEFEATED!

The election in East Wellington to fill the vacancy in the Legislative Assembly, rendered necessary by the resignation of Col. Clark, took place on Tuesday. The candidates, Messrs. John Craig, proprietor of the Fergus News Record, and James Kirkwood, reeve of Erin township, are both Reformers, and their names came before the Reform convention a couple of weeks ago. Mr. Craig was the convention's choice, and his election was regarded as a foregone conclusion. Mr Kirkwood, however, maintained that the convention was packed and ran practically as an independent candidate. The polling on Tuesday was a surprise to many, and the Reformers are wondering what struck them. Mr. Kirkwood was elected by about 100 of a majority. And thus the banner Grit constituency of East Wellington failed to return the party's nominee. This may be counted a Conservative victory.

The United States, which, as its orators say, is big enough to lick all creation and which is really a big country, may in time grow big enough not to be afraid of being hurt by a poor milliner trying to earn her daily bread as best she may.

JUDGE McCARTHY TAKES A HAND!

He Has Something to Say About Rev. D. C. Hossack's Preaching.

Orangeville, Nov. 10th, 1891.

To the Editor of THE SUN:

SIR,—I noticed in a local contemporary a report of a sermon alleged to have been delivered by the Rev Mr Hossack on Sunday evening, 1st inst, in St. Andrew's church in which according to the report my salary received from the government, my private income, and the taxes I pay, appear to have consumed a portion of the very valuable time of this divine.

Now, I have not the slightest objection in this self-styled "Ambassador of Christ" entertaining his congregation with his private affairs, such as he appears to have been doing, nor have I even a right to complain if he selects for his texts such subjects as the "merits of a recent foot race," "the [illegible] teacher," a recent and big [illegible] the assault on the bowling [illegible] hundred topics. ## A BLOW TO PROHIBITION.

Liquor Licenses to Be Granted in the Northwest Territories.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 8.—The Northwest Territories elections took place on Saturday. The issue was whether the prohibition law in the territories was to be continued or liquor licenses granted. The result was a complete rout of prohibitionists, only two of their candidates so far as can be ascertained being elected. These will represent Wolseley and Battleford. Many of the elections were by acclamation, and these seem to indicate a decided victory for the license people certain.

LAID AT REST.

The Remains of J. S. Fead Interred in the Town Cemetery on Saturday.

In the last issue of THE SUN our readers were furnished with a report of the death of Mr. J. S. Fead, which occurred very suddenly the day before the paper made its appearance. The remains were removed from the office of deceased about an hour after Mr Fead breathed his last to his residence on McCarthy street. Before the casket was closed for the last time hundreds of citizens and friends went up to take a last look at the face they knew so well, and more than one felt a tear trickle down their cheeks as they gazed upon the face that was silent forever.

On Thursday morning Simon and William, brothers of Mr Fead, arrived from Cannington and Woodville, and later on numerous outside friends of deceased came to town.

At 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon—the hour at which the funeral was to take place—Broadway took on a holiday appearance, all the stores being closed until the remains were interred. Religious services were held at the residence by Rev. D. C. Hossack, pastor of St. Andrew's church, and Rev. W. A Hunter, pastor Erskine church, Toronto, formerly in charge of the Presbyterian church of this town. Then the casket was carried to the hearse, Messrs. F. C Stewart, R M P P., Crown Attorney Myers, R F Hunn, T. MacAdam T. Stevenson and W. H. Hunter being the pallbearers. The funeral procession consisted of a large number of carriages and many accompanied the cortege on foot. The Town cemetery was reached about 3 o'clock and after Rev. Hossack and Hunter read the service and offered up prayers all that was mortal of J. S. Fead was consigned to the tomb.

In our brief history of deceased last week we neglected to mention that at one time he practiced law in partnership with P. M. Barker.

Mr. Fead did not leave a will, and his brothers will take charge of the estate. At present Mr. W. T Bailey, the late gentleman's manager, is attending to the banking institution, which, it is said, will be continued by the brothers of Mr Fead.

THE SURROGATE COURT.

Legacies Left by those Who have Gone Before.

The following grants of probate letters of administration and guardianship were made in the surrogate court of the county of Dufferin during the month of October:—On the 2nd October letters of guardianship to Ann Simpson, West Garafraxa, of the infant children of John Simpson, who died on the 25th February, 1890 at West Garafraxa; the interest of the infants in the estate being estimated at $2 362; Messrs. Myers & Robb, solicitors.....October 5th, letters of guardianship to Dr. Barr, Shelburne, of the infant children of John Murdy, late of the city of Buffalo fruit dealer who died November 29 1890; the children reside with their mother in the township of Melancthon; the interest of the infants in the estate is $1 333 33; W L. Walsh, solicitor.....October 5th, probate of the will and codicil thereto of George South, farmer, late of the township of Mono, who died on the 21st September, 1891; personally $935, realty $10,500; William Jackson and Robert Frame, of Mono, executors; W J. L McKay, solicitor.....October 16th, letters of administration of the real and personal estate of Samuel Newell, late of the township of Mulmur, farmer, who died on the 25th July, 1891, personally $1,241 75, realty, $3 100; Louisa Newell, widow of the deceased, administratrix; Messrs. Fisher & Bell, Allistonsolicitors.....October 16th, letters of guardianship to James Watson, Orangeville, of the infant children of Samuel Alexander Lewis Watson, car repairer and his wife Sarah Jane Watson, both of Orangeville, deceased; personally $3,944 75, realty, $600. In this case the grant to James Watson was opposed by James Corbitt, on certain grounds but after trial judgment was given in favor of Watson, who is a brother of deceased father of the infants.

WEDDING AND WINTER.—The signs of winter are growing more noticeable every day, as the numerous weddings go to prove. Last week Mr Jake Phillips section-foreman of the C. P. R was married to Miss Lizzie Wilson, all of this place. On Monday Mr J. O'Hara and Miss Flora Rumbo were united for life. The wedding ceremony took place at the residence of Mr Wm Laing, Orangeville, who, with his charming wife, provided an excellent wedding dinner, after which the happy couple and some town friends drove to the Forks where they dined at Mr James Dent's. The A O U W hall was thrown open and everybody danced to their hearts' content. Many valuable and handsome presents were given to the bride, who is held in high esteem by all who know her. A pleasant time was spent by all, and Mr and Mrs O'Hara have the best wishes of every person for their future happiness.

INJURED FAR FROM HOME.—The many readers of THE SUN around here will be sorry to learn of the accident that happened to Ed Clarridge away up in the lumber woods four miles from Little Current on Wednesday of last week. Ed. and a number of men were cutting down trees, when a lodged tree suddenly gave way and fell among the men, striking Ed a terrible blow. His left arm was broken in two places, and his spinal column was severely injured. Two of the men brought him to Little Current, and Dan. McFarlane, an old friend of Ed's, brought him to the Forks, reaching here on Friday. Dr Martin was waiting at the station, and soon had Mr Clarridge fixed up in good shape. Dan did a generous, kindly act when he gave up his job to come home with an injured comrade. Mr. Clarridge and family have the esteem and sympathy of all, and the hope that he will soon recover is expressed by everybody.

WHITTINGTON.

DEATH OF MR JOHN DUDGEON.—Mr. John Dudgeon, a well known and highly respected resident of Amaranth died at the residence of his nephew Councillor Dudgeon, on Sunday last, at the ripe age of 81 years. Deceased was never married. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon and was largely attended.

DEATH OF A PIONEER.—Amaranth has lost another of her old and respected pioneers—Mr James Crombie who died rather suddenly on Friday last. The deceased was one of the pioneers of the township, having settled here when this part of the country was without roads, and the inhabitants if they wanted anything had to make it themselves or go without. In politics the old gentleman was a staunch Conservative. Being of a kindly disposition, he had many friends, and by industry and care was prosperous. The deceased had reached the advanced age of 83 years. His bereaved friends have the sympathy of the community.

A PARTING SHOT!

ST. ANDREW'S PASTOR WINDS UP HIS SERMONS BY

TALKING AGAINST ADULTERATED LIQUORS.

Dr. Smith's Classic Epistle Answered—The Church Crowded to the Doors—A Slider Sermon Than Usual.

Last Sabbath evening closed upon the town of Orangeville calm and beautiful. At 6 o'clock the electric lights were sparkling in the streets and spreading their brilliancy through the darkness. The large and many colored windows of St. Andrew's added a welcome upon the people who were hurrying at that early hour to secure a seat that they might have the privilege of listening to Calvin's brilliant disciple. Long before the opening hour, 7 o'clock, the church was crowded to overflowing, and the pastor had the pleasure of seeing as many as twelve hundred people before him. As on previous Sundays it was necessary to bring in a large number of seats and chairs and place them in the aisles, and even then all could not obtain seats, and many were forced to go away disappointed.

We do not propose to give more than a mere synopsis, since the matter was not so startling to the public as the two former sermons, and yet we are inclined to believe that it will do as much, if not more, good.

HE REPLIES TO DR SMITH.

The rev gentleman chose as one of his readings the 39th Psalm, verse 1, of which was quoted by Dr Smith in a letter to a local contemporary criticising the preacher: "I said, I will take heed to my ways that I sin not with my tongue: I will keep my mouth with a bridle, while the wicked is before me." Rev. Mr. Hossack remarked that it was amusing to hear a license commissioner expounding the gospel. He said this quotation was not what the doctor thought, but it meant the very opposite. It would be better if he would confine his attention to the act relating to the duties of license commissioners rather than to criticising the utterances of the pulpit. Proceeding with his sermon the pastor chose Proverbs, chap. 29, verse 2: "When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice: but when the wicked beareth rule the people mourn." He justified the course he had pursued in his previous sermons, and contended that the result of his preaching would undoubtedly be productive of much good. He said there were only a few local matters he intended to refer to. He wished to say something about closing the stores on Saturday night. There were not enough people at church on Sunday morning; he knew that was the case in his church and he was sure it was the case in the other churches of the town. He believed that merchants had to work too long on Saturday night, and he believed the people were to blame for this. Why could they not do their shopping before 10 o'clock and allow merchants to go home at a reasonable hour? Quite the other Saturday night, after he had gone to bed, at about 12 o'clock there was a ring at his door, and an errand boy delivered to the night some articles of headgear. He felt that that boy had as much right to be in bed at 10 o'clock as he or anybody else had. Well, this was one of the evils which should be corrected. It was the people's fault more than the merchants that the storekeepers found it necessary to keep open so late. Saturday nights consequently it was impossible for them to attend their different churches on Sunday mornings. He hoped that in future the people would be more considerate and do their shopping at a reasonable hour.

DRINKING GROUND INSECTS.

The rev. gentleman had a word to say about the hotels. He thought there was nothing wrong in being an hotelkeeper since the people gave them the privilege of being hotelkeepers, and if there was anything wrong it was with the community. Rev Mr. Hossack had, however, a great deal to say with reference to the methods employed by the whiskey sellers in the way they did business. He had in his hand a book written expressly for the trade, in which were given recipes for the manufacture of different kinds of liquors. Here followed a number of formulas for making brandy, gin, champagne, catawba. In these recipes the principal ingredients were sulphuric and tartaric acids, alcohol cocki[illegible] or ground toasts, burnt sugar and many other deleterious poison. He said that he could prove that more bogus champagne was consumed in the city of New York than there is real champagne made in all the world. Here he gave a recipe for making champagne showing that the most of it is simply common cider filtered through charcoal with a little alcohol added and some tartaric acid to make it fizz. This is what the gentry of Orangeville were begulling themselves with when they drank the champagne made, as they supposed, from the grapes grown in sunny France.

THE BAR CLERK'S COMPANION.

Cigarettes, he said were made of no such deception as the refreshments of the bar. He often wondered if the smokers realized how they were made. In great American cities little girls and boys are employed to go around and gather up stumps of cigars in the streets and from the bar room floors. These are taken to the great factory and cut into shreds mixed with drugs, and then made into cigarettes. It amused him very much to see some young man going along, possibly a bank clerk, dressed in fine clothes and puffing away at a cigarette. He often wondered if the smoker knew how much filth he was swallowing, or if he ever stopped to inquire.

Before the eloquent preacher finished his discourse he requested those from other churches, and he would esteem it a favor if they would go in their own churches for the next few Sundays, at least so as to give the lie to the imputation that he was preaching sensational sermons for the purpose of drawing a crowd. Mr Hossack said he was doing nothing of the kind for his sermons were based on the bible alone, and if a large crowd came he could not help it. He then announced that this was the last sermon for the present dealing with local evils.

MONO CENTRE.

Mr. R. Henry and sister Charlotte, spent Sunday with friends at Orangeville.

Mr. A McCarston has purchased the east half of lot 21, con 2, east, Mono. The price paid, we understand, was almost $2000.

CALEDON.

HOUSE BURNED.—On Monday of last week the house of Mr John Cowles, lot 31, con 2 west, Caledon, was discovered to be on fire and it was impossible to subdue the flames. The fire is supposed to have started near the chimney through a defective stove pipe. The house and furniture, we understand, was insured for $200 or $300.

A Severe Attack.

DEAR SIRS,—My children were taken ill with alarming sore throats, leading on diphtheria. I had nothing in the house but Hagyard's Yellow Oil which I used with great benefit. I am sure if it had not been for it the disease would have developed into diphtheria. It is a splendid medicine.

MRS. E. CAMERON, Moore's Falls, Ont.

MONTGOMERY'S DEATH!

The Inquest at Grand Valley on Friday—A Curious Verdict.

Coroner Gaviller held an inquest at Grand Valley on Friday last to inquire into the cause of the death of J. A. Montgomery, one of the participants in the fatal Huckley row. A report of the tragedy appeared in last week's SUN, and the facts brought out at the inquest marked but repeats fair one. Crown Attorney Myers conducted the case for the people and W. L. Walsh looked after young Schlosman's interests. A jury, with Mr James Reith as foreman, was sworn. The jury viewed the remains of Montgomery, after which a great deal of evidence was taken. The evidence went to show that the row commenced over a horse that Schlosman had and which Montgomery claimed as the result of a trade. The remainder of the story does not differ materially from that which THE SUN told last week.

It was almost 11 o'clock before all the evidence was in, and after a few minutes' deliberation the jury returned a verdict that puzzled everybody. The jury's decision, in brief, was that Montgomery was dead.

The result of the inquest, however, will not affect the crown's proceeding in the case. It is the intention of the prosecutors to continue the case, and young Schlosman will receive a preliminary hearing before F. M. Patullo on Saturday afternoon. Schlosman still languishes in jail.

CAMILLA.

GONE.—Mr. Harry Culp has gone to the veterinary college at Toronto. We all shall miss Harry, but we hope he'll return a full-fledged vet.

SICK.—Peter Forsyth has been sick with typhoid fever for over a week, but he is now recovering. Dr. Bolstin of Shelburne is attending him.

DON'T FORGET.—Don't forget the Orange concert to be held in Morrison's hall, Camilla, on Friday, the 20th. It's going to be the event of the season.

AN INFANT'S DEATH.—Margaret Jane, infant daughter of William Cooke of this place, died suddenly on the 8th ult. The bereaved parents have the sincere sympathy of the community.

THE SHAMROCK.—A number of the Sons of Ireland of the Camilla lodge attended divine service at St. Mark's church, Orangeville, on Sunday morning last. Many remained to hear Rev Mr. Hossack's sermon in the evening and they are vieing with one another to see who can praise him most.

WHAT THEY SAY.

I could a tale unfold whose lightest word would harrow up thy soul and freeze thy young blood and make thy two eyes start like stars from their spheres.—John Green.

To run or not to run—that is the question.—H. Robinson.

How does Morrison know that it is him who is meant by gorilla, four footed beast, etc?—Joe Howard, sr.

GUESS AGAIN.—Your correspondent laughed long and loud when he read "A Ratepayer's" letter in the Orangeville "Scandal-Monger" last week, charging Bob Bremner and another young man with writing for THE SUN. The writer of the paragraph was ashamed to sign his name but we ask Mr Morrison to come out from behind his corner and let the people see how he looks. It was only a few weeks ago that he wrote to you, Mr. Editor, because some people said he was your correspondent. Now he charges two young men with supplying news to your spicy paper. Morrison should investigate a little more before he accuses innocent persons of being newspaper correspondents. As for myself I'll lie low, but Mr. Morrison will handle a great deal more of "the stuff" before he'll find out who I am. Now Mr. Morrison, I'll bid you adieu.

[A Ratepayer makes a mistake when he accuses Mr Bremner of being our correspondent at Camilla. Of course, if we were at liberty to give our correspondent's name we would cheerfully do so, but our widewake Camilla man wishes to move about unobserved, and we are in duty bound to comply with his wishes in this respect. In justice to Mr. Bremner it may be said that he is no more one of our correspondents than Mr. Morrison was when he was accused of writing.—ED.]

Diseases of the Liver.

You may always know when your liver is out of order, or when you are sick as called bilious, by any of the following symptoms: Pain in the side and back, dizziness, dull headache, a bad taste in the mouth in the morning, sallow colored complexion, yellowish tint in the eyes, costiveness or diarrhoea, of a dry dark color, low spirit, and dismal foreboding. It is acknowledged by all physicians and others, who have seen their action, that Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are a perfect cure for all bilious affections. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all medicine dealers.

The Pope is failing rapidly and realizes that his end is near.

A frightful disease known as Asiatic black tongue is reported to have broken out in Indiana.

Both air and water abound in microbes, or germs of disease, ready to infect the debilitated system. To impart that strength and vigor necessary to resist the effect of these pernicious atoms, no tonic blood-purifier equals Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Messrs Garrett and Senkler of the Canadian-American football team have arrived home.

Two business blocks collapsed in Akron, O., on Saturday afternoon, but no one was killed.

As a cure for cold in the head and catarrh Nasal Balm has won a remarkable record from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It never fails. Give it a trial. All dealers.

Thomas Donly, proprietor of the Grand Central hotel, St. Thomas, has been poisoned by eating mushrooms.

FOUND.—Last evening at the C. P. R station a pair of Astrachan muff ornaments. The owner can have same by applying at this office.

NOT HIS PROFESSION.—Jim Jones, bartender in an Orangeville hotel, committed suicide last week by drowning himself in a mill pond.—Dundalk Herald. Jimmy was a porter, not a bartender.

HALEY — KENNEDY. — A pretty event took place at the residence of Mrs. Kennedy, William-street, on Wednesday afternoon of last week, when her daughter, Nellie, was married to Mr. John Haley of Bookless, Haley & Co., Rev. M. L. Pearson, pastor of the First avenue Methodist church, tied the silken knot in the presence of a few intimate friends of the contracting parties. After the ceremony the happy couple left for a short wedding trip to Toronto and other places. Mr. and Mrs. Haley are comfortably settled in their and real estate on Elizabeth street.

NOT HIS PROFESSION.—Jim Jones, a tender in an Orangeville hotel, committed suicide last week by drowning himself in a mill pond.—Dundalk Herald. Jimmy was a porter, not a barkeeper.

HALEY — KENNEDY. — A pleasant event took place at the residence of Mrs. Kennedy, William street, on Wednesday afternoon of last week, when her daughter Nellie, was married to Mr. John Haley of Bocklea, Haley & Co. Rev. M. L. Pearson, pastor of the First Avenue Methodist church, tied the silken knot in the presence of a few intimate friends of the contracting parties. After the ceremony the happy couple left for points on a long trip to Toronto and elsewhere. Mr. and Mrs. Haley are now housekeeping settled in their new residence on Blythe street.

SHEEP WORRIED.—On Wednesday, the 4th, Mr. Matthew Landry, near Laurel, had two sheep killed by dogs, and the same night his brother Thomas had three sheep killed by the same animals. One of the dogs belonged to Mr. Banks, and it is altogether likely he will settle the damage.

SPECIAL GOSPEL SERVICES.—The Disciples of Christ will hold special gospel services in the Royal Templar's hall, over Endacott Bros.' store, beginning Sunday, Nov. 15, at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Bro. E. Sheppard, pastor of the Walkerton Church of Christ, will preach the ancient gospel of the Apostles. All are invited.

MORE MARKET PRIZE WINNERS.—The weekly market last Thursday was well attended and the prizes seem to have a magnetic effect. Mrs. B Bradley of East Garafraxa took prizes for the best pair of chickens and pail of butter, and Mrs. S Boggs of the same township was awarded prizes for best pair of geese and tub of butter.

NOT THE CAUSE.—A great many people wondered why the "Old Flag" floated from the staff on the postoffice Monday. Some, and they were not a few, took it for granted that Caretaker Wilkins' bouncing baby-boy was being baptised! But that wasn't the cause at all. To cut a long story short the Prince of Wales was 50 years of age that day.

THEY REMEMBERED HIM.—The pupils of the high school presented Mr. F. R. Parker, one of the popular teachers of the school, with a valuable marble clock, previous to his marriage to Miss E. Island. The clock was manufactured by Messrs. E M Morphy, Son & Co., Toronto, and the presentation took place yesterday afternoon.

THE AGRICULTURAL WORKS.—We are informed that Mr J. A. McMaster is meeting with great success in his efforts to organize a joint stock company to carry on the manufacture of the McMaster binder Shares to the amount of $20,000 have been taken up so far and only $10,000 more is needed. Orangeville wants more industries, and we hope to see the foundry booming before many days go by.

H. S LITERARY.—The members of the Orangeville High School Literary Society held their regular weekly meeting on Thursday afternoon last. The following program was carried out in a pleasing manner: Chairman's address, F R Parker; glee, Glee Club; reading, Mr. Eastman; clarionet solo, Mr. Seymour; solo, Miss Spratt; reading, Miss Grey; instrumental, H. Crozier; reading, Miss Leighton.

At Kingston on Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock, as the convicts were being assembled for removal to the prison, a man named Morrison, of a quarry gang, made a dash for liberty and up to the present is free. He was 25 years of age and very keen. It is thought he took to the woods on Saturday night and jumped on a freight train. He arrived there in April, having been sentenced from St. Thomas for three years for larceny.

TORIES AND GRITS "SAW OFF."—Judge Chadwick of Guelph, revising officer for Centre Wellington, is presiding to-day at the court of revision for revising the Dominion voters' lists for Orangeville. Somewhere in the neighborhood of two hundred appeals were made by both parties but the solicitors got together and "sawed off" one hundred and fifty. The remaining fifty will be disposed of to-day, and neither side will make much of a gain.

IS THIS SO? Numerous complaints have reached this office about certain people of the town feeding their pigs stale eggs from Hawkins' packing establishment. If the report is true the sanitary inspector should attend to the matter and stop such work. A year or so ago a great fuss was kicked up about feeding pigs with cleanings from the tannery, and the pigs' bill of fare was changed. Is stale eggs better than tannery refuse?

GREAT TALENT COMING.—The members of the Citizens' band have decided to hold a grand entertainment in the town hall on Friday evening, the 27th. Mrs Caldwell, the great Canadian soprano, and Mr George Fox, the famous violinist, have been engaged for the occasion. Orangeville has one of the best bands in the country, and the people of this town should encourage the boys in every possible way. Don't miss this concert

THE TIME TO ADVERTISE.—Says an exchange: "Do not defer advertising until business "brightens up," and people voluntarily storm your premises over, if need be a barricade of Gatling guns. Under such circumstances the combination of "buck" of chalk and a moderately wide plank in the side walk is all that is necessary. The time to advertise is, on the contrary, when things are so flat that customers have to be pelted with facts, kicked to insensibility with bankrupt stock quotations, laid out on the counter with "slaughter price" duds, and have "cremation" bellowed into their ears before they will spend a cent."

WENT LIKE HOT CAKES. There was a great demand for THE SUN of last week, and although we printed a number of extra copies the supply was soon exhausted. It is a pleasure for us to state that our subscription list is growing rapidly, and as we are not lassoing victims with alleged books, "the best yet!!" or anything of that sort, it speaks volumes for the manner in which this journal is conducted. The merchants of Orangeville advertise judiciously and where they receive the most benefit, and if you glance at our advertising columns you can plainly see where that is. If you are not a subscriber, send in your address and $1 and we will mail you THE SUN until January 1st, 1893.

COMING.—The most important musical number was Mendelssohn's violin concerto, and the event of the evening was the debut here of George Fox, who played two movements of this celebrated composition. To sum up the merits of the young soloist, he has a very sympathetic tone of much purity, exceptional power of execution, and strict accuracy of intonation. His interpretation astonished those among the audience and there was quite a number who had heard this concerto played by the great violinists of Europe. George Fox ought to have a great future before him.—Toronto Mail. This wonderful musician and Mrs Caldwell appear in the town hall on Friday evening, Nov. 27. Receipts in aid of the Citizens' band.

JOE REID AS A GENTLEMAN!

He Keeps Drunks Quiet While Little Mary Jane Hammond Breathes Her Last.

We are told on excellent authority that a most disgraceful exhibition took place in the house where little Mary Jane Hammond, the child who was so fearfully burned, breathed her last in a late hour a week ago last night. It is said that a drunken character of the neighborhood arrived at the house with a big bottle of vile liquor and soon had the dying girl's father in a state of intoxication After the liquor began to take effect the men lost their bearing, and the house which should be as quiet as death was turned into a very noisy place. Joe Reid, the man with many faults, came in the nick of time and compelled the noisy drunks to desist in their disgraceful work and Joe maintained order the remainder of the night. This little act has gained Joe more praise than anything else he could do for the next year, and the people are inclined to overlook his smaller faults if he continues to steer in the right course.

THEY WENT TO CHURCH.—Tyrone lodge No. 8 O.I.P.A., attended services at St. Mark's church on Sunday last About 10 30 o'clock the brethren filed out of their lodge room on Broadway and formed a procession, headed by the Citizens' band, and marched around to the church. The edifice was crowded, and Rev. A. Henderson, the pastor, delivered an appropriate sermon. After church the procession reformed and marched up first avenue and Zina street, thence down Broadway to the lodge-room, the band all the time discoursing sacred pieces. The Sons of Ireland is the youngest and one of the strongest societies in town, and there were about one hundred and twenty-five members in Sunday's march.

TOMORROW EVENING.—On Friday evening—Orangeville's Thanksgiving day—the Citizens' band, under the leadership of Mr. Jesse Ketchum, will give an open air concert on Broadway. If, however, the weather is unfavourable the concert will take place in the the town hall, Mayor Walsh presiding No admission fee, no collection, everything free. A cordial invitation is extended to all. The following program will be rendered:

Overture—The Tournament ...Southwell.
Fantasia The Fairies Moonlight Revels.. Linell
Cornet solo - Philopena Polka.....Keller.
Selection—Opera, "La Sonnambula"....Bellini.
Valse—La Petite Coquette.....Zikoff.
Serenade & Galop—Opera, "Evangeline"..Rice.
Overture—Nuggett Nell.....Southwell.

CANNONBALL TO THUNDERBOLT.—The following letter was lying on the sporting editor's table in THE SUN office when that individual showed up yesterday morning:—Mr. Editor,—The last race between my mare and Mr John Hicks' chestnut horse did not result very satisfactory, and because I was not present I have every reason to believe that my racer was not handled as it should have been, and the decision was given against me. Now, to prove that I believe the above to be true I am prepared to make a match with Mr. Hicks for another race for any sum from $20 to $100 a side. If Mr. Hicks accepts this challange, which I hope he will, I will meet him in THE SUN office at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, the 14th, to arrange the match. Yours truly,

WM. MARSHALL.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS.—The marriage of Miss Emma Island and Mr. Frank R Parker, assistant high school teacher, was happily celebrated at the residence of the bride's mother, corner of Broadway and Second streets, yesterday afternoon. Rev. M L. Pearson performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by only the immediate friends of the family. The bride was attired in a very neat cloth travelling dress. She was assisted in a pleasant manner by Miss Annie Rowlins, while Mr W. Cross of Toronto supported the groom At the conclusion of the ceremony the wedding supper was partaken of and was very tastily gotten up. The presents were numerous and varied amongst the number being a cheque for $50 from Mr. Parker, father of the groom, and a valuable silver service, the gift of the bride's mother, and a handsome marble clock from the pupils of the high school. The young couple left on the evening train on a bridal tour to Buffalo and other points. Mr and Mrs. Parker have THE SUN'S best wishes for a long life of wedded bliss.

JIM O'BRIEN, THE IMPOSTER.—Jim O Brien has made a record in this part of the country that any man would not like to possess. Jim is a very lazy specimen of the human race and he would sooner beg, defraud and steal than do a day's work. Of course, Jim's idle habits get him into mischief, and more than once he has been behind iron bars. But the prison has no terrors for him and he appears to enjoy convict life immensely. Jim takes a great many ways in "raising the wind;" sometimes he passes himself off as a priest. While on a visit here several weeks ago the imposter appropriated an overcoat from the residence of Ald McKitrick and disposed of it to a farmer of Erin township for the sum of $2 After the theft O Brien was traced to Guelph, where he was serving a term in jail. He was released last week, but was re-arrested and brought to Orangeville. At the police court on Monday Jim admitted stealing the overcoat and P M. Pattullo sentenced him to a term of six months in the Central prison at Toronto He will be taken thither in a few days.

GOING TO BE A DANDY.—Grip's comic almanac for '92 will be the thirteenth issue of that popular annual, and the publishers have determined that it shall break the record for brilliancy, humor and typographic beauty. Amongst the features of it will be a double page Cartoon, entitled, "The Dicken's Christmas Party," in which a large number of our public men will figure in more or less appropriate characters, from the works of the great novelist. Special illustrations are being prepared for the almanac by Mr. Wm. Bengough, Mr S. J. West, Mr. E S Bisbee, Mr. Chas. Broughton, Mr. Bert Thompson, Mr. Chas W. Bradley, Mr. A. H. Howard, and many other artists, and the letterpress will be, as usual, of a light and amusing character. The work is to be brought out in the highest style of the printers' art, though there will be no increase in price—10 cents. Keep Grip's forthcoming ALMANAC in mind. It will be out sometime in November.

HELD FOR MURDER!

Bill McCullough, who was Arrested as a Witness, is Charged with Slaying W. P. West.

In THE SUN of last week we published a dispatch from Vancouver, B C, giving details of the murder of W. P. West, at one time a resident of Alton, and the arrest of William McCullough, formerly of this town, as a witness. Since then, however, McCullough has been placed in a more serious position, and now he will have to stand

ON TRIAL FOR MURDER.

Our readers will remember the facts of the affair, and it is unnecessary for us to republish them. Since our last issue a coroner's inquest has been held and the jury returned a verdict in favor of McCullough, but the coroner would not accept it. McCullough, however, was discharged, but the chief-of-police immediately re-arrested him

ON A CHARGE OF SLAYING

W. P. West. He was to have his preliminary trial on Tuesday, but we have not heard the result at the hour of going to press.

Among the witnesses who testified at the inquest was James Tierney, a bartender employed at one of the city saloons. "Jim" Tierney is well known in Orangeville, having kept a butcher-shop here about twelve years ago. Vancouver is full of ex Orangevillians.

PERSONAL.

Mayor Walsh spent Wednesday at Guelph.

Mrs. Jacob Vanywick is ill with typhoid fever.

Misses Bird of Barrie are guests at Mayor Walsh's.

Mr. J A. Haley and bride arrived home Monday evening.

C. B. McKrown, B. A., visited friends at Guelph on Sunday.

A HUNTER'S AWFUL FATE.

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont., Nov. 8.—More than a month since an Englishman named David Allen, who resided in the Magnetawan District, and who spent considerable of his time hunting, started out to examine his traps, but failed to return. For ten days an uninterrupted search was kept up in the woods, it being supposed that he had wandered away and become lost. The search was unproductive of results, however. The mystery surrounding his fate was accidentally unveiled Friday by two hunters, who chanced to look in a copse of bushes. Lying upon the ground, face downward, was the dead body of the hunter, and the condition of the body and the ground showed that he had met a horrible death from starvation Both of his hands were securely fastened in a bear trap He had evidently been in the act of setting the trap when by some means the trap closed upon his wrists in a vice-like grip. Unable to release himself and with no hope of making his voice heard in that vast wilderness, he suffered from the most excruciating mental tortures until starvation and exposure combined ended his existence. His wrists were frightfully lacerated where an attempt had been made to wrench his hands free.

A glass eye may serve as a substitute for the genuine article on some occasions, but there are times when it doesn't fill the bill at all. Here is Mr Katz, who has brought suit in the New York courts to compel his newly wedded wife to abide with him. She refuses to do so upon the ground that he has an artificial eye, which fact she had not been aware of prior to their marriage. The outcome of the suit will be awaited with interest by one eyed husbands.

ADVICE FREE.

KEEP the head cool, the feet warm and the bowels regular, and no disease can attack you. NASAL BALM

Gives relief in a few minutes to those using the Balm. A certain and speedy cure for Catarrh and Cold in the Head and Headache and its kindred complaints.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

Instant Relief, Permanent Cure, Failure Impossible.

Some manifest diseases are closely associated with Catarrh, such as loss of smell, taste, hearing, and symptoms of Blood Poison, general feeling of debility, etc. If you are troubled with any of these or kindred symptoms, your best course is to procure Ely's Cream Balm and commence the treatment at once. A thorough application will be made by the Balm into the nasal passages of each nostril for several days. It is well to begin the treatment when the first symptoms of the disease appear, as it will then prevent the secretions from forming in the head, which is the cause of all the terrible consequences. Catarrh is a disease that attacks the membrane of the nose and head, and by its extension and contamination of the surrounding parts, it soon becomes a source of great annoyance and danger. A cold in the head is quickly cured by the application of the Balm, and catarrhal deafness, headache, and total loss of smell are the results in many cases that it has cured. No other remedy has been found so pleasant and agreeable to use, and none so prompt in its effect. It is not a snuff or a powder, but a healing balm, and is free from injurious drugs. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail. Send for circular. ELY BROS., Owego, N.Y.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The regular meeting of the town council took place in the council chamber on Monday evening, and it was about as unimportant a conclave as has ever been held by our municipal representatives. Mayor Wales, Reeve Lindsey, Deputy reeve Endicott, Ald. Ketchum, Coburn, McKitrick and Fiddis were promptly on time, and Ald. Gillespie pulled up a few minutes afterwards. The minutes of the last meeting were read out by the clerk, and, of course, were adopted. After the accounts were judged to be paid, a communication from R. Moore was read regarding the raising of his assessment. His epistle was referred to the Assessment committee. After Reeve Lindsey read Treasurer Irwin's statement for October Mr. Endicott brought down the T. P. committee's report, which recommended that Mr. Henderson be reimbursed to the tune of $2. It will be remembered Mr. Henderson was "in the hole" for expenses incurred by impounding a horse which was recently sold for $2 25. The report was sanctioned.

Mr. Ketchum read the R & B report, which dealt with the cost of building sidewalks during the past month.

GOT IT AT LAST.

The council went into committee of the whole on a clause of the F & W. report which was left over at the last meeting, and which recommended the purchasing of a new hose reel. Mr. Todd, representing the Waterous Co., of Brantford addressed the council as to the merits of his machine. Several letters were received from rival companies, but the committee decided on the Brantford reel and the report was adopted. The cost of the new reel will be about $160.

Mr. Lindsey inquired if there was enough money at the disposal of the R. & B. to repair the asphalt sidewalk on John street, but the weather is not favorable for such an undertaking.

The Poet McLean was appointed weed-measurer at the old salary.

The council then adjourned after an hours' session.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Counsel for the Delicate.—Those to whom sudden or changeable temperatures are productive of periods of trial should seek the earliest opportunity of removing all obstacles to good health. This cooling Ointment, if overingly rubbed upon the skin, is the most reliable remedy for overcoming all diseases of the throat and chest. Quinsey, inflamed tonsils, sore throat, swollen glands, quinsy catarrh, and bronchitis, usually ushering in this season, may be arrested as soon as discovered, and every symptom relieved by Holloway's simple and effective treatment. The Ointment and Pills are highly commended for the facility with which they successfully conquer influenza; they allay in an incredibly short time the raging fever and teasing cough.

The Czar of Russia.

The Czar of Russia probably has his own troubles as well as its commoner mortals, for we have the advantage in such troubles as dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, bad blood and the like, in being able to procure really a perfect remedy in Burdock Blood Bitters, nature's grand curative tonic and purifier.

Hello, farmer! is that a patent horse you're introducing, or is it the way you exercise your hens? called a smart looking man to a jolly Irishman from the cars as he drew up at Gordon's elevator on Tuesday. The farmer stared in wide-eyed astonishment at the little brown hen squatting on the wagon tongue, where she was clinging for dear life. "B gosh, don't that beat all! why, she must have been roosting there when I hitched up in the dark this morning. I never seen her till this minute! it is a fact, nevertheless, that the little hen made the journey of over twelve miles clinging to the wagon tongue. She made the return trip in a grain bag."—Southampton Banner.

An application was made at Toronto on Thursday morning before Judge Boyd on behalf of the plaintiff's solicitor, M. Wilkins of Arthur, Ont., to compel the defendant to pay the costs of the action of Robinson v. Robinson. The suit was by Mrs. Robinson against her son John of West Luther, to recover dower in a farm formerly owned by her deceased husband. After the action began the mother and son got together and settled it behind the lawyer's back. But the lawyer is on the still hunt for his costs. The motion was referred.

A BENEFICENT DISCOVERY

The Noblest Achievement of Science.

The iron horse, with its tireless strength, its pulses of vapour and its heart of flame, is a glorious exponent of the creative capacity of the human mind; and the metallic nerves through which intelligence courses over a continent prove by every flash of thought which traverses them that man possesses one attribute essentially grand: the power to annihilate space and time. But vastly more important as have been the results of making steam and lightning the common carrier and messenger of the world, the discovery by which weak or impure blood can be vitalized or restored to new vigour and purity by means of internal and external remedies is of infinite value. The resources of vegetable chemistry as developed and applied by Thomas Holloway have proved equal to this mighty task. His famous remedies impart to the stream of life a life-infusing principle which frees the system from all impure and poisonous elements. The powers of chemistry are almost beyond calculation, and as he has brought them to bear upon all the varieties of disease in those invaluable vegetable compounds known as HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, they have compassed their highest and holiest object.

Steam, as the great motor, is a subsidiary agent. Its usefulness consists, mainly, in conveying substantial benefits, with speed and certainty, to the fields in which they are to operate. It is simply the bearer of blessings, not their originator. Of all the freight which it carries over land and sea, there is perhaps none so precious as Holloway's remedies. It is scarcely a figure of speech to say that wildbearers it conveys them it flies with healing on its wings.

Under the influence of the Ointment, the skin, however disfigured by eruptions or excrescences, becomes a tabula rasa, pure, spotless, and transparent; and this cuticle of blemishes is not accomplished by driving back disease into the vital recesses of the system but by neutralising the morbid material which feeds it.

The Pills act upon the internal fluids and the organs which secrete them upon the sanitary principle. They destroy the acrid particles subjected to their chemical action, as infallibly as an alkali neutralizes an acid; and at the same time impart a mild and constant electric action to the secretive and excretive machinery.

The sanction of governments, the patronage of princes, the approval of all Christian nations, the gratitude of pagan millions attest the worth of these twin curatives. In fact there is no region with which England or any country has any commercial intercourse where Holloway would not find himself at home. Some estimate may be formed of the extent and variety of his foreign correspondence, from the fact that sixty corresponding clerks, of which number sixteen are accomplished linguists, are employed in conducting it. He is the centre of a sanitary circle than belts the world.—Daily Republic.

A Sea Voyage.

A sea voyage is an expensive prescription, especially when equally good results as regards health, are to be had by simply taking Burdock Blood Bitters according to directions. It is a specific for dyspepsia, cleanses the blood, regulates the liver, bowels and kidneys and removes all impure matter from the system.

A Fact

WORTH knowing to that blood disease which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Fresh testimony of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, medicine like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. E. Irving Dodge, 129 West 126th street, New York, certifies:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my home six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I am freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

THE BEST FAMILY PILL IN USE

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

Keep the Works in good order.

SIMCOE, Ont., January 15, 1891.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that the ingenuity can see. Life is as the tree piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the watch, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but year you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity increases, until at last, what might have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is noticed, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until total wreck, the result, which have been cured with little trouble, had some attention been paid to the first symptom of the disease. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours truly,
H. F. ARMES.

ARNPRIOR, Ont., Feb. 12, 1891.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills," but with a blind faith, but a faith based on the result of an actual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I always find them, or other my travelling outfit, complete without a box of Morse's Pills.

Yours,
M. F. McKENNA.

A valuable Article with truth.

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—This is to certify that I used to Patent Medicines, including various kinds of Pills. I tried one of the Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills then of all the others combined. The result was I find my suffering ceasing.

Yours, &c.,
R. L. RICHARDSON.

The Rest of Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof. Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day. A series of experiments has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of even one week, they will yield from 14 to 17 per cent. less milk, and that of an inferior quality. Such milk will on an average, turn sour in twenty four hours less than does milk drawn from the same or similar cows receiving salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analyzed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock fine and coarse, at

Newspaper Decisions

1. Any person or persons who take a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intended fraud.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

IS the "Most" Hair-dressing. It restores the color to gray hair; promotes a fresh and vigorous growth; prevents the formation of dandruff; makes the hair soft and silken; and imparts a delicate but lasting perfume.

"Several months ago my hair commenced falling out, and in a few weeks my head was almost bald. I tried many remedies, but they did no good. I finally bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and, after using only a part of the contents, my head was covered with a heavy growth of hair. I recommend your preparation as the best in the world."—T. Munday, Sharon Grove, Ky.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a number of years, and it has always given me satisfaction. It is an excellent dressing, prevents the hair from turning gray, insures its vigorous growth, and keeps the scalp white and clean."—Mary A. Jackson, Salem, Mass.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for promoting the growth of the hair, and think it unequaled. For restoring the hair to its original color, and for a dressing, it cannot be surpassed."—Mrs. Geo. Le Fever, Eaton Rapids, Mich.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a cure for dandruff."—J. W. Bowen, Editor "Enquirer," McArthur, Ohio.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past two years, and found it all it is represented to be. It restores the natural color to gray hair, causes the hair to grow freely, and keeps it soft and pliant."—Mm. M. V. Day, Cohoes, N. Y.

"My father, at about the age of fifty, lost all the hair from the top of his head. After one month's trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor the hair began coming, and, in three months, he had a fine growth of hair of the natural color."—P. J. Cullen, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Poetry.

HER FIRST.

Bright smiles are her face adorning,
There are snatches of song on her tongue,
Since the postman was here this morning
The maiden has smiled and sung

In her bosom she carries some treasure,
For her head goes often there,
And it gives her a world of pleasure
It is plain from her joyous air.

Sometimes in the glass she glances,
Though why she can hardly say,
For the light in her eye that dances
Shows her thoughts to be far away,

Her work, when she tries to begin it,
Soon drops from her hand to the floor;
She goes to her room for a minute,
And she stays there an hour or more.

She has found on the earth an Eden—
Fair roses along life's way;
The postman has brought to the maiden
Her first love letter to-day

TRUE TO THE LAST.

CHAPTER XX.

"You looked upon it as a lucky thing to get the Trewavas family into your power," said Mr. Heriot; "as although you might have hindered the murder, you would not——"

At this instant the short, quick bark of a dog was heard at a distance, and once more Charles Vigo came forward hurriedly.

"Take him away, Heriot, I entreat you," he said. "I want Sir Anthony to find me here alone."

The wiry Mr. Heriot seized the coward Skews by the arm, and jerked him from the ground to his limp feet.

"Now, man, come with me," said Mr Heriot, "unless you want to be knocked down, and kicked along the road before me."

Skews needed not this warning Meek, illused, as he considered himself, he went a martyr, protesting he only wanted to be heard fairly, and to tell all the truth, since he must tell it, in his own way.

"I shall sit up for you, Charles," said Mr. Heriot, as he disappeared, leading the coward with him.

Charles Vigo listened, first for the rustle of their steps among the leaves, and then for the distant sound of wheels, which echoed from the road beyond the wood; and during this time the short, anxious bark that had sounded far away approached nearer, but he did not turn his ear to this till the sound of rapid wheels had died in the distance.

"They are safe away," said Charles Vigo to himself. "Now let Sir Anthony Roskelly find out the truth, if he can. I want none of his meddling, and I will not pander to his hate of Lady Trewavas."

The young man walked slowly up the green knoll, and sat down on one of the felled trees that lay desolate about the ruins of the Lady's Bower.

"Is it thus Sir Hilton Trewavas thinks to forget?" he said, wearily, as he looked upon the ruin around. "If he had not Olive's love, I could almost pity him."

Turning from the thought that pained him, Charles Vigo dislodged himself of the thick red wig that came up on his forehead, the uncouth collar, the glaring necktie, and other devices by which he had so effectually disguised himself; after which he lighted a match to see the time by his watch; then he lighted a cigar, and, coolly smoking, awaited his foes.

Creeping between the underwood, crawling among the shadows, came Sir Anthony Roskelly, and that beaming cherub, Mr. Eslick. The horses and the groom had long ago been left behind, for, with a grim sense of fun, Charles Vigo had traversed the wood to the Lady's Bower by a path well known to himself and Bolster, but impossible for an equestrian, and by no means a paradise for elderly feet to tread.

"Where is this frisky dog taking us, Sir Anthony?" whispered Mr Eslick, with anxious face.

"He is going to his master, Beelzebub," replied the baronet, in a fearful ill humor. "But I care not. I mean to follow to the end. Go back, Eslick, if you are a coward."

"I am no coward, Sir Anthony. I follow you, sir," said Mr Eslick, beaming affably on his patron, and turning his head, as was his wont, to give him full benefit of the smile that gleamed from ear to ear.

"It's dark as a bag," said Sir Anthony, gruffly, "and the path is as full of brambles as a blackberry pie. I don't think this hunt is turning out as amusing as I expected. Mind now, Eslick, if we are made fools of by a dog, we splitting on each other."

"You may rely on me, Sir Anthony," said Mr. Eslick. "This little episode, is, as you say, but a piece of fun, though of course it may lead to results."

"Well, if it does," resumed Sir Anthony, "hang it is then, Eslick; but still leave me out in the matter; for, except a jest, it wouldn't tell well to the world."

Mr. Eslick's reply came in stifled accents, for he had just bumped his nose against a tree, and found the contact painful.

"It's my opinion, Eslick," continued Sir Anthony, "that you are an unlucky fellow in this Trewavas affair. I am afraid you'll never get that sang little piece I promised you. Ah," he added, with a bitter oath, "I should count a thousand to back it as nothing, so I could bring that old woman's pride down. Well, she's lonely and miserable enough at Trewavas now."

Sir Anthony forgot his own grim solitude, and all the quarrels and hatreds of his sour old age, as he thus rejoiced over the woes of Lady Trewavas.

"I have done my best, sir," observed Mr. Eslick, in an injured voice. "I have been indefatigable in my efforts to get at the root of this affair; but really, since young Mr. Vigo mixed himself up with it, I have been completely baffled."

"All the more reason why you should find him, man," replied Sir Anthony. "Why else should I take such an absurd jest as this in hand? On my life, I half repent of it. Where is that devil of a dog now? I don't see him," he said, turning round, and stopping suddenly. "The dog is going straight for the Lady's Bower."

"Not a pleasant place Sir Anthony, at this time of night, certainly," said Mr. Eslick; "but having carried the jest so far, I suppose we may as well go on. I scarcely believe in ghosts—do you?"

"Not I," replied Sir Anthony.

At this moment Bolster broke into a joyous bark, and the two pursuers, hastening into the open space around the dismal pool, beheld a calm figure seated on a felled tree, round which the dog bounded with frantic demonstrations of delight. This was so unexpected a denouement, that both men stood still in amazement, not unmingled with a slight chill of fear.

"Who is it?" said Sir Anthony, peering into the starlight at the dim, motionless figure.

"Charles Vigo, Sir Anthony. Very much at your service," said the young man, taking off his hat.

"The deuce!" muttered Mr. Eslick, in an undertone. "This young fellow baffles us at every turn."

For a moment Sir Anthony was speechless; then he broke into a gruff laugh.

"Well, Mr Vigo," said he, "I own we have not gained much by our jest. We can't take you up, you see; so I suppose we must bid each other good night."

"If you thought by finding me to discover the lady, whom I, and I only, have the courage to defend," remarked Charles Vigo, "you have certainly deceived yourselves. But you can search the wood and the pond if you like."

He rose, and lighted another cigar as he spoke, and by the glow of the match, Sir Anthony saw the ill made dress, and the red wig of the Dorset farmer.

"Why, hang it!" he exclaimed, starting back, "what is the meaning of this?"

"It means, Sir Anthony," said Charles, "that I have rather turned the tables on you, and enjoyed this jest even more than you have. It means also, that I know what I am about, and you don't. I did not think a red wig and a Dorset twist of the tongue would have taken you in so easily."

Sir Anthony was speechless from rage and defeat; Mr. Eslick from admiration. Meanwhile Charles Vigo stooped and untied the cord that had shackled Bolster's speed. As he rose he confronted the two men face to face, and there was something in his honest and frank countenance that startled them both.

"I am sorry, for your father's sake, to see you hiding like a disguised vagabond," murmured Sir Anthony. "And I fear it is Mr. Eslick's duty now to arrest you as an aider and abettor——"

"Stop!" said Charles Vigo, holding up his hand; "I have never aided or comforted any criminal. When I handed Miss Varcoe into a carriage, on the night she quitted the neighborhood, there was no warrant out against her to my knowledge. I cannot, therefore, be justly accused of the misdemeanor you name. But when you grant a warrant for my apprehension, Sir Anthony, and I am brought up before you as a culprit, I shall answer your accusation satisfactorily. Until then, farewell."

He lifted his hat, whistled to Bolster, and walked slowly away.

"Eslick! Eslick!" spattered Sir Anthony; "had not you better miss him!"

Charles Vigo heard the words, turned, and once more confronted the two men.

"You will find me at Bosvigo to-morrow, until noon," he said calmly. "If you have any charge to bring against me, make it, and I will answer it before the nearest magistrate. You are so fond of playing amateur policeman, Sir Anthony, that I trust you will do me the honor of arresting me yourself."

This last cut stung the wily baronet into fury.

"Take care what you say, Mr. Vigo," he retorted. "I can fling worse in your teeth than that. A policeman stands on the side of law and order; but on whose side have you stood while you haunted this country, a disguised ruffian? A black wig and a pedlar's pack deceive me no more than a red wig now. What is the meaning of such a rotten farce?"

Charles Vigo's laugh was irritating as he answered him.

"It means," said he, "that you are not the only one who can play amateur policeman, Sir Anthony. And perhaps I can perform the part more effectively than you, since hatred and revenge do not enter my motives."

"What do you mean by that, sir?" roared the baronet, striding towards the young man with uplifted hands.

"Pray, Sir Anthony, do not quarrel. Be calm. I entreat you," said the beaming Mr. Eslick, rushing between the belligerent, and turning his seraphic smile first on one, then on the other. "What Mr. Vigo has just said requires our earnest attention. It seems to intimate that he has made himself acquainted with facts unknown to us. Mr. Vigo—sir, if we have made a mistake in supposing you a friend of that unhappy person who committed a murder on this very spot——"

"I am neither friend or foe to that person," interrupted Charles Vigo.

"And if," continued Mr. Eslick, "through the advantage of a disguise, you have ascertained new facts, and gathered fresh evidence against that person, allow me to say, Mr. Vigo, that however singular and unprecedented your conduct may have been, you are certainly bound to give information of those facts at the nearest police station."

"Thank you, Mr. Eslick, for your uncalled for advice," said Charles Vigo. "The course you recommend is precisely the one I intend to pursue. I believe it is scarcely necessary that we should continue this conversation. Do not, however, forget I shall be at Bosvigo till to-morrow noon, to answer all charges. But, if I may be permitted to give advice in my turn, I should say your own reputations, and perhaps the ends of justice also, will be better kept by your allowing this singular jest to remain a secret. Permit me now to bid you both good morning."

He walked calmly away, and disappeared among the trees, leaving Sir Anthony galled, and Mr. Eslick smiling in amazement.

"Curse his impudence!" said Sir Anthony, fiercely, as he turned to retrace his steps.

Had the wood been less dark, or the place less dismal with ghastly recollections, he would not have endured the irritating companionship of the smiling and puzzled Eslick. As it was, he suffered him as he traversed the tangled paths, and rode away from him discourteously as soon as he reached and mounted his horse. But the cherub overtook him in anxious haste

"What can young Mr. Vigo mean?" he said, in a low voice.

"Nothing," replied Sir Anthony. "Lies—all lies! He meant to humbug us—nothing more. He is in league with her, confound him! Is it likely he has found out anything more than you and I know, or is going to tell it if he has?"

There is no salve like self-conceit, and it has the double power of both blinding and soothing. Under its application Mr Eslick's smile beamed out brightly, and he felt an increased respect for his patron.

"You are quite right, Sir Anthony," said he. "But of course this young fellow will find he can't humbug you, nor me either, I hope. Shall I go down to Bosvigo in the morning?"

"No," said the baronet, snappishly. "Let the simpleton go his own way for a while; we shall catch him tripping one day; there is nothing against him now that we can substantiate."

Mr. Eslick early interpreted this to mean, that Sir Anthony would rather hear nothing more of Charles Vigo and his dog. Accordingly, he departed without another word.

Meanwhile Charles Vigo went on to Trewavas Church-town, and had an interview with that quiet and observant inspector, who had once made an unnoticed remark to his chief, Mr. Eslick, respecting jealously. These two between them wrote a letter to the Home Secretary, and Charles Vigo took it up with him the next day to London.

Sir Anthony Roskelly was glad to hear that he was gone. But riding to Menhaniot farm in a day or two to worry Farmer Skews, he was not so well pleased to ascertain that that individual had also departed, "on a visit to a friend," as said Dame Skews, in a shaky voice, as the baronet rode away with a sour visage.

CHAPTER XX.

"Dear me!" exclaimed Mrs. Gunning; "this is rather curious."

Mrs. Tobias Gunning was scanning the advertisement sheet in the Times, while the marital nose was poring greedily over the other portion of the paper, which never fell into her hands until it was at least a day old, by which time the masculine Gunning mind was supposed to have mastered it, and done with it. The nose now lifted itself above the broad sheet, and looked at Mrs. Gunning for an explanation.

"Very curious, my dear," continued Mrs. Gunning. "Only listen."

"If O. V., who left L——in Ireland so abruptly on the tenth of last month, will communicate with the L—— family, she will greatly oblige them."

"Stuff!" remarked Mr. Gunning, as his nose dropped again over the newspaper. "Advertisements every day—people who don't——"

The rest was lost in the depths of the Gunning organ of speech.

"My dear, that's perfectly true," said Mrs. Gunning. "Of course there are advertisements of this sort every day, imploring people, who never turn up, to return to some distressed relative. But what is curious in this, that L—— certainly means Langley, and O. V. must be Opal Vansittart, that companion of whom Florian raved so in her letters to me a few months ago."

"Well?" said Mr. Gunning, rather snappishly.

"Well, my love," said Mrs. Gunning, with a puzzled air on her intelligent countenance, "I don't understand it, that's all. When I called on the Langleys yesterday, they never said a word about it."

"Why should they?" asked Mr. Gunning.

"My darling Tobias, that question does not display your usual talent," said Mrs. Gunning. "Don't you perceive, if there was no secret, they would have mentioned the matter to me frankly?"

"Why——" began Mr. Tobias; but he did not trouble himself to say the rest.

"My love, I'm glad to hear you speak again with your usual ability and good sense," observed Mrs. Gunning. "Why, you say, should they necessarily tell me all their affairs? Why, my dear because Florian is all frankness, and their affairs are usually so commonplace and simple, that they really might be placarded at the toll-gates, and it wouldn't matter. Then, again, poor Mrs. Langley is often very lonely in her blindness, and when she gets a chat with an old friend like me, she always tells me everything there is to tell. Now she did not tell me of this advertisement; therefore I come back to my old argument, that this matter is out of the common run of their simple affairs, and so it was not commented on and related to me."

"Ah, yes," said Mr. Gunning, "I see. Now what——"

"That's just it, my dear," continued Mrs. Gunning; "that's exactly what puzzles me. As you sensibly observe, what possible mystery can there be connected with this governess which they don't wish me to know? You see, if they had mentioned the advertisement to me, and said simply they didn't know the girl's address, and wanted to find her, I should have thought nothing of it. As it is, I am quite intrigue, as the French say."

Mr. Tobias listened to all this silently and then plunged his nose into the Times again, as though he considered he had now bestowed a sufficient portion of his time and attention on his wife. Mrs. Tobias, seeing this, perused the advertisements meekly, sometimes flashing her keen eyes across some interesting paragraph, which her husband was reading ponderously to himself. In doing this, she perceived that he selfishly held Galignani between the big sheets of the Times. This was more than even her saintly worship could endure.

"Now, my dear Tobias," she expostulated, "I declare that is very unlike you, to be selfish! I am sure you can't know that you are trying to read two papers at once. You can spare me one, love."

Slightly abashed at this remark, Mr. Gunning drew out the smaller journal, and handed it to her.

"I shall want it soon," he said.

Mrs. Gunning did not hear this long speech, for her astonished eyes had alighted upon this:

"If O. V. is in Paris, she is earnestly, passionately entreated to send her address to Bolster."

"Now what can this mean?" exclaimed the bewildered Mrs. Tobias. "Bolster is certainly the name of Charles Vigo's dog. Other people in Paris may not know it, but I know it; therefore this advertisement betrays a good deal to me. Ah! O. V. too—the very same initials! what a singular coincidence! But, of course, they don't mean the same person."

Her face flushed suddenly, as though some quick rush of thought, half forgotten, had returned to her, like an unexpected flash of light in a darkened room. And, laying the paper on her lap, she sat with sealed lips, looking on the obtuse countenance of her husband. In her love for him, she deemed herself almost wicked for this silence—this concealment of that dim, strange thought, half a fear, which had struck her once before when conversing with Vivian Dameral. Yet she dared not speak it; so, in very truth, she dared not.

Receiving no explanation from his wife, Mr. Gunning drew his paper from her in sullen silence, and strove to find out for himself the cause of excitement. His eye fell in a moment on the advertisement; but this did not explain to him why Mrs. Tobias should flush, and her hand should tremble.

"You are absurdly excitable this morning," he said. "I see no cause for it here."

His innocuous critique failed to rouse Mrs. Gunning into speech, and Mr. Gunning was again obliged to escort himself.

"It is only the old affair over again," said he—"some detective over here trying to get at that girl."

Mrs. Gunning was roused now. She fixed her eyes on her husband in intense admiration of his genius.

"My dear love," said she, "I hadn't the wit to see that. I thought it was a genuine advertisement of Charles Vigo's. Do you think the poor creature will be taken in by it, and send her address? But there is no direction given; so, after all, it must be the real Bolster."

Mrs. Gunning changed her tone here to a more cheerful accent; but she still looked anxiously at that fountain of intelligence, Mr. Gunning. For reply, he pointed to the advertisement; and she now saw, in small type, an address given at an inn, at one of the barriers of Paris.

"A well known resort of the police," said Mr. Gunning—"that is, known to the initiated."

His wife heard him in silence. She let the paper drop on the floor, and rested her clasped hands on her lap.

"I wonder where she is?" she said at last. "I wish I knew."

The marital nose looked at her severely over the rim of the Times, and ejaculated, in a voice of astonishment, "You!"

"You are surprised, Tobias dear," said his wife. "You were going to observe, it would be remarkably unpleasant for you and me if I did know. But somehow, I pity her; it must be so horrible to feel oneself hunted, as she has been."

"Keep pity for deserving," said Mr. Gunning. "Poor John Trewavas ruined, unsettled in mind; Sir Hilton, career blighted; Lady Trewavas, old age miserable; Mrs. Maristowe, broken-hearted."

"Stop, stop, my love!" exclaimed Mrs. Tobias. "You overwhelm me with the fearful picture you draw of all those poor creatures. I will amend my words. I will say I wish I knew where John Trewavas is."

The Gunning nose granted assent to this, and added a wonder that Sir Hilton had discontinued to advertise in Galignani for his brother.

"O, he got so tired of it," returned Mrs. Tobias. "In every paper the same thing:—'Mr. Trewavas is earnestly implored to communicate with his friends, who are in great anxiety concerning him. He will find his brother at the Hotel du Louvre.' I declare I was sick of seeing this, and of what use to continue it, if he has left Paris, as every one thinks?"

At this moment a servant entered, demanding to know if Monsieur and Madame were at home, as a gentleman below wished to speak to them. In reply to this the Gunning nose made itself so startling, in an attempt to speak French, that the domestic stared at it in hopeless consternation.

"Your master is desiring you to show the gentleman up," interpreted Mrs. Gunning, severely. "It is wonderful, my love, how stupid these French servants are," she added in English.

In a moment Herbert Langley was announced, the servant saying at the same time to Mrs. Gunning, "The laundress wishes to see madame, if madame will be so good."

Madame was so good. She left the room after greeting her guest; hence she did not hear the conversation that ensued between him and her husband.

"Here is madame's handkerchief," said the laundress, "which was missing last week. It dropped from the basket as I was carrying it up stairs; but a compatriote of madame, who lodges in the attic above me, found it, and gave it to me."

Mrs. Gunning took the tiny web, in her hand, and scanned it with a curious eye.

"This is not mine," she said.

"Not madame's!" said the laundress. "Ah, mon Dieu! what have I done? I have brought madamoiselle's own handkerchief, which she gave me to wash, instead of madame's."

"Whose handkerchief did you say this is?" asked Mrs. Gunning.

"It belongs to the compatriote of madame," replied the laundress—"the poor young thing who gets her living by teaching English. Ah, it is a sad trade, that teaching, there are so many in it. But this little creature won't trouble the trade long. She has not given a lesson this fortnight—she has been top ill."

"Ill," said Mrs. Gunning, as she passed her hand across her forehead.

"Oh, madame need not be alarmed," replied the woman; "it is nothing infectious. If I permit myself to speak what I think, I should say grief and famine—that's her disease. Will madam settle the bill this week?"

Mechanically Mrs. Gunning drew forth her purse, but her eyes were still fixed on the handkerchief.

CHAPTER XX.

"You looked upon it as a lucky thing to get the Trewavas family into your power," said Mr. Heriot; "as although you might have hindered the murder, you would not——"

At this instant the short, quick bark of a dog was heard at a distance, and once more Charles Vigo came forward hurriedly.

"Take him away, Heriot, I entreat you," he said. "I want Sir Anthony to find me here alone."

The wiry Mr. Heriot seized the coward Skews by the arm, and jerked him from the ground to his limp feet.

"Now, man, come with me," said Mr. Heriot, "unless you want to be knocked down, and kicked along the road before me."

Skews needed not this warning. Meek, illused, as he considered himself, he went a martyr, protesting he only wanted to be heard fairly, and to tell all the truth, since he must tell it, in his own way.

"I shall sit up for you, Charles," said Mr. Heriot, as he disappeared, leading the coward with him.

Charles Vigo listened, first for the rustle of their steps among the leaves, and then for the distant sound of wheels, which echoed from the road beyond the wood; and during this time the short, anxious bark that had sounded far away approached nearer, but he did not turn his ear to this till the sound of rapid wheels had died in the distance.

"They are safe away," said Charles Vigo to himself. "Now let Sir Anthony Roskelly find out the truth, if he can. I want none of his meddling, and I will not pander to his hate of Lady Trewavas."

The young man walked slowly up the green knoll, and sat down on one of the felled trees that lay desolate about the ruins of the Lady's Bower.

"Is it thus Sir Hilton Trewavas thinks to forget?" he said, wearily, as he looked upon the ruin around. "If he had not Olive's love, I could almost pity him."

Turning from the thought that pained him, Charles Vigo directed his eyes to of the thick red wig that came up on his forehead, the uncouth collar, the glaring necktie, and other devices by which he had so effectually disguised himself; after which he lighted a match to see the time by his watch; then he lighted a cigar, and, coolly smoking, awaited his foes.

Creeping between the underwood, crawling among the shadows, came Sir Anthony Roskelly, and that beaming cherub, Mr. Eslick. The horses and the groom had long ago been left behind, for, with a grim sense of fun, Charles Vigo had traversed the wood to the Lady's Bower by a path well known to himself and Bolster, but impossible for an equestrian, and by no means a paradise for elderly feet to tread.

"Where is this frisky dog taking us, Sir Anthony?" whispered Mr Eslick, with anxious face.

"He is going to his master, Beelzebub," replied the baronet, in a fearful ill humor. "But I care not. I mean to follow to the end. Go back, Eslick, if you are a coward."

"I am no coward, Sir Anthony. I follow you, sir," said Mr. Eslick, beaming affably on his patron, and turning his head, as was his wont, to give him full benefit of the smile that gleamed from ear to ear.

"It's dark as a bag," said Sir Anthony, gruffly, "and the path is as full of brambles as a blackberry pit. I don't think this hunt is turning out as amusing as I expected. Mind now, Eslick, if we are made fools of by a dog, no splitting on each other."

"You may rely on me, Sir Anthony," said Mr. Eslick. "This little episode, is, as you say, but a piece of fun, though of course it may lead to results."

"Well, if it does," resumed Sir Anthony, "brag of it then, Eslick; but still leave me out in the matter; for, except a joke, it wouldn't tell well to the world."

Mr. Eslick's reply came in stifled accents, for he had just bumped his nose against the back of Mr. Vigo, who, turning round, said, with a start, "Why, man, what ails you? Have you been bitten by a mad dog? Why, I have been completely baffled."

"All the more reason why you should find him, man," replied Sir Anthony. "Why else should I take such an absurd jest at this in hand? On my life, I half repent of it. Where is that devil of a dog now? I don't see him," he said, turning round, and stopping suddenly. "The dog is going straight for the Lady's Bower."

"Not a pleasant place Sir Anthony, at this time of night, certainly," said Mr. Eslick; "but having carried the jest so far, I suppose we may as well go on. I scarcely believe in ghosts—do you?"

"Not I," replied Sir Anthony.

At this moment Bolster broke into a joyous bark, and the two pursuers, hastening into the open space around the dismal pool, beheld a calm figure seated on a felled tree, round which the dog bounded with frantic demonstrations of delight. This was so unexpected a denouement, that both men stood still in amazement, not unmingled with a slight chill of fear.

"Who is it?" said Sir Anthony, peering into the starlight at the dim, motionless figure.

"Charles Vigo, Sir Anthony. Very much at your service," said the young man, taking off his hat.

"The deuce!" muttered Mr. Eslick, in an undertone. "This young fellow baffles us at every turn."

For a moment Sir Anthony was speechless; then he broke into a gruff laugh.

"Well, Mr. Vigo," said he, "I own we have not sailed much by our jest. We can't take you up, you see; so I suppose we must bid each other good night."

"If you thought by finding me to discover the lady, whom I, and I only, have the courage to defend," remarked Charles Vigo, "you have certainly deceived yourselves. But you can search the wood and the pond if you like."

He rose, and lighted another cigar as he spoke, and by the glow of the match, Sir Anthony saw the ill-made dress, and the red wig of the Dorset farmer.

"Why, hang it!" he exclaimed, starting back, "what is the meaning of this?"

"It means, Sir Anthony," said Charles, "that I have rather turned the tables on you, and enjoyed this jest even more than you have. It means also, that I know what I am about, and you don't. I do not think a red wig and a Dorset twist of the tongue would have taken you in so easily."

Sir Anthony was speechless from rage and defeat; Mr. Eslick from admiration. Meanwhile Charles Vigo stooped and untied the cord that had shackled Bolster's speed. As he rose he confronted the two men face to face, and there was something in his honest and frank countenance that startled them both.

"I am sorry, for your father's sake, to see you hiding like a disguised vagabond," murmured Sir Anthony. "And I fear it is Mr. Eslick's duty now to arrest you as an aider and abettor——"

"Stop!" said Charles Vigo, holding up his hand; "I have never aided or comforted any criminal. When I handed Miss Varcoe into a carriage, on the night she quitted the neighborhood, there was no warrant out against her to my knowledge. I cannot, therefore, be justly accused of the misdemeanor you name. But when you grant a warrant for my apprehension, Sir Anthony, find I am brought up before you as a culprit, I shall answer your accusation satisfactorily. Until then, farewell."

He lifted his hat, whistled to Bolster, and walked slowly away.

"Eslick! Eslick!" spattered Sir Anthony; "had not you better seize him!"

Charles Vigo heard the words, turned, and once more confronted the two men.

"You will find me at Bosvigo to-morrow, until noon," he said calmly. "If you have any charge to bring against me, make it, and I will answer it before the nearest magistrate. You are so fond of playing amateur policeman, Sir Anthony, that I trust you will do me the honor of arresting me yourself."

This last cut stung the wily baronet into fury.

"Take care what you say, Mr. Vigo," he retorted. "I can fling worse to your teeth than that. A policeman stands on the side of law and order; but on whose side have you stood while you haunted this country, a disguised vagabond? A black wig and a pedlar's pack deceive many young Mr. Vigo, mixed up with it, I have been completely baffled."

"All the more reason why you should find him, man," replied Sir Anthony. "Why else should I take such an absurd jest at this in hand? On my life, I half repent of it. Where is that devil of a dog now? I don't see him," he said, turning round, and stopping suddenly. "The dog is going straight for the Lady's Bower."

Centre Wellington Conservatives Want Another Fight.

THE VOTERS' LISTS IN GOOD SHAPE.

Orangeville and East Garafraxa Courts of Revision—Another Election Cannot Come too Soon to Suit Us.

Judge Chadwick, the revising officer for Centre Wellington, held a court on Thursday last at the court house for the final revision of the Dominion voters' lists. The Grits had gone in for wholesale appealing, their applications in all numbering 121. Some of the best votes in town were attacked by them, the names of many persons who had as good a right to vote as Andrew Semple himself, figuring in the appeals. Whether or not the idea was to give color to the reports which they had spread that the lists had been "stuffed" with fraudulent votes it is hard to say, but it certainly looks that way. No less a person than Andrew Semple, Esq., M. P., was the appellant; over his own signature he sent out notices to upwards of 50 of the stalwart young Conservatives of Orangeville whose votes were as unquestionable as his own, challenging their right to exercise the franchise. These same young men are eagerly awaiting the opportunity which the decision of the election court on the 7th of December will give them to let Mr. Semple know that their votes are perfectly good. The Grits had 121 appeals in all, 25 of which were to add Reform names to the list and 96 to remove the names of Conservatives. They succeeded in adding 10 and removing 44, the result being that 67 of their appeals were dismissed and 54 allowed. The Conservatives applied to add 13 of their friends and succeeded in adding 10. The Tories appealed against the names of 62 Grits and had 48 of them removed thus 58 of their appeals were successful and 17 unsuccessful.

The net result, therefore, was a Conservative gain of 4 although the Liberal appeals numbered in all 56 more than the Conservative. On the preliminary list the followers of Abott added 76 names and the Grits 23, so that as a result of the efforts of the politicians the voters' lists will show an increased Conservative majority of 57.

IN OLD EAST GARRY.

In East Garafraxa on Friday Mr. Sample was rather more fortunate. The Conservatives had taken the precaution to see that the names of their friends had been placed upon the preliminary list. The consequence was that they only had 17 applications to put on new names, in 9 of which they were successful. As Mr. Semple's supporters had been very careless in the matter of the preliminary lists our friends could only find three names which they thought open to objection, and upon investigation those names were found to be all right. To make up for their former carelessness the Grits had to make a great splurge at the final court. They appealed against the names of 51 Conservatives and in 19 cases they succeeded and in 32 they failed. They applied to add 22 of their friends and they got 12 of them on.

READY FOR THE FRAY.

The Orangeville and East Garafraxa lists were never in better shape for the Conservative party as the first vote that is taken will show.

Judge Chadwick discharged the difficult duties of his position to the entire satisfaction of both parties, his decisions being eminently fair and in no case being challenged. Mr. Walsh looked after the interests of the Conservatives at both courts. In Orangeville Mr. Myers and Mr. McKay represented Mr. Semple and in East Garafraxa Mr. Donaldson of Fergus and Mr. McKay acted for him. Mr. Hunter and Mr Semple took an active interest in fighting the battles for their respective parties, while the energetic Dr. Lewis hustled to beat the band in getting the witnesses to court that were required by his party.

EDITORIAL NOTES

SPEAKING of the East Wellington election the Brampton Times, a strong Reform journal, says: The farmers have acted sensible in this election, in returning one of their own class. Mr. Kirkwood must have polled nearly every vote in Erin Township, and also a large vote in Erin Village. He is evidently very popular in his own township as he has been elected reeve of it five times by acclamation. He is a nephew of Mr. David Kirkwood of this town.

It is significant that Professor Goldwin Smith has openly asserted in a paper read to a reform club in Toronto that he is in favor of the annexation of Canada to the United States because of the reasons he gave for his opinion. Annexation, he declares, is the inevitable destiny of the Dominion, regardless of the desires of her people as to political relations with Great Britain or to the United States. Canadians must share this continent with Americans, and, in order to possess security and prosperity, must be bound up with them in hundreds of ways that are inconsistent with remaining an English colony.—New York Press. Mr. Prof. and Sol White are great men, but the Canadian people don't take much stock in their predictions. This country can jog along all right without being annexed to the great Republic.

CALEDON.

SICK.—Mr. J. Atkinson, who has been attending the high school at Orangeville, we are sorry to say, has been compelled to return home through illness. We hope soon to see you amongst again, Jack.

LAID AT REST.—On Monday the remains of Johnston W. Morrison, the 18-year-old son of Mr. Robert Morrison of Toronto, were brought to Caledon on the morning train and interred in the burying-ground here. Mr. Morrison and family resided near Melville Cross until a few years ago, when they removed to Toronto. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of their many friends here.

THE TRUSTEES' MANIFESTO.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOL BOARD TALK TO THE PEOPLE OF ORANGEVILLE.

Inspector Gordon and Rev. D. C. Hossack Referred To—A Lively Time Expected.

A special meeting of the members of the Orangeville public school board was called for Monday evening. After that council had finished a busy session the P. S. trustees took possession of the chamber. Chairman Savage, Secretary Leighton, and Messrs. Wilcox, Dodds, Kelly and Perdue were present. Mr. J. M. Bennett of the North ward was unable to be present owing to sickness, and Mr. W. Fleming of the East ward was unavoidedly absent.

About 8:15 o'clock the ball was set a rollin' by the chairman announcing that the meeting had been called for the purpose of taking action in the matter of inspector Gordon's report, which was very unfavorable to the school. After this announcement had been made the secretary read a resolution, which is given in full below. Mr. Dodds agreed with the report until it tendered advice to Rev. D. C. Hossack, pastor of St. Andrew's church. Readers of THE SUN will remember the scorching sermons delivered by the rev. gentleman during the past few weeks, which were fully reported in these columns. A few words were changed in the resolution, but Mr. Dodds was not satisfied and he did not think it proper to give the minister any advice. Trustee Kelly did not appear to relish the advisory clause, but he did not take a hand in the debate. During the discussion Mr Wilcox told Mr. Dodds that he (Dodds) would support the motion if it had been any other minister in the town except his own. Mr. D. denied the accusation, and still held the opinion that it was improper to dictate to Mr. Hossack as to how the rev. gentleman should use his talents. Apparently the board got tired of the debate and Mr. Leighton made a motion that the report be adopted. Mr. Wilcox seconded the resolution, which carried. Messrs. Leighton, Wilcox and Perdue supported the motion and Messrs. Kelly and Dodds refrained from voting.

THEIR MANIFESTO.

The address, for it is nothing more than a statement issued by the board of trustees for the ratepayers of this town, is as follows:

To the Public School Supporters of the Town of Orangeville:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—The Board of Public School Trustees of the town of Orangeville thinks the time has arrived when you should be acquainted with the condition of matters in connection with the public school, owing to a report read at the board's last regular meeting from Inspector Gordon on the condition of the school. The Post paper has given you an editorial on the public school. It was a surprise party, but as the report was a gross misrepresentation of the facts the P. S. Board takes the liberty of making a reply through the local papers.

A report, to be of any value, must be specified in its nature, must deal with facts, and, in case of defects, must suggest proper remedies. The Board wanted a detailed report of the work being done by each teacher. The law makes it the duty of the Inspector to make such a report, but he did nothing of the kind. He did not even make a pretense of separating the good from the bad. Was he afraid to make a straightforward report, or was he unable to do it? He does not wish to injure any teacher, but shows his kindness by letting his imputations rest upon all alike. Surely Inspector Gordon knows it is his duty to inform the Principal and teachers of what he finds amiss. Does he do this? Did he help them in any way? Did he examine classes? He thinks the majority of the staff are weak in teaching power. Does he know that an unsympathetic critic makes teachers nervous? Some teachers may be weak, but let the result of their work judge them. Who are they? At least six teachers, according to the inspector's report, have displayed much weakness. Surely the sweeping and extravagant statements, followed up with a gratuitous insult to the board and teachers, do not apply to all. Would the inspector have the board dismiss the whole staff? If not, then why make such a damaging statement?

When a good teacher leaves a school no matter who his or her successor may be, the school sustains a serious loss. The teacher, in order to succeed, must be acquainted with the school. Now, seven out of the ten teachers entered on their duties either at the beginning or during the present term. An extensive change like this has not taken place at any previous time. When we consider this change to teachers unacquainted with the work, together with the disturbing element, the Model school, can we reasonably expect as good work? The salaries paid teachers here, it is believed, will compare favorably with those paid in other towns.

As to the inattention of pupils, the Principal informs us that during the time of the Inspector's visit he (the Principal) examined four of the higher classes in spelling and arithmetic, subjecting the pupils to a written test (which the inspector never does) with the following results:—

Class 1—Spelling good; Arithmetic, fair.
" 2— " poor; " poor
" 3— " excellent; " fair.
" 4— " good; " good.

He also examined a primary class and found all the pupils well fitted for promotion. This does not substantiate the wholesale statement of the Inspector.

That things are not going from "bad to worse," and that the "glory and pride" have not departed from our public school may be inferred from the following facts:

Eighteen pupils passed the last H. S. entrance examination, the average number passing at the last three examinations being eighteen. The average number passing at the six preceding examinations was twelve.

As to "complaints," the Board has in every case done all that was possible or just, and that the Principal and teachers are always ready and willing to redress every known wrong; but as to the numerous complaints made to Mr. Gordon the Board must say that he keeps them wonderfully secret. This subject is not yet exhausted, but the Board does not wish to take up too much space at present. The Board hopes you may be able to understand, at least somewhat dimly, some of the reasons why it treated the Inspector's report in such a "strangely courteous way."

Before closing we deem it necessary in our own defence to refer to the action of the Board in connection with the male and female teacher, the latter being dismissed and the former resigning. The Board would have been very anxious indeed to keep silent on these matters, as it is of the opinion that no good can be done by publishing scandals, whether great or small, and only that which is necessary in the performance of its duty, which it has discharged in a just and fearless manner. No notice would have been taken of the Board's action in these cases had not a sensational reference been made to one in the press and to both from the pulpit. The Rev. Mr. Hossack, in St. Andrew's church, led you to believe that the P. S. Board was very lenient with the male teacher for a very serious offence, while it dealt very harshly with the female teacher for a minor one. But the facts show an entirely different conclusion; and how could it be otherwise when the rev. gentleman did not take the trouble to find out the facts? The P. S. Board only hopes that the Rev. Mr. Hossack will acquaint himself with facts in the future, and use the talent of delivery which God has given him to better advantage. Reports of indisposition had been current for months, and complaints made to different members of the Board in reference to the female teacher, but the trustees refused to take action until they were thoroughly satisfied that the reports were correct. The Board had no other alternative, in the performance of its duty, but dismiss her, as when asked to resign she positively refused, though admitting the indisposition herself. In the case of the male teacher it was less than twenty-four hours after the Board was satisfied he was guilty until he was out of the school and another teacher employed in his place. Any Board of P. S. trustees who would rashly take action to dismiss a teacher without being fully satisfied that the cause for dismissal was correct would not deserve the confidence of the ratepayers twenty-four hours; and their action might make the town responsible for a large amount of damages. In conclusion the Board might say its regular meetings were always held in the usual public place, notwithstanding reports to the contrary.

SHORT AND SWEET!

The Lamp Remains Where it is—What's the Matter with the New Brigade?

The regular meeting of the chosen eleven was convened in the council chamber on Monday evening last, and the session lasted just twenty-five minutes.

As usual, Mayor Walsh presided and was ably assisted by Reeve Lindsay, Deputy-reeve Endacott, Ald. Green, Ketchum, Fiddis, Coleau, Gillespie and McKitrick.

COME BACK, OLD ARC.

The first piece on the program was the reading of a petition from some residents of Zina street about an electric light that had been moved from the corner of Zina and Faulkner streets further down the latter street. Nearly everybody aired their opinions on this great topic, but chairman Fiddis made the speech of the evening. He defended the action of the S. L. committee in removing the light, and wound up by saying that he was not fishing for the ratepayers' votes. A vote was taken and the count showed that four supported the petition and the same number were opposed to it. Mayor Walsh had to give the casting vote, and he polled it in favor of keeping the lamp where it is.

Two accounts were passed and then several questions were fired at the chairmen of the different committees.

Mr. Ketchum wanted to know if any rebate would be given to persons who purchased more than one plot in the town cemetery. The cemetery bylaw regulates this.

Mr. McKitrick asked for a report from the Cemetery committee.

Mr. Ketchum replied if the fire brigade captain had made any report yet. "No" was the answer.

Chairman Gillespie, in reply to a question, said the new hose reel would be along in a few days.

IF NOT WHY NOT?

Ald. McKitrick wanted to know if the new fire-brigade had practiced any since it was re-organized. The F. & W. chairman said the weather was unfavorable for practice. Mr. McK. thought if the firemen did not turn out now and again it would be as bad as the old management.

Six dollars was placed to the R. & B. committee's credit for the purpose of gravelling a road near the Credit.

Mayor Walsh read a motion authorizing the treasurer of Mono, who asked that such a motion be passed, to receive from the Ontario government the sum of $122, under the new land improvement act. Our share of the boodle is $1.25.

CAMILLA.

CALLED HOME.—We are extremely sorry to chronicle the death of Mrs. James Large, who died suddenly on Monday after a few hours' illness. Deceased was well-known and highly respected, and Mr Large has the deepest sympathy of the community in the great loss he has sustained.

LITTLE LOCALS.—Things are quiet around here of late ... Mr. Doney has been indisposed for a long time, but we are glad to see him around again .... Barrister John Kyles, wife and child, of Toronto are visiting the former's father, Mr James Kyles ... Thanksgiving services were held in both Presbyterian and English churches here on Thursday, and were extra well attended.

DYE, THE DYE!—In looking over a dye company's list of testimonials we found the following testimony of a prominent Camilla man: "I have used your dyes with great success in changing a light grey to a jet black; in fact it does the work so well that everybody thinks I have a new suit, and I have a notion to get married in it.

IT'S SIMPLY GREAT.—It is reported Glenoe and Camilla sportsmen are trying to arrange a scrub hunting match. The matter has not been finally settled, however, but we believe they arranged on the following score:—Squirrels count 2; sparrows, 7; rabbits, 20; foxes, 35; gorillas or other wild animals, 100. Considering the last stipulature Camilla should win by a hang some score.

THEY ARE AFTER HIM.—It runs in our mind, and it makes our dreams pleasant—What? We are under the impression, which has been made plainer since the last issue of THE SUN, that somebody is on your correspondent's track. We believe he has a knife in his belt, and it is said his nose is bent towards the ground in a vain attempt to catch our scent. We're the artful dodger and don't you forget it! Ha! Ha! Ha!

A SEVERE LOSS.—A week ago Mr. Thos. Mahaney of Glenoe lost a valuable colt by death. It was said by competent judges of horseflesh to be one of the best and sale in this vicinity. Tom is a jolly good fellow and we all expected the colt would grow up and his him off to all the dances in the country. Tom is a great caller-off, but we hope this will not keep him away. He will be on deck just the same.

ELECTION TALK.—Just now a great deal is being said about who will compose the new council. Mr. Allen is going to retire from the reeveship and the contest, we are inclined to believe, will be between Mr. James Snell and Mr. Island, our present deputy-reeve. It is too bad that these men will run as both their services are required at the council and both of them cannot be reeve. If Mr. Pigott runs for deputy-reeve he will find an opponent in 2nd Deputy reeve Dynes. A whole mob of councillors are on the war-path, but poetry at the council next year will be scarce, because poet Joe Reid is going to Manitoba. Keep your weather-eye open, dear Mr. Sun, and you will shine on lots of fun. We will talk more on municipal politics next week.

LAUREL.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The Amaranth township council will meet for the transaction of business in the hall here on Tuesday, December 15, at 10 o'clock a. m.

THE POLITICAL POT.—The municipal pot has not commenced to boil in this township yet, but as the year draws to a close and aspiring candidates pop up THE SUN will keep its Amaranth readers posted.

BARN MOVED.—Last week Mr. Samuel Wallace of Orangeville moved Mr. John Banks' barn about 60 rods. Mr. Wallace performed the work in less than a day and a half. We can recommend him to those requiring anything in his line.

SENT UP FOR LIFE.

The Arab Murderer Escapes the Chair of Fire.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Habib Saad, the Arab peddler who was arrested at Guelph, Ont., on a charge of murdering a young girl who traveled with him, was found guilty of murder in the second degree. Yesterday Saad was brought into court and received his sentence at the hands of Judge Lambert. It was that he be confined in state's prison for the remainder of his natural life. Habib received his sentence with the utmost composure.

Our readers will remember that these peddlers visited Orangeville this summer, and it was shortly after they left here that the murder was committed.

WE'RE ALL OFF!

That's What "Spero" Thinks, and He Says Church-Systems are Slandering God.

Rev. D. C. Hossack's recent sermons have drawn comment, both favorable and unfavorable, from everywhere; but we'll venture to say that no person has expressed an opinion similar to this effusion of "Spero." He says:

To the Editor of THE SUN:

DEAR SIR,—A series of anti-fall sermons was preached in your town recently, but none of them was directed against one of the greatest evils of the 19th century. I allude to the evil of slandering God. Presbyterianism, Roman Catholicism, Church of Englandism and Sectism are slandering and dishonoring God in teaching the doctrine of unending woe and eternal pain. Those who teach that there are "infants in hell a span long," and that every minute thirty human beings drop into the unspeakable and unending torments of hell, ought to be informed for their good that "whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin," "though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished." It is true many are dishonoring God not knowing what they do, but it is also true, "He that doeth wrong, shall receive for the wrong which he hath done." "There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked." "Sin when it is finished bringeth forth death."

The eternal torment theory had a heathen origin, and was hatched in the "dark ages" when long winded orators thought it godly to do evil, that good might result. The time is coming—early in the millennial day (when the church of the first born is organized to rule and bless the world, and do a work which the great apostacy cannot do) the consecrated followers of Christ will have the pleasure of seeing the counterfeit church systems and useless things go to their own place. According to Scripture, knowledge and light is increasing. "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

Yours charitably,
SPERO.

MONO CENTRE.

THE MARCH OF PROGRESS.—We notice that Mr. Joseph Henry is making extensive improvements on his residence which gives it quite an imposing appearance. We wish Mr. Henry a long and prosperous life to enjoy its comforts.

TO AND FRO.—Miss Fanny Henry is visiting friends in Orangeville.....Mr. James Barber has returned from Toronto, where he has been engaged for the past three weeks.....Miss Katie Kidney is spending a month with friends in Arthur.

DEATH OF A MONO PIONEER.—Truly may it be said of us that, "In the midst of life we are in death." This was very forcibly illustrated here last week when one of Mono's oldest pioneers in the person of Mr. Robert Anderson passed from the stage of action. On Friday Mr. Anderson attended a threshing, but complaining of severe pain in the evening he went home. During the night he became gradually worse and succumbed at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The remains, which were interred at Relessey, were followed thither by a very respectful cortege. Peace to his ashes!

B. & F. B. S.—A meeting of the Mono Centre branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society was held in Ebenezer church last Wednesday evening. After the various reports were read and accepted the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Rev. F. Woodger, president; Robt. Irwin, secretary-treasurer; Robt. Turnbull, depositor; Messrs. Turnbull, Magwood, Steward, Coleman, Anderson and Bower, collectors. After a short address by Rev. Mr. Ballentyne, the Rev. Mr. Duff, agent of the society, gave a very interesting and able address on the workings and successes of the society.

An uncle and nephew, the former living in the country and the latter residing in town, made a disgraceful scene on east Broadway last Thursday evening. Of course they were drunk, and they punched and kicked each other until the police force and two politicians arrived and put a stop to their peculiar amusement.

We are pleased to hear that Mac. Gray, an old Harriston boy, has mustered enough of the needful so as to enable him to go into business on his own book. He has opened out a store and thinks competition in Orangeville and is, we are informed, doing a first class trade. Mac. has never been employed and is making the brothers of Orangeville hustle.—Harriston Tribune.

ARCHIVES OF ONTARIO

on Thursday last at the court house for the final revision of the Dominion voters' lists. The Grits had gone in for wholesale appealing, their applications in all numbering 121. Some of the best votes in town were attacked by them, the names of many persons who had as good a right to vote as Andrew Semple himself, figuring in the appeals. Whether or not the idea was to give color to the reports which they had spread that the lists had been "stuffed" with fraudulent votes it is hard to say, but it certainly looks that way. No less a person than Andrew Semple, Esq., M. P., was the appellant; over his own signature he sent out notices to upwards of 50 of the stalwart young Conservatives of Orangeville whose votes were as unquestionable as his own, challenging their right to exercise the franchise. These same young men are eagerly awaiting the opportunity which the decision of the election court on the 7th of December will give them to let Mr. Semple know that their votes are perfectly good. The Grits had 121 appeals in all, 25 of which were to add Reform names to the list and 96 to remove the names of Conservatives. They succeeded in adding 10 and removing 44, the result being that 67 of their appeals were dismissed and 54 allowed. The Conservatives applied to add 13 of their friends and succeeded in adding 10. The Tories appealed against the names of 62 Grits and had 48 of them removed thus 58 of their appeals were successful and 17 unsuccessful.

The net result, therefore, was a Conservative gain of 4 although the Liberal appeals numbered in all 56 more than the Conservative. On the preliminary list the followers of Abott added 76 names and the Grits 23, so that as a result of the efforts of the politicians the voters' lists will show an increased Conservative majority of 57.

IN OLD EAST GARRY.

In East Garafraxa on Friday Mr. Semple was rather more fortunate. The Conservatives had taken the precaution to see that the names of their friends had been placed upon the preliminary list. The consequence was that they only had 17 applications to put on new names, in 9 of which they were successful. As Mr. Semple's supporters had been very careless in the matter of the preliminary lists our friends could only find three names which they thought open to objection, and upon investigation those names were found to be all right. To make up for their former carelessness the Grits had to make a great spurge at the final court. They appealed against the names of 51 Conservatives and in 19 cases they succeeded and in 32 they failed. They applied to add 22 of their friends and they got 12 of them on.

READY FOR THE FRAY.

The Orangeville and East Garafraxa lists were never in better shape for the Conservative party as the first vote that is taken will show.

Judge Chadwick discharged the difficult duties of his position to the entire satisfaction of both parties, his decisions being eminently fair and in no case being challenged. Mr. Walsh looked after the interests of the Conservatives at both courts. In Orangeville Mr. Myers and Mr. McKay represented Mr. Semple and in East Garafraxa Mr. Donaldson of Fergus and Mr. McKay acted for him. Mr. Hunter and Mr Semple took an active interest in fighting the battles for their respective parties, while the energetic Dr. Lewis hustled to beat the band in getting the witnesses to court that were required by his party.

EDITORIAL NOTES

SPEAKING of the East Wellington election the Brampton Times, a strong Reform journal, says. The farmers have acted sensible in this election, in returning one of their own class. Mr. Kirkwood must have polled nearly every vote in Erin Township, and also a large vote in Erin Village. He is evidently very popular in his own township as he has been elected reeve of it five times by acclamation. He is a nephew of Mr. David Kirkwood of this town.

It is significant that Professor Goldwin Smith has openly asserted in a paper read to a reform club in Toronto that he is in favor of the annexation of Canada to the United States because of the reasons he gave for his opinion. Annexation, he declares, is the inevitable destiny of the Dominion, regardless of the desires of her people as to political relations with Great Britain or to the United States. Canadians must share this continent with Americans, and, in order to possess security and prosperity, must be bound up with them in hundreds of ways that are inconsistent with remaining an English colony.—New York Press. Mr. Prof. and Sol White are great men, but the Canadian people don't take much stock in their predictions. This country can jog along all right without being annexed to the great Republic.

CALEDON.

SICK.—Mr J. Atkinson, who has been attending the high school at Orangeville, we are sorry to say, has been compelled to return home through illness. We hope soon to see you around again, Jack.

LAID AT REST.—On Monday the remains of Johnston W. Morrison, the 15-year-old son of Mr. Robert Morrison of Toronto, were brought to Caledon on the morning train and interred in the burying-ground here. Mr. Morrison and family resided near Melville Orange until a few years ago, when they removed to Toronto. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of their many friends here.

unfavorable to the school. After this announcement had been made the secretary read a resolution, which is given in full below. Mr. Dodds agreed with the report until it tendered advice to Rev. D. C. Hossack, pastor of St. Andrew's church. Readers of THE SUN will remember the reorching sermons delivered by the reverend gentleman during the past few weeks, which were fully reported in these columns. A few words were changed in the resolution, but Mr. Dodds was not satisfied and he did not think it proper to give the minister any advice. Trustee Kelly did not appear to relish the advisory clause, but he did not take a hand in the debate. During the discussion Mr Wilcox told Mr. Dodds that he (Dodds) would support the motion if it had been any other minister in the town except his own. Mr. D. denied the accusation, and still held the opinion that it was improper to dictate to Mr. Hossack as to how the rev. gentleman should use his talents. Apparently the board got tired of the debate and Mr. Leighton made a motion that the report be adopted. Mr. Wilcox seconded the resolution, which carried. Messrs. Leighton, Wilcox and Purdue supported the motion and Messrs. Kelly and Dodds refrained from voting.

THEIR MANIFESTO.

The address, for it is nothing more than a statement issued by the board of trustees for the ratepayers of this town, is as follows:

To the Public School Supporters of the Town of Orangeville:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—The Board of Public School Trustees of the town of Orangeville thinks the time has arrived when you should be acquainted with the condition of matters in connection with the public school, owing to a report read at the board's last regular meeting from Inspector Gordon on the condition of the school. The Post paper has given you an editorial on the public school. It was a surprise party, but as the report was a gross misrepresentation of the facts the P. S. Board takes the liberty of making a reply through the local papers.

A report, to be of any value, must be specified in its nature, must deal with facts, and, in case of defects, must suggest proper remedies. The Board wanted a detailed report of the work being done by each teacher. The law makes it the duty of the Inspector to make such a report, but he did nothing of the kind. He did not even make a pretense of separating the good from the bad. Was he afraid to make a straightforward report, or was he unable to do it? He does not wish to injure any teacher, but shows his kindness by letting his imputations rest upon all alike. Surely Inspector Gordon knows it is his duty to inform the Principal and teachers of what he finds amiss. Does he do this? Did he help them in any way? Did he examine classes? He thinks the majority of the staff are weak in teaching power. Does he know that an unsympathetic critic makes teachers nervous? Some teachers may be weak, but let the result of their work judge them. Who are they? At least six teachers, according to the inspector's report, have displayed much weakness. Surely the sweeping and extravagant statements, followed up with a gratuitous insult to the board and teachers, do not apply to all. Would the inspector have the board dismiss the whole staff? If not, then why make such a damaging statement?

When a good teacher leaves a school no matter who his or her successor may be, the school sustains a serious loss. The teacher, in order to succeed, must be acquainted with the school. Now, seven out of the ten teachers entered on their duties either at the beginning or during the present term. An extensive change like this has not taken place at any previous time. When we consider this change to teachers unacquainted with the work, together with the disturbing element, the Model school, can we reasonably expect as good work? The salaries paid teachers here, it is believed, will compare favorably with those paid in other towns.

As to the inattention of pupils, the Principal informs us that during the time of the Inspector's visit he (the Principal) examined four of the higher classes in spelling and arithmetic, subjecting the pupils to a written test (which the inspector never does) with the following results:—

Class 1—Spelling good; Arithmetic, fair.
" 2— " poor, " poor.
" 3— " excellent, " fair.
" 4— " good, " good.

He also examined a primary class and found all the pupils well fitted for promotion. This does not substantiate the wholesale statement of the Inspector.

That things are not going from "bad to worse," and that the "glory and pride" have not departed from our public school may be inferred from the following facts:

Eighteen pupils passed the last H. S. entrance examination, the average number passing at the last three examinations being eighteen. The average number passing at the six preceding examinations was twelve.

As to "complaints," the Board has in every case done all that was possible or just, and that the Principal and teachers are always ready and willing to reform every known wrong; but as to the numerous complaints made to Mr. Gordon the Board must say that he keeps them wonderfully secret. This subject is not yet exhausted, but the Board does not wish to take up too much space at present. The Board hopes you may be able to understand, at least somewhat dimly, some of the reasons why it treated the Inspector's report in such a "strangely courteous way."

Before closing we deem it necessary in our own defence to refer to the action of the Board in connection with the male and female teacher, the latter being dismissed and the former resigning. The Board would have been very anxious indeed to keep silent on these matters, as it is of the opinion that no good can be done by publishing scandals, whether great or small, and only that which is necessary in the performance of its duty, which it has discharged in a just and fearless manner. No notice would have been taken of the Board's action in these cases had not a sensational reference been made to one in the press and to both from the pulpit. The Rev. Mr. Hossack, in St. Andrew's church, led you to believe that the P. S. Board was very lenient with the male teacher for a very serious offence, while it dealt very harshly with the female teacher for a minor one. But the facts show an entirely different conclusion; and how could it be otherwise when the rev. gentleman did not take the trouble to find out the facts? The P. S. Board only hopes that the Rev. Mr. Hossack will acquaint himself with facts in the future, and use the talent of delivery which God has given him to better

SHORT AND SWEET!

The Lamp Remains Where It Is—What's the Matter with the New Brigade?

The regular meeting of the chosen eleven was convened in the council chamber on Monday evening last, and the session lasted just twenty-five minutes.

As usual, Mayor Walsh presided and was ably assisted by Reeve Lindsey, Deputy-reeve Endacott, Ald. Green, Ketchum, Fiddis, Coleman, Gillespie and McKitrick.

COME BACK, OLD ARG.

The first piece on the program was the reading of a petition from some residents of Zina street about an electric light that had been moved from the corner of Zina and Faulkner streets further down the latter street. Nearly everybody aired their opinions on this great topic, but chairman Fiddis made the speech of the evening. He defended the action of the S. L. committee in removing the light, and wound up by saying that he was not fishing for the ratepayers' votes. A vote was taken and the count showed that four supported the petition and the same number were opposed to it. Mayor Walsh had to give the casting vote, and he polled it in favor of keeping the lamp where it is.

Two accounts were passed and then several questions were fired at the chairmen of the different committees.

Mr. Ketchum enquired if the fire brigade captain had made any report yet. "No" was the answer.

Chairman Gillespie, in reply to a question, said the new hose reel would be along in a few days.

IF NOT WHY NOT?

Ald. McKitrick wanted to know if the new fire-brigade had practiced any since it was re-organized. The F. & W. chairman said the weather was unfavorable for practice. Mr. McK. thought if the firemen did not turn out now and again it would be as bad as the old management.

Six dollars was placed to the R. & B. committee's credit for the purpose of gravelling a road near the Credit.

Mayor Walsh read a motion authorizing the treasurer of Mono, who asked that such a motion be passed, to receive from the Ontario government the sum of $122, under the new land improvement act. Our share of the boodle is $1.25.

CAMILLA.

CALLED HOME.—We are extremely sorry to chronicle the death of Mrs. James Large, who died suddenly on Monday after a few hours' illness. Deceased was well-known and highly respected, and Mr Large has the deepest sympathy of the community in the great loss he has sustained.

LITTLE LOCALS.—Things are quiet around here of late.... Mr. Doney has been indisposed for a long time, but we are glad to see him around again.... Barrister John Kyles, wife and child, of Toronto are visiting the former's father, Mr. James Kyles... Thanksgiving services were held in both Presbyterian and English churches here on Thursday, and were extra well attended.

DYE, CAN DYE!—In looking over a dye company's list of testimonials we found the following testimony of a prominent Camilla man:—"I have used your dyes with great success in changing a light grey to a jet black; in fact it does the work so well that everybody thinks I have a new suit, and I have a notion to get married in it.

IT'S SIMPLY GREAT.—It is reported Glenoe and Camilla sportsmen are trying to arrange a scrub hunting match. The matter has not been finally settled, however, but we believe they arranged on the following score:—Squirrels count 2; sparrows, 7; rabbits, 20; foxes, 35; gorillas or other wild animals, 100. Considering the last stipulature Camilla should win by a hang some score.

THAT'S AFTER HIM.—It runs in our mind, and it makes our dreams pleasant—What? We are under the impression, which has been made plainer since the last issue of THE SUN, that somebody is on your correspondent's track. We believe he has a knife in his belt, and it is said his nose is bent towards the ground in a vain attempt to catch our scent. We're the artful dodger and don't you forget it! Ha! Ha! Ha!

A SEVERE LOSS.—A week ago Mr. Thos. Maharg of Glenoe lost a valuable colt by death. It was said by competent judges of horseflesh to be one of the best and sals in this vicinity. Tom is a jolly good fellow and we all expected the colt would grow up and his him off to all the dances in the country. Tom is a great caller-off, but we hope this will not keep him away. He will be on deck just the same.

ELECTION TALK.—Just now a great deal is being said about who will compose the new council. Mr. Allen is going to retire from the reeveship and the contest, we are inclined to believe, will be between Mr. James Snell and Mr. Island, our present deputy-reeve. It is too bad that these men will run as both their services are required at the council and both of them cannot be reeve. If Mr. Pigott runs for deputy-reeve he will find an opponent in 2nd Deputy reeve Dynes. A whole mob of councillors are on the war-path, but poetry at the council next year will be scarce, because poet Joe Reid is going to Manitoba. Keep your weather-eye open, dear Mr. SUN, and you will shine on lots of fun. We will talk more on municipal politics next week.

LAUREL.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The Amaranth township council will meet for the transaction of business in the hall here on Tuesday, December 15, at 10 o'clock a. m.

THE POLITICAL POT.—The municipal pot has not commenced to boil in this township yet, but as the year draws to a close and aspiring candidates pop up THE SUN will keep its Amaranth readers posted.

BARN MOVED.—Last week Mr. Samuel Wallace of Orangeville moved Mr. John Banks' barn about 60 rods. Mr. Wallace performed the work in less than a day and a half. We can recommend him to those requiring any thing in his line.

THAT'S WHAT "SPERO" THINKS, and He Says Church-Systems are Slandering God.

Rev. D. C. Hossack's recent sermons have drawn comment, both favorable and unfavorable, from everywhere; but we'll venture to say that no person has expressed an opinion similar to this effusion of "Spero." He says:

To the Editor of THE SUN:

DEAR SIR,—A series of antisoul sermons was preached in your town recently, but none of them was directed against one of the greatest sins of the 19th century. I allude to the evil of slandering God. Presbyterianism, Roman Catholicism, Church of Englandism and Sectism are slandering and dishonoring God in teaching the doctrine of unending woe and eternal pain. Those who teach that there are "infants in hell a span long," and that every minute thirty human beings drop into the unspeakable and unending torments of hell, ought to be informed for their good that "whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin," "though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished." It is true many are dishonoring God not knowing what they do, but it is also true, "He that doeth wrong, shall receive for the wrong which he hath done." "There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked." "Sin when it is finished bringeth forth death."

The eternal torment theory had a heathen origin, and was hatched in the "dark ages" when long winded orators thought it godly to do evil, that good might result. The time is coming—early in the millennial day (when the church of the first born is organized to rule and bless the world, and do a work which the great apostacy cannot do) the consecrated followers of Christ will have the pleasure of seeing the counterfeit church systems and useless things go to their own place. According to Scripture, knowledge and light is increasing. "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

Yours charitably,
SPERO.

MONO CENTRE.

THE MARCH OF PROGRESS.—We notice that Mr. Joseph Henry is making extensive improvements on his residence which gives it quite an imposing appearance. We wish Mr. Henry a long and prosperous life to enjoy its comforts.

TO AND FRO.—Miss Fanny Henry is visiting friends in Orangeville.....Mr. James Barber has returned from Toronto, where he has been engaged for the past three weeks.....Miss Katie Kidney is spending a month with friends in Arthur.

DEATH OF A MONO PIONEER.—Truly may it be said of us that, "In the midst of life we are in death." This was very forcibly illustrated here last week when one of Mono's oldest pioneers in the person of Mr. Robert Anderson passed from the stage of action. On Friday Mr. Anderson attended a threshing, but complaining of severe pain in the evening he went home. During the night he became gradually worse and succumbed at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The remains, which were interred at Relosney, were followed thither by a very respectful cortege. Peace to his ashes!

B. & F. B. S.—A meeting of the Mono Centre branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society was held in Ebenezer church last Wednesday evening. After the various reports were read and accepted the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Rev. F. Woodger, president; Robt. Irwin, secretary-treasurer; Robt. Turnbull, depositor; Messrs. Turnbull, Magwood, Steward, Coleman, Anderson and Bower, collectors. After a short address by Rev. Mr. Ballentyne, the Rev. Mr. Duff, agent of the society, gave a very interesting and able address on the workings and success of the society.

Died.

REID.—In Erin, on Thursday, November 12, Donald Reid, aged 76 years.

ATKINSON.—In Mono, on Monday, November 16, Wm. Atkinson, aged 90 years

MILLER.—At Toronto, on Thursday, November 12th, J. B. Miller, formerly of Orangeville, aged 49 years.

MORRISON.—At Toronto, on Friday, November 13, Johnston W. Morrison, aged 15 years, 6 months and 10 days.

HENRY.—At Whitefish Point, Mich, on Saturday, November 7th, from the effects of la grippe, Thomas B. Henry, aged 23 years.

SEND THE CASH, DAN!—Dan Markle of Glen Cross writes us a rather personal communication from Toronto about H. L. Atkinson of Mono. If Dan wants his letter inserted in THE SUN he will please send us $5 and we will put it in our advertising columns.

TOWNSHIP COUNCILS.—The Amaranth township council will meet at Laurel on Tuesday, Dec. 15th, at 10 o'clock, a. m., and the East Luther council meet at Grand Valley on Tuesday, Dec. 15th, at 9 o'clock, a. m The Mono wiseacres assemble at Mono Centre on Tuesday, Dec. 15th.

A BIG COMBINATION.—We are informed on unquestionable authority that four of the largest implement manufacturers in Canada have amalgamated and intend to control the Canadian market. Massey of Toronto, Wisner and Harris of Brantford and Patterson of Wood stock are the gigantic combination.

A GOOD APPOINTMENT.—Mr. J. J White, the well-known implement agent of this town, has been appointed travelling agent for the combined implement firms of Massey and Wisner. Mr. White's route will be on the C. V. and T. G & B. divisions of the C. P. R, and his salary is $1,200 a year and expenses.

CANNONBALL'S CHALLANGE.—Mr Wm Marshall's challange, which was published in THE SUN of last week, to match his horse against Mr. Jno. Hacks' Thunderbolt has not been accepted up to date, and it looks as if Orangeville sports will be deprived of seeing a race this fall. We understand the challange still remains open.

A MINISTER'S DEATH.—Rev. Jas. Webbedell at Belwood on Monday week from typhoid fever after an illness of three weeks. Deceased came originally from South Shields, Eng. About 18 months ago he accepted the call to Belwood where he labored with much success and acceptance. He leaves a widow and small family.

JOINED THE BENEDICTS.—Mr. Thos. Henderson of this town was married to Miss Jennie Crozier, daughter of Mr. Samuel Crozier of Mono, on Thursday last. The happy couple are now occupying the handsome residence which Mr. H. erected on First at this summer. THE SUN wishes Mr. and Mrs. Henderson a long life of happiness.

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.—On Wednesday evening of last week Mrs. R. McKeown of York street was stricken with paralysis, and the entire left side of her body was rendered powerless. During the last few days, however, her condition has somewhat improved, and strong hopes of her recovering from the effects of the stroke are entertained by the doctors.

"CURFEW."—By order of the council the bell on the town hall at Listowel is now rung at 9 o'clock every evening as a warning for all boys under 15 years to get to their homes. Any lads under this age found on the streets after 9 p m, unless accompanied by their parents, will be taken charge of by the constable. Of course this wouldn't work worth a cent in Orangeville.

NOT BADLY HURT.—Last week several papers reported that Dr. Island of Rosemont sustained serious injuries while driving from Grand Valley to the former place two weeks ago. The doctor, however, was not so badly hurt after all, his principal injury being nothing worse than a severe shaking up. Dr. Island was hard at work on Monday, and all traces of the accident have disappeared.

IT WAS GOOD.—The Citizens' band entertained a large crowd in the town hall on Friday evening last—our Thanksgiving day. The different selections were rendered in a worthy manner and the audience was not slow to recognize the fact. Just here we might remark that the class of music which our band plays is higher than that of any band around this part of the country.

J B MILLER DEAD.—Mr J. B. Miller of Toronto, formerly of this town, died at the former place on Wednesday after a lingering illness. The remains were brought to Orangeville by the C. P. R. morning train on Friday and were met at the station by the A. O. U. W and Select Knights lodges, of which societies deceased was a member. The funeral took place from the station to the Forest Lawn cemetery and was numerously attended.

DON'T STOP THE PAPER.—It costs less than half a cent a day to take a weekly paper; less than a diligent hen would earn in a month at the market price for eggs; less than a cigar a fort night, and a cheap one at that; less than the barber would charge by the year to keep one's hair trimmed; less than a good sized turkey; less than an energetic kitchen girl will waste in a week. A penny a day can be saved in many a better way than by stopping your paper.

DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.—Services were held in the Templar's hall over Endacott Bros.' store, last Sunday at 11 a. m and 7 p. m. Mr. E. Sheppard of Walkerton preached two good sermons to the people. Meetings are being held every evening this week. The subject announced for Friday evening is, "The Mission of the Holy Spirit." Three services will be held on Sunday at 11 a. m., 1 and 7 p. m. In the afternoon Mr. Sheppard will speak from Romans, 8th, on "God's Decrees." The subject is an important one.

COMMITTED FOR MURDER!

YOUNG WILLIAM SCHINIMAN WILL BE TRIED AT THE SPRING ASSIZES

For Killing J. A. Montgomery—The Evidence is Very Favorable for the Prisoner.

William Schiniman, the young fellow who has been lying in jail for some time past, charged with slaying J. A. Montgomery, appeared before P. M. Pattullo at the court house on Saturday afternoon. Our readers are familiar with the details of this unfortunate affair, and it is unnecessary to repeat the report of the quarrel at Galbraith's bowl at Hockley, the chase and finally the throwing of the fatal stone.

The witnesses were examined, Dr. Philip of Grand Valley, who attended Montgomery, D. R. Galbraith and another Montgomery, a cousin of the dead man and who had been with him at the fight. The evidence, according to our way of thinking, was not at all unfavorable to young Schiniman, but a prima facia case was established and there was nothing to do but commit him to stand his trial at the assizes next spring. Crown Attorney Myers prosecuted and W. L. Walsh defended the prisoner. An effort is being made to have Schiniman released on bail. The charge against his father has been dropped.

PERSONAL.

Mr. F. R. Parker and bride returned home Saturday evening.

Mr. Frank Smith of Toronto was the guest of Mr. Theo. Donner last week.

Miss Jean Mann of Hamilton spent Thanksgiving day with her parents here.

Mrs. Faulkner of Mono Road is visiting her daughter, Mrs. James McDonald.

Mr. Wm. Siggins of London is on a visit to his brother, Mr. Geo. Siggins of the south ward.

Mr. F Cousins has accepted a situation at London and left on Monday for the Forest city.

John W. Robb, D. D. S., of Philadelphia, Pa., is visiting his parents and renewing acquaintances in town.

Mr. Ed. Maher, who some years ago ran the American hotel here and is now proprietor of an hotel at Point Edward, is renewing old acquaintances around his native village, Sand Hill.

ALL ON A MARKET-DAY.—Thursday's market was well attended and a great deal of butter, poultry, etc, was disposed of. In the prize competition Mrs. H. Torrance, Caledon, was awarded the prize for pair of geese, $1 cash, by Green, Bowles & Co; pair of ducks, Mrs B. Bradley, East Garafraxa, $1 cash, by Shaw & Young; best turkey Mrs. Young, Albion, $1 cash, by John Irving; pail of butter, Mrs Jno. Hillock Caledon, 3 cts, per lb over market price, by A. & W. Johnston.

PRESENTATION.—A number of the "boys" on learning that Mr. J. S. Haley was about to leave their ranks and join the mighty host of benedicts, wished to show their esteem for him in some tangible way, and also to express their concurrence with the good example he was setting them. On Wednesday, the 4th. inst., before the marriage they waited upon that gentleman and presented him on behalf of the "boys" with two elegant and expensive easy chairs. Mr. Haley heartily thanked them for this token of good fellowship.

GONE WRONG.—Several days ago Mr. James Rusk of Mono missed $42 in money from the house and at the same time his son was minus an over coat. Suspicion fell on a young man who was engaged on the place, but when he was looked for he could not be found. Rusk came to Orangeville and reported the case to Chief Shields The culprit had gone to Toronto a day or two previous and the chief telephoned to police headquarters there. The city detectives hunted the young fellow up and arrested him last Friday He was brought to town and has been in limbo ever since. Yesterday he received a hearing at the police court and was committed for trial.

A HANDSOME PREMIUM.—THE EMPIRE is sending out a Premium with its Weekly this fall which will be highly prized by the friends and followers of the late Premier of the Dominion. It is in the shape of a Memorial Album, illustrating the career of Sir John Macdonald, from his birthplace in Glasgow to his last resting place in Cataraqui Cemetery. The series of handsome views are in photogravure, executed in a manner that is a credit to Canadian art, and comprise an excellent photograph of the old Chieftain, taken a short time previous to his death; a handsome portrait of his devoted widow, the Baroness Macdonald; his birthplace in Glasgow, being a view of Brunswick Place near the Turnpate, which will be recognized by all who are familiar with that city; a potrait of Sir John as a young man, being a fac simile of the earliest photograph known to be in existence; an excellent and striking likeness of his mother, from whom he inherited his force of character and genius; the old home on Rideau street, Kingston, in which he lived during the rebellion of 1837; the finest view ever published of Earnscliffe, his well known residence in Ottawa; interior view of the Senate Chamber, as it appeared with the body lying in state, showing the floral tributes and members of Parliament guarding the remains, with the Queen's wreath resting on the coffin; view of Parliament Buildings, with funeral procession forming in front; the funeral passing the Eastern block, with fine view of the buildings; magnificent view of the City Hall, Kingston, drapped as it appeared on morning of funeral; beautiful photograph of the grave at Cataraqui Cemetery, with the floral offerings and cadets guarding it; exterior view of Westminster Abbey in which memorial service was held, from a celebrated etching; photographic view of the interior of Westminister; handsome view of the St. Paul's Cathedral, in which it is proposed to erect memorial tablet; interior of St. Paul's Cathedral. The cover of this collection of photogravures is a beautiful work of art, the title being richly embossed in silver, with a medallion of the Chieftain in relief, surrounded by his now memorable words "A British subject I was born, a British subject I will die," while the background shows shield with the British arms, and the whole is surmounted with drapery in royal purple, fringed with silver. A premium like this has never before been offered by a newspaper in Canada, and will no doubt be eagerly sought after as it will be an ornament to a parlor table as well as a valuable souvenir of the old Chieftain.

NOT A MURDERER!

BILL McCULLOUGH DID NOT KILL W. P. WEST.

He Had Nothing to Give His Counsel But Thanks.

In the last two issues of THE SUN we have had something to say about the doings of an ex-Orangevillian in the far away city of Vancouver. At the time of the last report Bill McCullough was about to stand his trial for the murder of W. P. West, but no evidence to warrant his committal was produced.

The Vancouver World of last week says:—"The discharge of McCullough in the Police Court this morning in connection with the death of Poundkeeper West forms another chapter in this mysterious affair. If some of the sensational newspapers could have had West murdered, and placed the crime upon McCullough's shoulders, they would have been extremely happy. Meantime McCullough is free, and his able young counsel, Mr. G. A. Jordan, is to be congratulated on the solicitude he gave the case, notwithstanding that his client has nothing to give him but thanks."

"William McCullough was charged, on remand, with having murdered Poundkeeper West. Mr. Hamersley said that after further investigation no additional evidence of any importance had been discovered, and as far as that court was concerned, he had nothing more to offer. Mr. Jordan, for the prisoner, asked that he be discharged. The Bench thereupon discharged the prisoner, and he left the court. The Telegram, which has gone crazy over this case, all but had the noose around McCullough's neck last night. There is too much of this kind of thing in British Columbia—finding prisoner guilty before the offence is proved. Many times the innocent are made to suffer."

TRAVELS OF A LETTER!

It was Mailed at Woodbridge for Orangeville, but Builds up at Ottawa.

The letter which appears in this column was received at this office all right on Friday morning last. It could not very well have gone astray as the address was something like this:

Ed. "Sun,"
ORANGEVILLE,
(NOT Ottawa) Ont.

The epistle explains itself:

To the Editor of THE SUN:

SIR,—On the 4th inst, I mailed a letter in Woodbridge, addressed "Rev. J. L Gilmour, Baptist Minister, Orangeville, Ont." The writing was so plain that any one able to read manuscript could read it without any difficulty whatever. In that letter I asked Mr Gilmour for some information about a young man who had just called on me. I said that I wished to have an answer by Saturday night (7th inst.) at the latest. No answer came up to that date. I took for granted that Mr. Gilmour was not at home. On Tuesday morning following (10th inst.), I received an answer from Ottawa from the Rev. T. C. Gilmour, Presbyterian minister there. He says that my letter could not have been for him as he is not a Baptist minister, and never was in Orangeville, to which place the letter was in the first instance addressed, and whence it came to Montreal and finally to Ottawa."

So my letter had a good long ride. It left Woodbridge for Orangeville on the 5th inst., then it was 'bundled down" to Montreal, and thence to Ottawa. A letter distinctly addressed "Rev. J. L Gilmour, Baptist Minister, Orangeville, Ont." is sent down by mail to Rev. T. C. Gilmour, Presbyterian Minister, Ottawa! Hurrah! Of course nobody is to be blamed for that. It is like the schoolboy's whistling which he said "whistled itself."

T. FENWICK.

ATHLONE.

SERIOUSLY ILL.—Mrs. Albert Watson of Loretto is seriously ill with neuralgia in the jaw, and has a doctor in attendance. We sincerely hope that she will soon be all right again.

BITS AND PERSONALS.—The Loretto schoolhouse has been extensively repaired lately.... Miss Kate Divine has gone to Dakota to visit friends there. Her numerous friends here will be very sorry to lose her, and will miss her much.... The local convention was held at Tottenham last Friday, and most of the teachers around here attended it.... Our new doctor's name is Dunning, and he hails from Orangeville. We wish him success.

FOOTBALL.—The second match of the Northern Association took place at Barrie last Saturday between Barrie and Athlone. The weather was favorable, and the game was well contested. After 45 minutes hard play, Barrie scored the first and only goal. Shortly after this, at half-time, it was discovered that the goal posts were too high, being in fact, nearly one foot above the mark, and besides this, the ground was only one hundred yards long. Barrie had a man on named McCarthy, who, as they afterwards said, was there purposely to lay us on the shelf. This thing made himself very conspicuous by playing rough. Nearly every one of our boys gave him credit for a fall. Athlone may have a hard name, but when a team comes here they are sure to be used well. We do not get a rough for the occasion, but endeavor to play honest ball.

BOWLING GREEN.

ON A VISIT.—Mr. George Keefer of British Columbia, formerly of this place, is visiting here and will remain until spring. He looks well.

A BAD MEMORY.—Mr. Editor,—We almost forgot that we were your correspondent at all, but you will hear from me a little oftener than you have lately.

SOLD OUT.—Mrs. J. Bates has sold her stock and implements and has leased her farm to J. A. Simpson. She will move into her new house here in a few days.

THEY GOT FOUR.—Some of our sports went deer-hunting in Melancthon a couple of weeks ago. They returned the other day with four good specimens of the deer (not dear) tribe.

DISTURBING SERVICE.—Rev. Mr. Leabe gave the young people an overhauling last Sunday evening for their disgraceful behavior in church. Do the boys know that their bad conduct might lead them before the "beak," where they could be severely punished?

OUR'S NIGHT OFF.—The 5th passed off very pleasantly here, and we are certain Guy Fawkes could find no fault with the proceedings. Geo. Rounding got up a supper and dance in which many engaged. The "light fantastic toe" was tripped until next morning, and all went home well pleased with the night's fun.

The Lady Godiva must have had exceptionally long hair since it completely concealed her lovely person. Since Ayer's Hair Vigor came into use such examples are not so rare as formerly. It not only promotes the growth of the hair, but gives it a rich, silken texture.

The schooner Montezuma of Toledo was wrecked near Selkirk on Lake Erie on Monday.

A Voice From Scotland.

DEAR SIRS,—I can highly recommend Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cured my daughter of a cough she had been troubled with since childhood. She is now twelve years old.

MRS. M. FATHERSLL, Scotland, Ont.

MONO MILLS.

A LONGER JOURNEY.—Three months ago Mr. Wm. Waines a resident of Mono moved to the Northwest and settled near Battleford. He got along well and a short time ago he went for his wife and child to remove there. About three weeks ago Mrs. Waines started for her new home, but she only got as far as Toronto, when she was stricken with typhoid fever and had to be removed to the hospital. We now learn that Mrs. Waines has since died, but we cannot vouch for the truth of the report.

WEDDING BELLS.—Last Thursday afternoon the residence of Mr. Samuel Crozier was the scene of a very pleasing incident, it being the marriage of his daughter Miss Jennie Crozier to Mr. Thomas Henderson, a popular young blacksmith of Orangeville. The ceremony was performed in the parlor by Rev. H. Crozier of Grand Valley, uncle of the bride, assisted by Rev. J. A. Long of Mono and Rev. J. B. Ward of Palgrave. There were neither bridesmaids, maid of honor nor best man. Both bride and groom are well known in this vicinity and will have the best wishes of a host of friends for a long life of wedded bliss. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Henderson drove to their handsome and comfortably furnished home in Orangeville.

TORONTO GOSSIP.

INTERESTING CITY NEWS BY THE SUN'S FAIR CORRESPONDENT.

The annual concert has been well heralded the last two weeks by the Remenyi concert in the Pavilion, and Sara Bernhardt in the Grand. Remenyi, the world renowned violinist is a short, stout, little man, not looking in the least like a musician. He was here for one night only, and the Pavilion was well filled. I think on the whole the audience was the least little bit disappointed, as somebody said he expected to be carried away up into the clouds, but he remained just where he was, quite conscious of his hard seat; and it was whispered among the knowing ones, that the first pieces were a trifle out of tune. You see, we expected so much, and as usual: "Realization was a little below expectation." His latter selections, however, were really fine, especially the Hungarian melodies, when the music swelled out like the passionate cries of an imprisoned spirit, and then died away in faintest and most exquisite thrills of wondrous sweetness. What a marvellous power a violin is in the hands of one who is able to draw forth its concentrated music. As a great American writer has said, "when played on by a passionate enthusiast, he can make it whisper his hidden love and cry his inarticulate longings, and scream his untold agonies, and wail his monotonous despair." He is a happy man who can thus pour forth his soul by the wonderful medium of music, for all his sorrows, disappointments and bitter feelings will run off through the tips of his fingers.

The following week brought Sara Bernhardt, the great French actress in "La Tosca," which was played in English last season by Fanny Davenport. It is a deep and terrible tragedy, one that can only be attempted by an actress who has the genius, depth of feeling and divine power of conception that go to make up a great artist. And Sara Bernhardt possesses all of these requisites. Of course she played in French, and it is proof of her wonderful talent that she was able to keep her audience spell bound by her acting alone. "La Tosca" is a play that fairly carries the people out of themselves, and so it was on Thursday night. You could trace the slightest, perceptible trembling passing through the house, when in the last act, as the tragedy culminated, the audience gazed on the heart rending scenes in breathless pity. It is sublime, that wrapt silence of a great multitude which tells that one soul moves in them all. It is in such times of kindred feeling that the sense of human brotherhood shows forth. Bernhardt has no beauty beyond that of her rich, auburn hair, but when she is acting one feels that you wouldn't wish her different in any way.

The medical students celebrated Hallowe'en by pulling down the old fence that surrounded the Normal school. Church and Gould was the liveliest corner in the city that night. About 500 students were present and a few policemen hovered near but of course could do nothing. It is generally acknowledged that the students might have done worse, as the worm-eaten old fence has been an eye sore for years.

The street railway company have provided for the better comfort of their passengers by the novel addition of stoves in the cars. ### Over a Century Old.

Many cases are known of persons living to be over 100 years old and there is no good reason why this should not occur. By paying attention to the health by using Burdock Blood Bitters when necessary to purify the blood and strengthen the system much may be added to the comfort and happiness of life even if the century mark is not attained.

The Council of an Ontario town recently sent inquiries to nearly all the cities and towns of Canada as to the yearly cost of each electric lamp in use for street lighting. The lights are paid for from 200 to 365 nights per year. The figures are:—Montreal, $146; Toronto, $108 59; Hamilton, $102 10; Ottawa, 80; Halifax, $79; London, $94.05; Kingston, $65 80; St Catharines, $77 10; Brantford, $105; St Thomas, $102 20; Windsor, $80 30; Peterborough, $60; Stratford, $66; Belleville, $105; Woodstock, $56 50; Brockville, $101 50; Berlin, $60; Galt $66; Cornwall, $17; Cobourg, $52 50; Truro, $85; Lindsay, $48; Barrie $70; Yarmouth, N S, $80; Ingersoll, $60; Bowmanville, $65 05; St Mary's $49; Orangeville, $57; Paris, $58 50; Whitby, $45; Brampton, $64; Simcoe $50; Kincardine, $52 80; Mount Forest, $75; Newmarket, $45; Wingham, $60; Palmerston, $45; Markham, $36 The figures are interesting, but are very incomplete. Many of these plants are run by water power. Data is wanting also, as to the number of lights, length of lighting hours, and candle power of lamps, says Electrical Engineer.

For some time Dr. Leslie E. Keely of Chicago has been winning fame and dollars by his treatment of inebriates by a process which he kept secret, but in which the administration of bi chloride of gold was a principal feature. One of his chief examples who also wrote an account of Dr. Keely's institute that gained it much custom, has fallen under control of his old appetite and died from the effects of intoxication. This has drawn attention to lapses on the part of others of his cured patients. The result is that Dr. Keely's remedy is likely to follow Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir and Dr. Koch's lymph into the limbo of discarded medicines. It needs metal in the will as well as the body to cure the habit of drinking.

It is said the C. P. R. will replace all wooden trestles on their line by steel bridges. The cost will be $2,000,000, but the directors believe the consequent lessening of the schedule time between Vancouver and Montreal will repay this immense outlay, since trains will be able to run at considerable higher speed over steel bridges than over the best class of trestle work.

How to save money is a problem that interests everybody. One way to do it is to invigorate the system with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Being a highly concentrated blood medicine, it is the most powerful and economical. It is sold for a dollar a bottle, but worth five.

McKINLEY TRIUMPHANT.

(Empire.)

For the moment William McKinley rules the situation. Public attention for a month past has been concentrated more or less from all parts of Europe, America, and even distant Australia, upon the struggle in which the champion of protectionism was engaged in Ohio. The legislation inaugurated under his auspices, the effects which it has had upon Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and other countries, the tremendous impetus which it has given outside of the Republic to the principles he has advocated so ably within its borders, when combined with the sweeping defeat which the Congressional elections of last fall appeared to give the whole policy, have united in conferring an almost unique interest upon this election and in giving Mr. McKinley a notoriety almost unequalled, perhaps, by any American politician.

The personality of the man is interesting. For many years a Congressman and a leader in that body, an ardent advocate of steady protection to American industries, a man who could deal sledge hammer blows at his enemies, and who commanded the respect of all, McKinley was bound to make his mark. When, after months and months of weary labor he had won success for what we must term his great measure, it seemed very hard, and to most men would have been crushing in its effects, that victory snatched from the wide fields of national debate, combined with a fame which the four corners of the globe acknowledged, should result in defeat within his own congressional district.

To many Canadians the reason for that strange episode in his career is unknown, but the cause seems to have been as simple as it was disgraceful to his opponents. Two divisions giving a large Democratic majority were added to his electoral district, and although he pulled the adverse plurality down to a point which came very near victory, it was too much to expect it in the end. Now, however, he wins, and apparently by a very large majority. His opponent, Governor Campbell, was a man of the most pleasant and honorable personal characteristics, and his defeat will be regretted by many on these grounds alone, but it would really seem as if the business, manufacturing and agricultural classes alike were bound to preserve the present policy of the Administration. Stability is an important matter to men with great interests, and just as in Canada with the Opposition, so in Ohio with the Democrats—the policy presented was one so vague, so general in its nature, and so unsettled in its details that the people have altogether rejected it.

As Ohio is one of the pivotal states upon whose vote depends the result in the presidential year, it looks as if two somewhat large "booms" for President might arise out of this election. New York and the other states showing Democratic losses appear to indicate success for the Republican candidate in 1892, so that aspirants for the nomination will be many. The Republican success in Ohio will enable that party to elect a United States Senator in a few months, and the man for the position will undoubtedly be John Sherman, the present occupant, and a repeated candidate for the presidential nomination. It will, therefore, assist him, but the election will probably develop a "McKinley boom" also, which will be more than a match for his aspirations. If Mr. Blaine's health, or other causes, should tend to prevent his receiving the Republican nomination, it, therefore, looks as if the "Little Napoleon" would have a fair chance of being the next President of the United States. Mr. Harrison, though avowedly anxious for a second term, has not yet developed special strength, and the issue apparently lies, so far as the one party is concerned, between Blaine and McKinley, with the always possible "dark horse" intervening at the last moment

The second teacher took a hand in and repeated the dose to some of the boys that made some remarks about him and a young lady that he was escorting home after the entertainment.

Children almost invariably suffer from catarrh at this season. Do not neglect it until perhaps consumption is developed, but apply Nasal Balm at once. It never fails to cure.

James Wilkinson, from Ontario, a young farmer who has been living in the Cypress River district for three or four years, has left for parts unknown, leaving unsettled several heavy liabilities. He managed to get possession of deeds of a valuable farm he had arranged to purchase without a cent of money. He raised $3600 by mortgage on the property and borrowed other large amounts. Altogether he is said to be $13,000 ahead. In addition to the loss sustained by creditors there are three or four families in the district who have very sorrowful reasons for regretting that fate stood in the way of this scamp.

AND most powerful alterative is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the scrofulous diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and decided to have my boy try it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy of his age."—William F. Dougherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sores increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually diminished, and finally ceased altogether. The child is livelier, its skin is fresher, and its appetite better than we have observed for months."—Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents, for chronic diseases of almost every kind, the best remedy known to the medical world."—D. M. Wilson, M. D., Wiggs, Arkansas.

A Chicago correspondent writes in a contemporary as follow: "There are an enormous number of unemployed Canadians in this city. They would be far better off at home than here. There are thousands of them, and most of them with good educations. In my opinion the so-called 'higher education' of your people is being overdone. When they leave college they are of no earthly use for business. I could write you a book full about the men who have gone through the Toronto University and are working for $30 a month. I put an advertisement in the paper here on Sunday for a book-keeper 'Canadian preferred,' and the one insertion brought me 598 replies and of these 182 had been through the Toronto University. This was last fall and the state of things is not much better now than it was then, and yet in all this interesting panorama of magnificent business and plenty of work we cannot find good practicable men with mechanical heads as salesmen, to whom we would willingly pay a good salary; and why is this so? Simply for pride on the part of the young men who prefer a so-called 'higher education' than soil their fingers with a mechanical training which would fit them for good lucrative positions in the future."

A Popular Physician.

The popular physician is unassuming, pleasant and successful in treating disease. Such an one is Burdock Blood Bitters—unassuming—only a dollar a bottle—pleasant, agreeable in taste,—successful in nine cases out of ten. In truth it may be said B. B. B. is the popular physician to the people, a tried and trusted family friend in all diseases of the stomach, liver, bowels and blood.

The Rest of Rock Salt, for Stock.

Read what Prof Robertson, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, says regarding proper ways of salting stock:—"Dairy cattle should have access to salt every day. A supply of coarse particles has convinced me that when cows are denied salt for a period of even one week they will yield from 1½ to 2½ per cent. less milk, and that of inferior quality. Such milk will, on an average, turn sour in twenty four hours less time than milk drawn from the same or similar cows receiving salt every day, all other conditions of treatment being equal."

THE only chemically pure Salt ever discovered, analyzed 99 84-100 Pure Salt. All kinds of stock will do better where this Salt is used; one ton will go four times as far as common salt, hence it is cheaper. It is the finest Salt in the world for the preservation of all kinds of meat, all the large packers are using it. It is sold cheaper than any other lump salt. We guarantee this Salt as advertised. Make a trial and you will always use it; we have in stock fine and coarse, at

Newspaper Decisions.

1. Any person or persons who take a paper regularly from the post office, whether directed in his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intended fraud.

People Wonder

WHEN they find how rapidly health is restored by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The reason is that this preparation contains only the purest and most powerful alteratives and tonics. To thousands yearly it proves a veritable elixir of life.

Mrs. Jos. Lake, Brockway Centre, Mich., writes: "Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony. I was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an in my condition, my appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life, and I cannot thank you too much."

"We, the undersigned, citizens of Brockway Centre, Mich., hereby certify that the above statement, made by Mrs. Lake, is true in every particular and entitled to full credence."—O. P. Chamberlain, G. W. Waring, C. A. Walls, Druggist.

"My brother, in England, was, for a long time, unable to attend to his occupation, by reason of none on his feet. I sent him Ayer's Almanac and the testimonials it contained induced him to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using it a little while, he was cured, and is now a well man, working in a sugar mill at Brisbane, Queensland, Australia."—A. Attewell, Sinclair Lake, Ontario.

DOES ANY ONE CARE FOR FATHER?

Does any one care for father?
Does any one think of the one
Upon whose tired, bent shoulders
The cares of the family come?
The father who strives for your comfort
And toils on from day to day,
Although his steps ever grow slower,
And his dark locks are turning gray.

Does any one think of the doctor-bills
He's called upon daily to pay?
Million bills, college bills, book bills—
There are some kind of bills every day;
Like a patient horse in a treadmill,
He works on from morning till night;
Does any one think he is tired?
Does any one make his home bright?

Is it right, just because he looks troubled,
To say he's no cause to a bear?
Kind words, little actions are kindness
Might banish his burden of care
'Tis for you he's ever so anxious;
He will toil for you while he may live
In return he only asks kindness,
And such is easy to give.

"Grief and famine," she repeated in a low voice. "And she teaches English, you say?"

"Yes, madame. But she gets so few pupils; and for more than fifteen days she has not been out to give a lesson. What will you? When one can scarcely crawl up-stair, one cannot walk leagues over these Paris stones to get ten sous. Since she has been so ill I have let our boy Gustave take lessons of her. That buys her a bit of bread, you see."

"And has she no English friends in Paris?" asked Mrs. Gunning, whose face was strangely earnest.

"Not one," was the reply; "and I ask her in vain to write to her friends in England. But I trouble madame. Here is the change."

"No, no—keep it, and buy a few comforts for this poor countrywoman of mine," said Mrs. Gunning.

"Ah, madame is very good, very charitable," said the laundress; "but I scarcely dare do that; she is so strange, so proud. She would be very angry if she knew I had mentioned her to madame."

"But you have not named her, and I have not asked her name," cried Mrs. Gunning, eagerly.

"Her name!" said the woman. "Oh, there is no secret about that. Madame sees the 'O. V.' in the corner of her handkerchief—Mademoiselle Olympe Valney—that is her name, and she is an orphan, she tells me; a little creature, no higher than that. And before she fell ill she was beautiful as an angel; but she is wasting away fast now Mon Dieu, how changed she is! She is not long for this world, I think."

Mrs. Gunning, whose cheeks had grown paler and paler, burst suddenly into tears, and covered her eyes with the handkerchief belonging to Mademoiselle Olympe Valney.

"What a heart madame has!" exclaimed the laundress, in great admiration. "Never mind the handkerchief. I will wash it again with pleasure; or, if I took it to Mademoiselle Olympe, wetted with the tears of her compatriote she added with a burst of French sentiment, "she would cherish it all the more."

"No, no," cried Mrs. Gunning, "don't tell her; don't, on any account, tell her! Don't name me to her, I beg of you. Where did you say you live?"

The woman named a narrow, dirty street, in the oldest part of Paris, by the Seine.

"You see," she added, "we laundresses must live by the river."

"I should like very much to come and see you," stammered Mrs. Gunning; "you and your boy Gustave."

"Madame is very obliging," said the woman; "but if madame will pay a visit to poor little Mademoiselle Olympe, it will be a real kindness."

"I cannot promise," returned Mrs. Gunning, hurriedly.

"But if madame comes to my poor place, she will surely see her country woman," said the laundress; "and perhaps then she will be able to persuade her to accept some aid. Ah, madame, without help, the poor thing must soon die."

"I will come to-morrow," said Mrs. Gunning, with a sort of desperate catch in her throat; "to-morrow, at eleven. Will that do?"

"Perfectly," was the reply; "and I shall be enchanted to see madame."

Thinking herself now dismissed, the woman shouldered her basket and departed, leaving Mrs. Gunning so pale, and so bewildered that she sat down helplessly, and stared around her, as though she hoped to find some counsel and help in her difficulty, from the four walls of the room. She avoided returning to her husband until she had heard Herbert Langley's departing steps, and even then she crept into the salon quietly, and sat down in the darkest corner.

"Had Herbert Langley anything particular to say, my dear?" she began.

She did not think he had, but she asked the question to rid herself of the painful embarrassment, which the faintest mention of her name occasioned. To her surprise Mr. Gunning answered with pompous solemnity, "He had something very particular to say, but I am bound not to mention it. The subject of our conversation must remain a secret between him and me."

At any other time Mrs. Gunning would have had the whole story out of her resistant spouse in two minutes; but now she left him in peace, feeling thankful that the sin of reticence was not hers alone.

"Since he has a secret which he refuses to tell me, he will not feel so hurt at my hinting this from him," she said to herself. "Poor dear angel, how unhappy he would be if he knew that I could shut up my heart like this to him!"

She gazed at Mr. Gunning's smooth face till tears started to her eyes, then she stole towards him and kissed him.

"No coaxing, Priscilla," said he. "I don't mean to tell."

"No; my dear, I won't ask you," said his wife. "But kiss me back, Tobias-love, else I shall feel quite unhappy. I hate secrets—don't you?"

"Not particularly," he replied; "men cannot tell all their serious affairs to women."

CHAPTER XXI.

Vivian Damerel was shut out from his brave paradise. Herbert Langley's uncourteous words rendered further visits to Florian and Mrs. Langley impossible at present. Still he was not debarred from seeing her in her walks, her drives, or her rare appearance at the opera or the theatre. At these places then Vivian haunted her, mindful only of the pleasure to himself, though he saw with jealous pain how often she was weary, and how often her eyes strayed from him, as if eager to seek relief elsewhere from attentions that bored her.

If the rival that Vivian Damerel felt that he possessed had been visible, if only he could have measured his strength, his talents, his love against him, he would either have some off conqueror, or retired from the contest, acknowledging himself beaten. But this warfare with a shadow, this constant wrestling with an unseen antagonist, left him always in doubt, and did not justify any firm resolve to renounce a love which now seemed necessary to his life. Had she truly a lover, or did his jealousy raise up a phantom lover who had no real existence? This was the question ever tormenting him. If she were free, then was she as free for him to win as another, and he would never give up hope till she herself bade him. And if she had a lover, then at least he would not yield his hope until he had seen his rival. Should he renounce his chance of lifelong happiness for a myth?

One wet afternoon when the streets were dreary and the Bois deserted, Damerel wandered into the Louvre, and stood listlessly looking at the paintings. Suddenly, at the dim end of the long gallery, he caught sight of Florian leaning on the arm of a gentleman. Her back was towards him, but the turn of the head, the glossy hair, the graceful figure, were not to be mistaken. His longing eyes, never heeding his companion, took in, in one wistful glance, the exquisite charm, the tender grace of her presence; then he went hurriedly away, lest Herbert Langley should turn, and vex him with a cold bow. But as he left the Louvre, he ran up against the very man he wished to avoid. Chadwick was with him, and as his amazed look fell upon the pair, the young marine, ever eager for chaff, asked him if he had seen his tailor.

"Nothing but seeing that much-enduring individual, my tailor, would ever give my countenance so scared a look," said Chadwick.

"Have you been in the Louvre?" asked Damerel.

"I hope I know better than to ruin my eyesight in that way," replied Chadwick. "We have been taking a shower-bath beneath the trees on the Boulevards."

Here Herbert Langley, who had stood a little aside, came forward.

"Mr. Damerel," said he, "I hope soon to have the pleasure of introducing you to Miss Vansittart. When she is our guest again, I shall be delighted to accept your apology for your unjust suspicion; and then I trust you will find me equally ready to apologize, if my conduct lately has seemed to you ungenerous."

Lifting his hat, he moved rapidly away, thus sparing Damerel the pain of a reply.

"Good-bye, my angel," said Chadwick. "You look as lost as a babe in the wood. It is dangerous to let you go about by yourself, I see that."

He ran off and Damerel watched him and Langley call a fiacre, jump into it, and drive away.

It was evident Herbert did not know his sister was in the Louvre.

Galled by what he considered the young man's insolence, and tormented equally by love, pride, and jealousy, Vivian Damerel stood a moment irresolute, stabbed to his very heart's core. In that moment he saw Florian descend the steps of the Louvre alone, and hurry away in the opposite direction without perceiving him. After an instant's meditation he followed precipitately; but he had already lost her, and could only conclude she had entered some vehicle perhaps waiting for her in an adjoining street. All these circumstances were but so many links in a chain of evidence, convincing him that Florian's interview with this gentleman was a secret one. Her being out alone, and on a day when the drizzling rain made a wait a penance, and her hurried and frightened look as she left the Louvre, all fell upon his heart with a cold, convincing logic, unanswerable.

And who was this man whom she had thus dared to meet secretly, and alone? Could it be Sir Hilton Trewavas? And again Damerel recalled Florian's evident excitement in Sir Hilton's presence her flushed cheeks, her fevered manner, the look of earnest, even anxious inquiry in her eye, as she scanned his face eagerly, at times when he himself was unobserved. These signs of interest in him, but for Florian's own words, would have seemed proofs of love, and Damerel knew not which to believe. At all events, he was resolved to discover whether Sir Hilton was her companion in the Louvre.

A day or two before, Damerel had bought tickets for the opera, and sent them to Mrs. Langley, for the blind lady was passionately fond of music; and he resolved, when he joined her and Florian that night in their box, to question her, and, if possible, to rid his heart of this mad jealousy.

Both ladies greeted Damerel kindly on his presenting himself in their loge; and Florian, he fancied, was brighter and more beautiful than he had ever seen her.

Mrs. Langley soon became entranced in the music and sat silent and absorbed, as though her soul were all ear, to catch the sweet sounds that fell from the singer's lips. Seeing her unwilling to talk, and listening attentively to the opera, it was natural that Vivian, as he bent over Florian, should drop his voice to its lowest tone.

"Have you been out to-day, Miss Langley?" he asked.

"I took a short drive," she replied.

"In the Bois?" said Damerel.

"Even the nursemaids desert the Bois on such a day as this," said Florian, smiling at the question.

"Ah, truly," said he; "it has been dismal! But where else could you drive?"

It was scarcely embarrassment, but a certain restraint, that came over Florian's manner as she answered him—"Surely Paris is big enough to drive in without going to the Bois?"

He dared not say, "Where did you go?" so he tried another tack.

"Poor Sir Hilton Trewavas still lingers in Paris, hoping to find his brother," he continued; "but I fear it is a vain search—don't you?"

Again came that sign of nervous trepidation, which he had always marked in Florian, at the name of Trewavas.

"I scarcely know," she replied, in a low voice. "Perhaps he will never be found; he may have committed suicide."

"Ah," said Damerel, "I see Sir Hilton has told you of his brother's melancholy temperament. You seem to know him quite well; the picture, I suppose, was so faithfully drawn as that sketch of yours, which I saw the other day?"

"You are mistaken, Mr. Damerel," said Florian, a vivid blush covering her cheeks. "Sir Hilton has said very little to me concerning his brother."

"But that little makes you think of him as a suicide?" asked Damerel. "I believe Sir Hilton does his brother an injustice in conveying such an impression. I know John Trewavas well—a weak, gentle, quiet man—too weak for happiness; a man sure to fail and suffer if he strives for it, but certainly not a man to do so desperate a deed as to lay hands on his own life."

"It is a great mistake to suppose that people, too weak to guard their own peace and happiness, are also too weak to sin," she remarked. "History tells us no such tale."

"Then you still persist in your gloomy thought?" said Damerel. "Well, mine is even more gloomy. I believe, that having a large sum of money with him, poor John has been robbed and murdered."

"I do not think he is dead," observed Florian. But here again that curious restraint fell upon her, evidently checking her speech. "Do not let us talk any more of John Trewavas," she continued. "I am so sorry for Sir Hilton," she added softly.

"So am I," said Damerel. "Have you seen him to-day?"

"No," replied Florian.

Her "no" was perfectly unembarrassed and without a shadow of reserve in it. Vivian's heart sank. Desperately longing to know the worst, he flung his last die.

"How lonely Sir Hilton Trewavas must feel in Paris on such a day as this has been!" said he. "As for me, not knowing what to do with myself, I went into the Louvre."

Instantly, over face, neck, and bosom, there rushed a crimson tide that, as it faded away, left her as white as a statue of marble.

"At what time were you there, Mr. Damerel?" she asked, in a voice which she tried vainly to steady.

"Between four and five," he replied; "but the day was so dark, that I can scarcely say I saw the pictures."

"In which gallery were you?" she asked, with her face turned towards the stage, and her lips almost white.

Vivian named the same gallery in which he had seen her, and then waited for her to speak again; but it was nearly a minute before she moved her eyes from the stage, and fixed them on him with an intense and anxious look, and even then it was not until the middle of a crashing march and chorus, that she bent forward, and said, almost in a whisper, "Mr. Damerel, you are playing a poor part when you act the spy."

"On my honor, Miss Langley, I never tried so mean a role," said Vivian. "I was there by accident. I saw you by accident. Do you believe me?"

"Oh, certainly," she said, after a moment's hesitation. "But was there anything strange in my looking at paintings on a wet day, as well as yourself?"

"Oh, no, nothing," he replied. "I only wish I had the happiness to escort you, instead of the stranger I saw with you."

This was too much. Florian gazed at Damerel in amazement and indignation, her very fingers rosy with the burning flush that had suffused her face.

"Mr. Damerel," she said, "I refuse to be cross-examined on my actions any further. I refuse to reply to your questions, simply because I deny that you have any right to ask them. I was at the Louvre with a friend, whose name I decline to give you."

The proud, calm words rushed over Damerel's heart like a wave from an icy sea, leaving him utterly powerless to reply.

"Florian," said Mrs. Langley, "what are you and Mr. Damerel disputing about, in the midst of the loveliest music in the world?"

"Paintings," replied Vivian. "I have been telling Miss Langley that I detest all galleries, the gallery of the Louvre especially."

"The Louvre," said Mrs. Langley again—"was it this morning I heard Sir Hilton proposing to take you to it, Florian?"

"No, mother," she replied. "That was yesterday."

"Then it was Sir Hilton with her!" thought Damerel, with an impetuous rush of anger. "And both are deceiving me."

Turning her sightless face to the stage Mrs. Langley again gave up all her faculties to the music; then Vivian bent towards Florian, anxiously.

"If," said he, "it was Sir Hilton—"

"The discussion is over, Mr. Damerel, not to be recommenced," said Florian, interrupting him coldly. "All I ask is that you will not annoy my mother with it."

"You trust me thus far, then?" he resumed, bitterly. "You believe I shall not betray you?"

Florian was evidently galled by this way of putting the matter; but perhaps she felt herself compelled to submit, for she bit her lip, and spoke hastily.

"Call it what you will," she said; "but I shall certainly feel obliged to you for silence. May be a more generous nature would have not spoken at all."

"You are always unjust to me, Miss Langley, answered Vivian. "How do I know that the most generous, the kindest thing I could do, would not be to speak to your mother and brother?"

"No, no!" exclaimed Florian. "Heaven help me! What should I do?"

It was joy to hear her more meek, more submissive; it was triumph to see her look into his face with pleading eye.

"There are so many fortune-hunters, so many villains in the world," he continued, "who make a prey of the innocent, that I know not whether I dare give you a promise of silence. In meaning to do you a kindness, I may be doing you an injury."

"I gave you my word, my solemn assurance, there is no danger of harm to me," said Florian.

Her eyes were still on him, filling with tears now; and the delicious sense of power—power over her—that ran through his veins, would not let him show mercy.

"You are too young, too inexperienced, to understand the danger that lurks in the clandestine," he continued. "The very fact of secrecy shows there is harm. Is it well to have secrets from your mother—a blind mother—Miss Langley?"

"You are cruel, Mr. Damerel," she replied. "Cannot you understand that, because she is blind, a secret may be kept from her?"

"I can understand no circumstance that can justify such a course, Miss Langley," he replied. "Perhaps if you trusted me entirely I might."

"I cannot trust you, Mr. Damerel," said Florian. "You ask an impossibility."

"Yet you ask me blindly to give you up to the designs, or love, of a stranger," said he—"a man whom, you confess, neither your mother nor your brother know!"

He spoke so passionately that Mrs. Langley turned, and held up her hand for silence.

"Hush! I implore you," whispered Florian.

There was silence for a moment, during which Florian grew so deadly pale that the lilies in her hair were not whiter, and her tears fell so fast that Vivian was thankful for Mrs. Langley's blindness.

"Mr. Damerel," she said, "if I give you my word that the person I meet has never spoken a word of love to me, and never will speak it," (oh, how fast the tears fell here!) "will you be content to believe that he is no fortune-hunter, and will you then keep silent?"

Once more a faint hope beat in Damerel's heart and he bent over her with a glow of passion in his eyes.

"He is not a lover?" he said.

"No," said Florian—a sad "no," over which her lips quivered.

"And he never will be?" continued Damerel.

"He never will be," repeated Florian.

Her face dropped on her flowers so low that Vivian could not see the tears that wetted them.

"Then I give you my promise," he said, reluctantly. "Oh, Miss Langley, you make me accept a hard task! You will not trust me, but you force me to trust this stranger, into whose hands I yield your reputation, your happiness, your life!"

"You yield them into noble hands," she said; "there is nothing to fear."

"So much trust, and no love!" said Damerel, with a jealous pang in his voice. "Oh, Florian, if you would but give me the right to protect you!"

Florian looked up with consternation in her eyes—a glance of such genuine fear and sorrow, that for a moment Vivian was checked. Then he thought he had confessed too much to stop now; so, stooping low, he continued, hurriedly:

"You know I love you. Tell me is there any hope?"

"None," she replied.

Her voice was so faint and low, that Damerel scarcely heard it; but he saw her shrink away from him, and, moving to her mother's side, she put her hand within her arm, and stooped and kissed her. Vivian Damerel watched her in bitterness of spirit.

"She means me to think that her mother's is her only love," said he; "and care for her is her life long duty. But I am not deceived; she loves this stranger."

With the stage a blank to him, and the music one clash of furious discord, Vivian Damerel sat out the opera, and then saw the ladies to their carriage.

DROWNED BY A DEER.

WIARTON, Nov. 15.—It is reported here that two of a hunting party up the peninsula were drowned in one of the small lakes. The report says that the party had chased into the lake a large deer. It was promptly shot and two of the party went with the small boat to bring it ashore, thinking he was dead. They took hold of the animal to take him into the boat when he made several desperate struggles, upsetting the boat, and before their company could reach them the two sank to rise no more.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Travellers to and from distant climes would do well to bear in mind that these charges and the altered diet and surroundings of their lives entail manifold risks to health. Occasions are sure to arise in which they will need a remedy such as these renowned Pills and Ointment, and no traveller by land or sea should ever fail to have a supply at hand. Then he may truly be said to have a physician always at his call for the various emergencies of travel. Chills and fevers should be promptly treated, and the printed directions should be carefully studied at the commencement of any illness, for Holloway's remedies can be safely used in all climates.

SAID TO BE IN MONTREAL.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—Paris papers yesterday announced that the defaulting Paris banker, Raynaud, had been heard from in Montreal, in fact he had written a friend in Paris requesting him to go on his, Raynaud's, bond for a position of trust in a Montreal bank. A coincidence in connection with this appeal is found in the fact that the letter was received by the friend here, in Paris, the same day that the magnificent remnants of his former palatial establishment in the Place de la Bourse were ruthlessly dispersed by the sheriff.

It is understood that the Paris police have communicated with the police of Montreal, looking toward the arrest of Raynaud, and his return to France, where a large reward is still standing for his capture.

Twelve Years' Test.

Dear Sirs,—We have used Hagyard's Yellow Oil in our family for twelve years and find nothing to equal it for rheumatism, lumbago, lame back, frost bites, etc. We would not be without it.

One day last week an estray ram came on to the premises of Mr. Cyrus Sargent, in Bolwood, and attacked a ram belonging to him. The stranger succeeded in breaking the neck of Mr. Sargent's ram in the first round. Mr. Sargent holds the aggressor and intends to keep him till he gets compensation for his own, which was a superior animal.

The "love spoon" is the latest development in the souvenir spoon fad, and is chosen for an engagement token. A silver arrow with enameled forget-me-nots twined round the shaft, and the barbed point piercing the golden bowl of the spoon, which is in heart shape, is the appropriate design of this trifle, and the intertwined initials of the donor and recipient are engraved on the inner surface of the bowl.

"Grief and famine," she repeated in a low voice. "And she teaches English, you say?"

"Yes, madame. But she gets so few pupils; and for more than fifteen days she has not been out to give a lesson. What will you? When one can scarcely crawl up-stair, one cannot walk leagues over these Paris stones to get two sous. Since she has been so ill I have let our boy Gustave take lessons of her. That buys her a bit of bread, you see."

"And has she no English friends in Paris?" asked Mrs. Gunning, whose face was strangely earnest.

"Not one," was the reply; "and I ask her in vain to write to her friends in England. But I trouble madame. Here is the change."

"No, no—keep it, and buy a few comforts for this poor countrywoman of mine," said Mrs. Gunning.

"Ah, madame is very good, very charitable," said the laundress; "but I scarcely dare do that; she is so strange, so proud. She would be very angry if she knew I had mentioned her to madame."

"But you have not named her, and I have not asked her name," cried Mrs. Gunning, eagerly.

"Her name!" said the woman. "Oh, there is no secret about that. Madame sees the 'O. V.' in the corner of her handkerchief—Mademoiselle Olympe Valney—that is her name, and she is an orphan, she tells me; a little creature, no higher than that. And before she fell ill she was beautiful as an angel; but she is wasting away fast now Mon Dieu, how changed she is! She is not long for this world, I think."

Mrs. Gunning, whose cheeks had grown paler and paler, burst suddenly into tears, and covered her eyes with the handkerchief belonging to Mademoiselle Olympe Valney.

"What a heart madame has!" exclaimed the laundress, in great admiration. "Never mind the handkerchief. I will wash it again with pleasure; or, if I took it to Mademoiselle Olympe, wetted with the tears of her compatriote she added with a burst of French sentiment, "she would cherish it all the more."

"No, no," cried Mrs. Gunning, "don't tell her; don't, on any account, tell her! Don't name me to her, I beg of you Where did you say you live?"

The woman named a narrow, dirty street, in the oldest part of Paris, by the Seine.

"You see," she added, "we laundresses must live by the river."

"I should like very much to come and see you," stammered Mrs. Gunning; "you and your boy Gustave."

"Madame is very obliging," said the woman; "but if madame will pay a visit to poor little Mademoiselle Olympe, it will be a real kindness."

"I cannot promise," returned Mrs. Gunning, hurriedly.

"But if madame comes to my poor place, she will surely see her country woman," said the laundress; "and perhaps then she will be able to persuade her to accept some aid. Ah, madame, without help, the poor thing must soon die."

"I will come to-morrow," said Mrs. Gunning, with a sort of desperate catch in her throat; "to-morrow, at eleven. Will that do?"

"Perfectly," was the reply; "and I shall be enchanted to see madame."

Thinking herself now dismissed, the woman shouldered her basket and departed, leaving Mrs. Gunning so pale, and so bewildered that she sat down helplessly, and stared around her, as though she hoped to find some counsel and help in her difficulty, from the four walls of the room. She avoided returning to her husband until she had heard Herbert Langley's departing steps, and even then she crept into the salon quietly, and sat down in the darkest corner.

"Had Herbert Langley anything particular to say, my dear?" she began.

She did not think he had, but she asked the question to rid herself of the painful embarrassment, which she felt towards him and those like him.

"No matter, Priscilla," said he. "I don't mean to tell."

"No; my dear, I won't ask you," said his wife. "But kiss me back, Tobin-love, else I shall feel quite unhappy. I hate secrets—don't you?"

"Not particularly," he replied; "men cannot tell all their serious affairs to women."

CHAPTER XXI.

Vivian Damerel was shut out from his Dante paradise. Herbert Langley's unfortunate words rendered further visits to Florian and Mrs. Langley impossible at present. Still he was not debarred from seeing her in her walks, her drives, or her rare appearance at the opera or the theatre. At these places then Vivian haunted her, mindful only of the pleasure to himself, though he saw with jealous pain how often she was weary, and how often her eyes strayed from him as if eager to seek relief elsewhere from attentions that bored her.

If the rival that Vivian Damerel felt that he possessed had been visible, if only he could have measured his strength, his talents, his love against him, he would either have come off conqueror, or retired from the contest, acknowledging himself beaten. But this warfare with a shadow, this constant wrestling with an unseen antagonist, left him always in doubt, and did not justify any firm resolve to renounce a love which now seemed necessary to his life. Had she truly a lover, or did his jealousy raise up a phantom lover who had no real existence? This was the question ever tormenting him. If she were free, then was she as free for him to win as another, and he would never give up hope till she herself bade him. And if she had a lover, then at least he would not yield his hope until he had seen his rival. Should he renounce his chance of lifelong happiness for a myth?

One wet afternoon when the streets were dreary and the Bois deserted, Damerel wandered into the Louvre, and stood listlessly looking at the paintings. Suddenly, at the dim end of the long gallery, he caught sight of Florian leaning on the arm of a gentleman. Her back was towards him, but the turn of the head, the glossy hair, the graceful figure, were not to be mistaken. His longing eyes, never heeding his companion, took in, in one wistful glance, the exquisite charm, the tender grace of her presence; then he went hurriedly away, lest Herbert Langley should turn, and vex him with a cold bow. But as he left the Louvre, he ran up against the very man he wished to avoid. Chadwick was with him, and as his amazed look fell upon the pair, the young marine, ever eager for chaff, asked him if he had seen his tailor.

"Nothing but seeing that much-enduring individual, my tailor, would ever give my countenance so scared a look," said Chadwick.

"Have you been in the Louvre?" asked Damerel.

"I hope I know better than to ruin my eyesight in that way," replied Chadwick. "We have been taking a shower-bath beneath the trees on the Boulevards."

Here Herbert Langley, who had stood a little aside, came forward.

"Mr. Damerel," said he, "I hope soon to have the pleasure of introducing you to Miss Vansittart. When she is our guest again, I shall be delighted to accept your apology for your unjust suspicion; and then I trust you will find me equally ready to apologise, if my conduct lately has seemed to you ungenerous."

Lifting his hat, he moved rapidly away, thus sparing Damerel the pain of a reply.

"Good-bye, my angel," said Chadwick. "You look as lost as a babe in the wood. It is dangerous to let you go about by yourself, I see that."

He ran off and Damerel watched him and Langley call a fiacre, jump into it, and drive away.

It was evident Herbert did not know his sister was in the Louvre.

Galled by what he considered the young man's insolence, and tormented equally by love, pride, and jealousy, Vivian Damerel stood a moment irresolute, stabbed to his very heart's core. In that moment he saw Florian descend the steps of the Louvre alone, and hurry away in the opposite direction without perceiving him. After an inquiry in her eye, as she scanned his face eagerly, at times when he himself was unobserved. These signs of interest in him, but for Florian's own words, would have seemed proofs of love, and Damerel knew not which to believe. At all events, he was resolved to discover whether Sir Hilton was her companion in the Louvre.

A day or two before, Damerel had bought tickets for the opera, and sent them to Mrs. Langley, for the blind lady was passionately fond of music; and he resolved, when he joined her and Florian that night in their box, to question her, and, if possible, to rid his heart of this mad jealousy.

Both ladies greeted Damerel kindly on his presenting himself in their loge; and Florian, he fancied, was brighter and more beautiful than he had ever seen her.

Mrs. Langley soon became entranced in the music and sat silent and absorbed, as though her soul were all ear, to catch the sweet sounds that fell from the singer's lips. Seeing her unwilling to talk, and listening attentively to the opera, it was natural that Vivian, as he bent over Florian, should drop his voice to its lowest tone.

"Have you been out to-day, Miss Langley?" he asked.

"I took a short drive," she replied.

"In the Bois?" said Damerel.

"Even the nursemaids desert the Bois on such a day as this," said Florian, smiling at the question.

"Ah, truly," said he; "it has been dismal! But where else could you drive?"

It was scarcely embarrassment, but a certain restraint, that came over Florian's manner as she answered him—"Surely Paris is big enough to drive in without going to the Bois?"

He dared not say, "Where did you go?" so he tried another tack.

"Poor Sir Hilton Trewavas still lingers in Paris, hoping to find his brother," he continued; "but I fear it is a vain search—don't you?"

Again came that sign of nervous trepidation, which he had always marked in Florian, at the name of Trewavas.

"I scarcely know," she replied, in a low voice. "Perhaps he will never be found; he may have committed suicide."

"Ah," said Damerel, "I see Sir Hilton has told you of his brother's melancholy temperament. You seem to know him quite well; the picture, I suppose, was so faithfully drawn as that sketch of yours, which I saw the other day?"

"You are mistaken, Mr. Damerel," said Florian, a vivid blush covering her cheeks. "Sir Hilton has said very little to me concerning his brother."

"But that little makes you think of him as a suicide?" asked Damerel. "I believe Sir Hilton does his brother an injustice in conveying such an impression. I know John Trewavas well—a meek, gentle, quiet man—too weak for happiness; a man sure to fail and suffer if he strove for it, but certainly not a man to do so desperate a deed as to lay hands on his own life."

"It is a great mistake to suppose that people, too weak to guard their own peace and happiness, are also too weak to sin," she remarked. "History tells us no such tale."

"Then you still persist in your gloomy thought?" said Damerel. "Well, mine is even more gloomy. I believe, that having a large sum of money with him, poor John has been robbed and murdered."

"I do not think he is dead," observed Florian. But here again that curious restraint fell upon her, evidently chaining her speech. "Do not let us talk any more of John Trewavas," she continued. "I am so sorry for Sir Hilton," she added softly.

"So am I," said Damerel. "Have you seen him to-day?"

"No," replied Florian.

Her "no" was perfectly unembarrassed and without a shadow of reserve in it. Vivian's heart sank. Desperately longing to know the worst, he flung his last die.

"How lonely Sir Hilton Trewavas must feel in Paris on such a day as this has been!" said he. "As for me, not knowing what to do with myself, I went into the Louvre."

Instantly, over face, neck, and bosom, there rushed a crimson tide that, as it faded away, left her as white as a statue of marble.

"At what time were you there, Mr. Damerel?" she asked, in a voice which she tried vainly to steady.

"Between four and five," he replied; "why?"

"Oh, certainly," she said, after a moment's hesitation. "But was there anything strange in my looking at paintings on a wet day, as well as yourself?"

"Oh, no, nothing," he replied. "I only wish I had the happiness to escort you, instead of the stranger I saw with you."

This was too much. Florian gazed at Damerel in amazement and indignation, her very fingers rosy with the burning flush that had suffused her face.

"Mr. Damerel," she said, "I refuse to be cross-examined on my actions any further. I refuse to reply to your questions, simply because I deny that you have any right to ask them. I was at the Louvre with a friend, whose name I decline to give you."

The proud, calm words rushed over Damerel's heart like a wave from an icy sea, leaving him utterly powerless to reply.

"Florian," said Mrs. Langley, "what are you and Mr. Damerel disputing about, in the midst of the loveliest music in the world?"

"Palatings," replied Vivian. "I have been telling Miss Langley that I detest all galleries, the gallery of the Louvre especially."

"The Louvre," said Mrs. Langley again—"was it this morning I heard Sir Hilton proposing to take you to it, Florian?"

"No, mother," she replied. "That was yesterday."

"Then it was Sir Hilton with her!" thought Damerel, with an impetuous rush of anger. "And both are deceiving me."

Turning her sightless face to the stage Mrs. Langley again gave up all her faculties to the music; then Vivian bent towards Florian, anxiously.

"If," said he, "it was Sir Hilton—"

"The discussion is over, Mr. Damerel, not to be recommenced," said Florian, interrupting him coldly. "All I ask is that you will not annoy my mother with it."

"You trust me thus far, then?" he resumed, bitterly. "You believe I shall not betray you?"

Florian was evidently galled by this way of putting the matter; but perhaps she felt herself compelled to submit, for she bit her lip, and spoke hastily.

"Call it what you will," she said; "but I shall certainly feel obliged to you for silence. May be a more generous nature would have not spoken at all."

"You are always unjust to me, Miss Langley, answered Vivian. "How do I know that the most generous, the kindest thing I could do, would not be to speak to your mother and brother?"

"No, no!" exclaimed Florian "Heaven help me! What should I do?"

It was joy to hear her more meek, more submissive; it was triumph to see her look into his face with pleading eye.

"There are so many fortune-hunters, so many villains in the world," he continued, "who make a prey of the innocent, that I know not whether I dare give you a promise of silence. In meaning to do you a kindness, I may be doing you an injury."

"I gave you my word, my solemn assurance, there is no danger of harm to me," said Florian.

Her eyes were still on him, filling with tears now; and the delicious sense of power—power over her—that ran through his veins, would not let him show mercy.

"You are too young, too inexperienced, to understand the danger that lurks in the clandestine," he continued. "The very fact of secrecy shows there is harm. Is it well to have secrets from your mother—a blind mother—Miss Langley?"

"You are cruel, Mr. Damerel," she replied. "Cannot you understand that, because she is blind, a secret may be kept from her?"

"I can understand no circumstances that can justify such a course, Miss Langley," he replied. "Perhaps if you trusted me entirely I might."

"I cannot trust you, Mr. Damerel," said Florian. "You ask an impossibility."

"Yet you ask me blindly to give you up to the designs, or love, of a stranger," said he—"a man whom, you confess, neither your mother nor your brother knows!"

He spoke so passionately that Mrs Langley turned, and held up her hand for silence.

"Hush! I implore you," whispered Florian.

"Oh, certainly," she said, after a moment's hesitation. "But was there anything strange in my looking at paintings on a wet day, as well as yourself?"

"Oh, no, nothing," he replied. "I only wish I had the happiness to escort you, instead of the stranger I saw with you."

He spoke so passionately that Mrs Langley turned, and held up her hand for silence.

"Hush! I implore you," whispered Florian.

"He never will be," repeated Florian.

Her face dropped on her flowers so low that Vivian could not see the tears that wetted them.

"Then I give you my promise," he said, reluctantly. "Oh, Miss Langley, you make me accept a hard task! You will not trust me, but you force me to trust this stranger, into whose hands I yield your reputation, your happiness, your life!"

"You yield them into noble hands," she said; "there is nothing to fear."

"So much trust, and no love!" said Damerel, with a jealous pang in his voice. "Oh, Florian, if you would but give me the right to protect you!"

Florian looked up with consternation in her eyes—a glance of such genuine fear and sorrow, that for a moment Vivian was shocked. Then he thought he had confessed too much to stop now; so, stooping low, he continued, hurriedly:

"You know I love you. Tell me is there any hope?"

"None," she replied.

Her voice was so faint and low, that Damerel scarcely heard it; but he saw her shrink away from him, and, moving to her mother's side, she put her hand within her arm, and stooped and kissed her. Vivian Damerel watched her in bitterness of spirit.

"She means me to think that her mother's is her only love," said he; "and care for her is her life long duty. But I am not deceived; she loves this stranger."

With the stage a blank to him, and the music one clash of furious discord, Vivian Damerel sat out the opera, and then saw the ladies to their carriage.

DROWNED BY A DEER.

WIARTON, Nov. 15.—It is reported here that two of a hunting party up the peninsula were drowned in one of the small lakes. The report says that the party had chased into the lake a large deer. It was promptly shot and two of the party went with the small boat to bring it ashore, thinking he was dead. They took hold of the animal to take him into the boat when he made several desperate struggles, upsetting the boat, and before their company could reach them the two sank to rise no more.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—Travellers to and from distant climes would do well to bear in mind that these changes and the altered diet and surroundings of their lives entail manifold risks to health. Occasions are sure to arise in which they will need a remedy such as these renowned Pills and Ointment, and no traveller by land or sea should ever fail to have a supply at hand. Then he may truly be said to have a physician always at his call for the various emergencies of travel. Chills and fevers should be promptly treated, and the printed directions should be carefully studied at the commencement of any illness, for Holloway's remedies can be safely used in all climates.

SAID TO BE IN MONTREAL.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—Paris papers yesterday announced that the defaulting Paris banker, Raynaud, had been heard from in Montreal, in fact he had written a friend in Paris requesting him to go on his, Raynaud's, bond for a position of trust in a Montreal bank. A coincidence in connection with this appeal is found in the fact that the letter was received by the friend here, in Paris, the same day that the magnificent remnants of his former palatial establishment in the Place de la Bourse were ruthlessly dispersed by the sheriff.

It is understood that the Paris police have communicated with the police of Montreal, looking toward the arrest of Raynaud, and his return to France, where a large reward is still standing for his capture.

Two Young Ladies Drown in Death Near Bedside Bed.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 13.—The first death on the prairie this year is reported from Medicine Hat. A 18 year old son of L. B. Cochrane and a 19 year old son of E. Wilson merchant of this place, whose families are just outside of town, were caught in Friday night's blizzard while looking for some cattle. Searching parties were organized the following night, when the Cochrane boy was found 18 miles from home frozen to death beside a haystack his horse resting by over his dead body. Police are now searching the country for the other boy.

THE CAUSE AND THE REMEDY.

NOTWITHSTANDING the many fervent sermons preached of late in St. Andrew's church against wrong-doing, we appear to be enjoying a perfect epedemic of crime in this section of the country. In September last we had young James Smith convicted of stealing a cow and sentenced to six months in the Central prison; a few days after Anson Moore was convicted of horse stealing, and is now serving a term of three months in the common jail; during the fall fair James Oberlton was caught in the act of pocket-picking, and on conviction was sentenced to one year in the Central; next William O'Brien was convicted of stealing an overcoat from Ald. McKitrick, and is now keeping company with the pocket picker, and on Monday young Frank MaMaster was convicted of larceny, and was by Judge McCarthy relegated to "Castle" Sutherland for three months. Besides these convictions, Joe Reid is out on bail to appear at the next quarter sessions for trial, on a charge of inflicting serious bodily harm to young Alfred Wise, a clerk in S. Donner's emporium, and William Shinnimman now languishes in jail waiting his trial at the spring assizes on a charge of the murder of J. A. Montgomery at Hockley in October last. In addition to the above there have been several robberies "from the person" within the past two months, which, so far, have not been fastened on the guilty parties. The last effort in that direction being the trial before the P. M. on Monday last of an information by old Johnny Matson against Alfred Pearson, a well known bed-bite auctioneer, of a suspected theft of a sum of money from the old man on Thursday last, and which information was dismissed for want of evidence incriminating the accused. Several other cases of stealing from drunken men, of stealing buffalo robes and other articles from stables and other places have been reported to the chief of police. In some cases the evidence strongly points to the supposed criminal, but is insufficient to convict; in others the sufferers refuse to prosecute, prefering to abide by the first loss, rather than undergo the loss and inconvenience of a prosecution, and, perhaps, creating enemities which might find an outlet in the torch of the incendiary, or other personal injury inflicted by the accused or some of his criminal friends.

While the number of crimes may be exceptional, and while we may hope for a respite for a time, it would be wisdom to enquire the cause of so much miscoing and to see whether or not it is in the power of the authorities or the community to in some way prevent a wholesale repetition of what has been happening for the past months. In the cases of O'Brien, Reid, McMaster and Shinnimman, and in all the recent cases of petty robbing in the town, there can be no question but liquor was the immediate cause of the crime in each case. Had O'Brian been sober the alderman's coat would still be hanging in the hall; had Reid been sober he would rather have defended than injure the boy; had McMaster been sober he would not have entered the residence of a former employer and friend and dispoiled him of his honest earned means; the Montgomerys were the worse of liquor or they would not have made the attack on the Shinnimans, which cost one of the parties his life and closed a career which otherwise might have been prosperous and respectable; had Johnny Matson been able to care for himself he would not now be mourning the loss of his much needed capital; and in like manner the dozens who have been robbed were at the time too drunk to care for themselves or their money, and fell easy victims to the ghouls who prowl about nightly in search of such unfortunates. These are facts which everyone admits. What is the remedy for all this misery? One says, "let the parties quit drinking, or if they will drink, drink only in moderation." That doctrine has been preached since the days of Job, and drunkness seems on the increase. Another says, "let us try moral suasion." That has been the cry since Moses broke the tablets of the ten commandments at the foot of Mount Sinai, and still inhumanity and crime goes hand-in hand through all the intervening generations. Still another says, "let the police be more vigilant." We have but one policeman and one private watchman, and it is quite impossible that they can guard the whole town and be in every back alley and yard to protect the unwary from the various sharpers who infest the town. What is wanted is a more practical scheme if drunkness and crime are to be stamped out of our midst. We have shown the root of the major part of this evil, and it largely lies at the door of the hotelkeepers. All are aware of hotels in this town in which no one ever hears of a robbery been committed. And why? Simply because drunkness is not encouraged and the law as to the refusal to give liquor to persons intoxicated is respected, and because well known thieves are not permitted on the premises and the care and safety of guests are carefully guarded. On the other hand, there are hotel keepers who will give liquor to any person, no matter what his condition may be, so long as he has the concessial five cents to pay for what he wants, or rather what he knows he does not want. And it is a fact there are certain parties in this town as well-known as if their names had been engraved on the penetentiary door post, who have no occupation and whose only subsistance is derived from the robbing of unfortunates upon whose own money they are first stupified and then plundered, and this often in open daylight, the preparation going on openly before the eyes of the barkeeper, and some of them are responsible for many of the grosser crimes. What we say is within the knowledge of the entire community, but no action is taken. Something must be done if a cure is effected. There must be greater surveillance of the hotels on the part of the inspector, more scrutiny as to the character and antecedents of the applicants for licenses, a record of all larcenies and wrong doing in each hotel should be kept, and until satisfactory explanations are given to such charge grants should not be made. By such means only can the standard of our hotels be raised, and until these be other improved methods are adopted will drunkness and crime grow, increase and flourish in Grangeville.

And to the manufacturers we would say, cast aside party spirit, license only good men, and in numbers only sufficient to supply the wants of the town, deal with each applicant on his merits, irrespective of political partisanship, and good results will follow, and you have the word of THE SUN that before another year drunkness, crime and one of all sorts will be diminished and this town will cease to be a by-word for crime and lawlessness (as it now is) amongst the towns of the province.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE public school board seems to be the centre of attraction now, and everybody is expressing an opinion on the merits and demerits of that body. THE SUN will have its say next week.

Sir John Thompson last week completed his 47th year, having been born in Halifax on the 10th November, 1844, the year Sir John Macdonald was first returned to the Canadian Assembly. Sir John is three years younger than Mr. Laurier. Both were born in November. Blessed with great physical endurance and perfect health, the Minister of Justice will likely live as long again. At all events such is the wish of his thousands of admirers.

THE value of live stock owned by Ontario farmers, according to the last bulletin of the Bureau of Industries, is this year $4,635,000 greater than in 1890. It is made up by an increase in the number of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. This is not the result of the big harvest of this year, but of a general improvement in the position of the agricultural classes. Ontario is retrograding only in the mind of the partisan pessimist.

THERE promises to be abundance of fun at the municipal elections in Mono next year. Reeve Allan has made up his mind to retire, and already there are two candidates in the field for the office which he will vacate. First Deputy reeve Island and Mr. James Snell are the aspirants, and the battle between these gentlemen will undoubtedly be very exciting. Second Deputy reeve Dynes, we are told, is looking for the 1st deputy-reeveship, and Councillor Still has a notion of stepping into Mr. Dynes' shoes.

FROM the comments of the Boston press Mr. Laurier, it is judged, made a decided impression on the critical people of the Hub. The leader of the Opposition is a fine looking gentleman, and his good qualities are not all on the outside either. He can both do and say handsome things, and stood among the representatives of the intellect of cultured Boston, the peer of the best. His countrymen at home are proud of him abroad and would be prouder of him at home if he was a little more select in choosing his political company.

THE municipal pot has commenced to simmer up in Amaranth, and the approaching elections will undoubtedly cause a great deal of excitement. We are authorized to state that Reeve Wansbrough will not be a candidate next year as he has made up his mind to retire. It is also rumored that councillors Turner and Dadgeon are going to leave the political arena. Deputy-reeve Johnston, it is said, will look for something higher than his present position, and that will be the office of reeve. In our next issue we may have something more to say on this subject.

MANY Reformers of East Wellington have lost faith in party conventions since Mr. Craig was defeated in the recent political contest in that riding. The Elora correspondent of the Guelph Mercury counts on the chances of a Conservative representing the constituency as follows: "The unexpected defeat of Mr. Craig last week by Mr. Kirkwood excited some annoyance here, but the feeling of disappointment will gradually wear away. Annoying as were many of the circumstances connected with the election, there is consolation in the fact that Mr. Kirkwood has always been identified with the Reform party and that he will be a follower of Mr. Mowat during his Parliamentary career. Faith in Conventions have been much shaken by the course of events during this election, and it is doubtful whether the Reformers of East Wellington if their present temper continues, will resort to them for many years to come. What the outcome of this will be time alone can tell, for it is almost certain that the Conservative party will take the field here at the next general election with bettter prospects of success than it has had since 1871. That Mr. Craig made a stout and fair fight all admit, and the Reformers of the centre portion of the riding very much regret that anything should have occurred to prove it its success.

MONO MILLS.

GOING TO HEAR IT.—A number of young people are going to attend the band concert at Orangeville on Friday evening. They want to hear Mrs Caldwell warble some of her best songs.

AN OLD RESIDENT DEAD.—On Monday of last week an old resident of Mono passed away in the person of Mr. Wm. Atkinson, who breathed his last at the residence of his nephew, Mr. Wm. Atkinson on the 7th line. Deceased never married and at the time of his death had reached the ripe old age of 90 years. The body was buried in the Church of England burrying ground on Tuesday, Rev. A. C. Watt officiating.

FUNERAL.—The funeral of the late Mrs. Wm Waines, daughter of Mr. William Duke of the 7th line, Mono, who died at Toronto on Sunday, the 18th inst., took place on the following Tuesday to St. John's burying ground, Mono. Her death was entirely unexpected, and the fact that her husband is in the far West and was unable to attend the funeral makes the bereavement a very sad one. Deceased was 25 years old and leaves a son who is too young to realize the loss he has sustained.

WHITFIELD.

SUDDEN DEATH.—We are sorry to have to record the death of Mr. William Bailey, which occured rather suddenly on Monday, the 16th. Deceased was able to walk around two hours before he died. He was 42 years of age and leaves a wife and four children.

A Voice From Scotland.

Dear Sirs,—I can highly recommend Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cured my daughter of a cough she had been troubled with since childhood. She is now twelve years old.

Mrs. M. Paterson, Scotland, Ont.

COUNTY LEGISLATORS.

Winding up the Business of the Corporation for 1891.

The members of the Dufferin county council opened their last session for the year 1891 in the court house shortly after 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. Warden Allan occupied the chair, and all the members were present: Messrs. Brown, Mudamott, Owens, O'Laughlen, Hamilton, Island, Jelly, Edmanton, Lindsay, McCann, McLelland, McDonald, Park, Simpson, Wansbrough and Wiggins.

After the minutes of the June session had been read and adopted the warden addressed the council. He complimented his co-workers on their healthy appearance, and referred to various matters connected with the corporation. The following accounts were presented and referred to their respective committees: A. & W. Johnston, $39.66; Beswick & Aikin, $42; Jas. McDonald, $3; Jas. Fosaide, $12; T. Stevenson, $4.10; Jas. McPherson, $1.50; Shelburne Free Press, $3; A. Turner, $1.95; Shelburne Economist, $3; Crown Attorney Myers, $10; W. L. Walsh, $9; Clark & Son, $20; T. T. King, $10; Inspector Gordon, $16.63; Barber & Ellis, $54.20; Jas Kearns, $12; M. Gray, $3.95; Jos. Riddell, $3.50; Irwin & Hewson, $6 15; J. H. Hains, $30; Advertiser, $1.50; Grand Valley Star, $1.50; Post, $401 50; THE SUN, $5 50.

A communication from A. A. Hughson requesting the refund of $19.20, the fine and costs imposed on Calvin Peters who was charged with peddling without having a license.

From T. Hamilton respecting the repairing of certain bridges in East Garafraxa.

Mr. Jelly moved, seconded by Mr. Lindsay, that County Solicitor Walsh be authorized to defend actions that may be brought against Justices of the Peace for making convictions under the hawkers' and peddlers' by-law. After a little discussion the motion was declared carried.

Mr. Park introduced a motion to the effect that East Luther had expended $132 in repairing bridges over 100 feet long, and the county solicitor gave his opinion that the county would be responsible for part of the cost of repairing bridges over that length. Referred to the R. & B. committee.

The council adjourned until 10 a. m. on Wednesday.

(Remainder held over until next week.

CAMILLA.

FARM SOLD.—Mr S. F. Johnston of St. Catharines, a former resident of Mono township, has sold his farm here to Mr. Coyne of Brampton.

CONCERT.—The concert held in Morrison's hall here last Friday, was well attended. The program was excellent. We hope it was a success financially.

J. H. L.'s DREAM.—If your correspondent can find time he will give you the substance of a dream that Joy, Honesty, and Liberty Lewis had the other night, so keep wide awake, Mr. SUN.

NEW TEACHER.—Mr. Walker of Orangeville has been engaged as principal of the Camilla school, and has entered on this duty. We hope he'll give good satisfaction and we welcome Mr. Walker to our midst.

RESIGNED.—We are sorry to learn that Mr. Hewitt has resigned his position as teacher in our school. Mr. H. has been here for some time and has given excellent satisfaction, being held in high esteem by all both as a teacher and resident of this place.

CREDIT SALE.—The farm stock and implements of the late Geo. South will be sold by auctioneer Patterson of Orangeville on the farm, lot 12, centre road, Mono, on Friday, December 4th. Everything will be sold without reserve.

GETTING THERE RAPIDLY.—Every week THE SUN is finding its way into new places here, because it gives all the news of Camilla and vicinity. There are a few people who still borrow the paper, but we hope they will cease to do so any longer, and go at once and subscribe.

LITTLE LOCALS.—Mr. Essery is building a handsome verandah to his house on lot 13. Tom is a hustler.... Mr. John Phenix has rented Mr. Joshua Doherty's farm. We wish you success, Jack.... The ratepayers of this place are beginning to wear long faces—this is not because tobacco has risen but that the tax-gatherer is on his rounds.

SHOULD BE CAREFUL.—Your correspondent was not surprised when he read a letter in one of your town papers last week, which accused Mr. Hewitt, our schoolteacher, of writing the Camilla news for THE SUN. Right here your reporter might say that he is not ashamed of anything he has written, and the reason he does not wish his name known is that he will not give contemptable blackleps the satisfaction of knowing who he is. We hold no spite, and we treat all leniently but not harshly. Unlike the Post, we never blamed Mr. Morrison for stealing Mr. Doney's citrons until he commenced blaming other people—the Glenoe boys by saying he saw peelings on the road. Think of boys eating raw citrons! If they ate this vegetable they must possess as depraved a taste as some people who we are unfortunately acquainted with. We did not refer to Mr. Morrison's weakness until he laughed at those of others (his letter gives abundant proof of that). We do not intend to answer in any way the charges he made in his letter, for Mr. Hewitt wields a mightier pen than we do. Of course Mr. Hewitt is at a disadvantage, for trying to injure a certain man's character is like fighting a shadow.

WHAT THEY SAY.

Now, Morrison, take a good advice:
Leave other folks alone;
Save your money and be able
To pay for your own tombstone
—Hewitt.

O thou grim mischief-making deil,
That makes the notes of discord squeal,
Till crazy men shall dance a reel
In blood knee deep.
—O. Hersen.

Humpty-Dumpty stood on the floor,
Challanged to throw us all out of door,
But Shanny Hughson tried him a crack
And flopped him down on his boomerang back.
—Jack Eloomer.

Now when soon shall we sit down
At our spiritual feasts?
I guess we'll take the grass'
Till conscience troubles beasts.
—Free S. S. Teachers.

Name me impure hessedit.—Bob Brenner.

Mine was the unwilling, frenzied part,
O why should I such scenes outline,
Scenes so abhorred to my heart,
'Tis thine to pity and forgive.
—Jack Phenix.

If my snarling, biting not,
To blame poor Hewitt, dare man,
May grief and sorrow be his lot,
For Hewitt is a rare man.
—A. Brenner.

[EDITORIAL ADVICE.—The editor of THE SUN earnestly requests correspondents to avoid personal matters as much as possible, because we believe, and it has always been the case, that no good is derived from persons airing their opinions of neighbors in a newspaper. While not saying who is responsible for this unpleasantness, we think it would be well if both writers, "A Ratepayer," and our unknown man, would lay aside their pens, for as personal matters are concerned, and devote the time spent in penning personal paragraphs to cultivating a more friendly relation. It would be better for all concerned to leave personalities severely alone.]

Many cases are known of persons living to be over 100 years old and there is no good reason why this should not occur. By paying attention to the health by using Burdock Blood Bitters when necessary to purify the blood and strengthen the system much may be added to the comfort and happiness of life even if the century mark is not attained.

THE DEATH OF THE PRINCE.

Two Young Lads Drown in South Bay Rathbone Hat.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 12.—The first death on the parish this year is reported from Rathbone Hat. A 16 year old son of L. B. Cockburn and a 16 year old son of E. Wilson, merchant of this place, whose families are just outside of town, were caught in Friday night's blizzard while looking for some cattle. Searching parties were organized the following night when the Cockburn boy was found 16 miles from home frozen to death beside a haystack his horse rolling buffalo over his dead body. Police are now scouring the country for the other boy.

LONG TRIP FOR A BRIDE.

She Must Travel 1,600 Miles to Reach Her Prospective Husband.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 22.—Miss Hibbert, daughter of Captain Hibbert, of Yarmouth, purchased at Digby the first through ticket over issued at that station to a private using to Hong Kong. She goes via Vancouver and is due at Hong Kong December 15th, on which day she is to wed Captain Brown, of Bangkok, who is now in charge of the docks at Hong Kong. The parents of the same are very romantic. Miss Hibbert visited Hong Kong early last summer with her father. There she met Captain Brown for the first time. She promised to return in the fall and marry him and she has kept her word. She will have to travel 7,000 miles to reach her prospective husband.

The Christmas Number of SATURDAY NIGHT contains forty four pages beautifully illustrated, printed on fine paper, and is a marvel of typographical art. A large amount of money has been paid for prize stories, poems, and photographs. The stories have been illustrated by the best Canadian artists and every page contains something pleasing to the eye. The publishers of SATURDAY NIGHT never indulge in fakes of any kind. It is their aim to make their Christmas issue an advertisement which is certain to attract readers to their regular issue.

Perhaps you do not read SATURDAY NIGHT? It is a twelve page paper, always well illustrated and admittedly wears the handsomest dress of any paper in the Dominion. All the good things from the American and English and German comic papers are reproduced, both jokes and pictures. The faces of foreign celebrities, authors, statesmen and actors appear in its column. It pays more money for the copyright stories of leading English novelists than all the other Canadian papers combined. It is thoroughly alive and has the largest and ablest editorial staff of any weekly paper in Canada. Its large circulation and magnificent advertising patronage alone make it a possibility in a country like Canada where at best there is but a limited patronage. The Christmas Number and the regular issue of TORONTO SATURDAY NIGHT are for sale by all newsdealers. The price of the former is fifty cents, including the picture Fatima; the latter is two dollars per annum—two dollars and fifty cents for both. You cannot do better than subscribe either directly to the Sheppard Publishing Company (Ltd.), 8 Adelaide street west, Toronto, or through your news agent.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers.—Daily experience confirms the fact which has triumphed over all opposition for more than fifty years, viz., that no means are known equal to Holloway's remedies for curing bad legs, bad breasts, sores, wounds, disease of the skin, erysipelas, abscesses, burns, scalds, and, in truth, all maladies where the skin is broken. To cure these infirmities quickly is of primary importance, as compulsory confinement indoors weakens the general health. The ready means of cure are found in Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which heal the sores and expel their cause. In the very worst cases the Ointment has succeeded in effecting a perfect cure after every other means had failed in giving adequate relief.

An address presented by the Presbyterian general assembly to the Marquis of Lorne, after the recovery of the Princess Louise in 1882, is now offered for sale in a second-hand shop. To avoid this sort of thing the pompous person who reads the address should always keep it, for he is always much more interested in the affair than the bored big man upon whom he inflicts his ponderous sentences.

Many women suffer in silence from the troubles peculiar to their sex rather than consult a physician. Let them try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they will no longer feel life a burden.

A young girl named Snell, belonging near Chatsworth, ran away from home several days ago to conceal her shame. Two weeks ago she gave birth to a babe in Owen Sound. The other night she came to Dundalk, hired a room at the Connor House, and leaving the baby on the bed took the next train. She was arrested at Proton Station next day and brought back.

Easy to use, pleasant and agreeable is the verdict of all who have used Nasal Balm, and better still, there is no case of cold in the head or catarrh that it will not cure.

Horrors of the Liver.

You may always know when your liver is out of order, or when you are weak in either billious, by any of the following symptoms: Pain in the side and back, dizziness, dull headache, added taste in the mouth in the morning, sallow colored complexion, yellowish dirt in the eyes, costiveness or diarrhoea, of slimy dark color, low spirits, and dismal forebodings. It is acknowledged by all physicians and others, who have seen their action, that Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are a perfect cure for all bilious affections. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all medicine dealers.

Rev. W. A. Hunter of Erskine church, Toronto, and Rev. D. C. Hossack, pastor of St. Andrew's church here, will exchange pulpits on Sunday, Dec. 13.

Last Wednesday the Hillas Terrace of 7 two-storey roughcast houses at Credit Forks was sold to the Bank of Hamilton here for $2,500. It was a good investment.

On Sunday of last week Rev. D. C. Hossack, pastor of St. Andrew's church, commenced a series of sermons on the "Life of of David," the second of which will be preached next Sunday evening.

The band boys promise you something good if you go to the town hall to-morrow evening. Mrs. Caldwell of Toronto, one of Canada's best singers, and Mr. Geo. Fox, the clever young violinist, will be there.

Young Wm. Shinnimman, the boy who was to stand his trial for murder at the Spring Assizes, still remains behind the bars in "Castle" Sutherland. It is understood he will be released on bail in a few days.

The Orange lodge, Kennedy, the member for Toronto, who protested against Mr. McKinnon of Kent at the late general elections, was sentenced to six months in the Central, still resides at the "castle."

Saturday brought a lot of money to town—by the popular platoon of Holiday, Santa Claus and the Christmas angel, on the same express train, a couple of young men who had been unfortunate enough being relieved of his cash.

Encourage the band boys by attending their entertainment in the town hall to-morrow (Friday) night. Mrs. Caldwell, the great Canadian warbler, and Mr. George Fox, the young violinist, will be there. Don't miss it.

Those Saugeen hotelkeepers were fined last week for having the window blinds on their bar rooms down during the hours which strictly cannot legally be dispensed. Orangeville hotelkeepers had better take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

RAPIDLY WEDS.—Mr. D. Livingstone, one of the proprietors of the Garden House, was married at Toronto on Wednesday of last week to Mrs. Carlyle of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Livingstone arrived home on Friday evening. The best wishes to congratulation.

ARCHIVES OF ONTARIO

Sun will have to say only work.

Sir John Thompson last week completed his 47th year, having been born in Halifax on the 10th November, 1844, the year Sir John Macdonald was first returned to the Canadian Assembly. Sir John is three years younger than Mr. Laurier. Both were born in November. Blessed with great physical endurance and perfect health, the Minister of Justice will likely live as long again. All our events each is the wish of his thousands of admirers.

THE value of live stock owned by Ontario farmers, according to the last bulletin of the Bureau of Industries, is this year $4,635,000 greater than in 1890. It is made up by an increase in the number of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. This is not the result of the big harvest of this year, but of a general improvement in the position of the agricultural classes. Ontario is retrograding only in the mind of the partisan pessimist.

THERE promises to be abundance of fun at the municipal elections in Mono next year. Reeve Allan has made up his mind to retire, and already there are two candidates in the field for the office which he will vacate. First Deputy reeve Island and Mr. James Snell are the aspirants, and the battle between these gentlemen will undoubtedly be very exciting. Second Deputy reeve Dynes, we are told, is looking for the 1st deputy-reeveship and Councillor Still has a notion of stepping into Mr. Dynes' shoes.

FROM the comments of the Boston press Mr. Laurier, it is judged, made a decided impression on the critical people of the Hub. The leader of the Opposition is a fine looking gentleman, and his good qualities are not all on the outside either. He can both do and say handsome things, and stood among the representatives of the intellect of cultured Boston, the pour of the best. His countrymen at home are proud of him abroad and would be prouder of him at home if he was a little more select in choosing his political company.

THE municipal pot has commenced to simmer up in Amaranth, and the approaching elections will undoubtedly cause a great deal of excitement. We are authorized to state that Reeve Wansbrough will not be a candidate next year as he has made up his mind to retire. It is also rumored that councillors Turner and Dodgeon are going to leave the political arena. Deputy-reeve Johnston, it is said, will look for something higher than his present position, and that will be the office of reeve. In our next issue we may have something more to say on this subject.

MANY Reformers of East Wellington have lost faith in party conventions since Mr. Craig was defeated in the recent political contest in that riding. The Elora correspondent of the Guelph Mercury counts on the chances of a Conservative representing the constituency as follows: "The unexpected defeat of Mr. Craig last week by Mr. Kirkwood excited some annoyance here, but the feeling of disappointment will gradually wear away. Annoying as were many of the circumstances connected with the election, there is consolation in the fact that Mr. Kirkwood has always been identified with the Reform party and that he will be a follower of Mr. Mowat during his Parliamentary career. Faith in Conventions have been much shaken by the course of events during this election, and it is doubtful whether the Reformers of East Wellington if their present temper continues, will resort to them for many years to come. What the outcome of this will be time alone can tell, for it is almost certain that the Conservative party will take the field here at the next general election with bettter prospects of success than it has had since 1871. That Mr. Craig made a stout and fair fight all admit, and the Reformers of the centre portion of the riding very much regret that anything should have occurred to prove it its success.

MONO MILLS.

GOING TO HEAR IT.—A number of young people are going to attend the band concert at Orangeville on Friday evening. They want to hear Mrs Caldwell warble some of her best songs.

AN OLD RESIDENT DEAD.—On Monday of last week an old resident of Mono passed away in the person of Mr. Wm. Atkinson, who breathed his last at the residence of his nephew, Mr. Wm. Atkinson on the 7th line. Deceased never married and at the time of his death had reached the ripe old age of 90 years. The body was buried in the Church of England burrying ground on Tuesday, Rev. A. C. Watt officiating.

FUNERAL.—The funeral of the late Mrs Wm Waines, daughter of Mr. William Duke of the 7th line, Mono, who died at Toronto on Sunday, the 15th inst., took place on the following Tuesday to St. John's burying ground, Mono. Her death was entirely unexpected, and the fact that her husband is in the far West and was unable to attend the funeral makes the bereavement a very sad one. Deceased was 25 years old and leaves a son who is too young to realize the loss he has sustained.

WHITFIELD.

SUDDEN DEATH.—We are sorry to have to record the death of Mr. William Bailey, which occured rather suddenly on Monday, the 16th. Deceased was able to walk around two hours before he died. He was 43 years of age and leaves a wife and four children.

MRS. M. FERGUSON, Scotland, Ont.

Many cases are known of persons living to be over 100 years old and there is no good reason why this should not occur. By paying attention to the health by using Burdock Blood Bitters when necessary to purify the blood and strengthen the system much may be added to the comfort and happiness of life even if the century mark is not attained.

CAMILLA.

FARM SOLD.—Mr. S. F. Johnston of St. Catharines, a former resident of Mono township, has sold his farm here to Mr. Coyne of Brampton.

CONCERT.—The concert held in Morrison's hall here last Friday was well attended. The program was excellent. We hope it was a success financially.

J. H. L.'s DESIRE.—If your correspondent can find time he will give you the substance of a dream that Joy, Honesty, and Liberty Lewis had the other night, so keep wide awake, Mr. SUN.

NEW TEACHER.—Mr. Walker of Orangeville has been engaged as principal of the Camilla school, and has entered on this duty. We hope he'll give good satisfaction and we welcome Mr. Walker to our midst.

RUMORED.—We are sorry to learn that Mr. Hewitt has resigned his position as teacher in our school. Mr. H. has been here for some time and has given excellent satisfaction, being held in high esteem by all both as a teacher and resident of this place.

CHEAPY SALE.—The farm stock and implements of the late Geo. South will be sold by auctioneer Patterson of Orangeville on the farm, lot 12, centre road, Mono, on Friday, December 4th. Everything will be sold without reserve.

GETTING THERE RAPIDLY.—Every week THE SUN is finding its way into new places here, because it gives all the news of Camilla and vicinity. There are a few people who still borrow the paper, but we hope they will cease to do so any longer, and go at once and subscribe.

LITTLE LOCALS.—Mr. Essery is building a handsome verandah to his house on lot 13. Tom is a hustler.... Mr. John Phenix has rented Mr. Joshua Doherty's farm. We wish you success, Jack.... The ratepayers of this place are beginning to wear long faces—this is not because tobacco has risen but that the tax-gatherer is on his rounds.

SHOULD BE CAREFUL.—Your correspondent was not surprised when he read a letter in one of your town papers last week, which accused Mr. Hewitt, our schoolteacher, of writing the Camilla news for THE SUN. Right here your reporter might say that he is not ashamed of anything he has written, and the reason he does not wish his name known is that he will not give contemptible blackleg the satisfaction of knowing who he is. We hold no spite, and we treat all leniently but not harshly. Unlike the Post, we never blamed Mr. Morrison for stealing Mr. Doney's citrons until he commenced blaming other people—the Glenoe boys by saying he saw peelings on the road. Think of boys eating raw citrons! If they ate this vegetable they must possess as depraved a taste as some people who we are unfortunately acquainted with. We did not refer to Mr. Morrison's weakness until he laughed at those of others (his letter gives abundant proof of that). We do not intend to answer in any way the charges he made in his letter, for Mr. Hewitt wields a mightier pen than we do. Of course Mr. Hewitt is at a disadvantage, for trying to injure a certain man's character is like fighting a shadow.

WHAT THEY SAY.

Now, Morrison, take a good advice:
Leave other folks alone;
Save your money and be able
To pay for your own tombstone
—Hewitt.

O thou grim mischief-making deil,
That makes the notes of discord squeal,
Till crazy men shall dance a reel
In blood knee deep.
—O. Hernbn.

Humpty-Dumpty stood on the floor,
Challenged to throw us all out of door,
But Shanny Hughson tried him a crack
And flopped him down on his boomerang back.
—Jack Bloomer.

Now whereon shall we sit down
At our spiritual feasts?
I guess we'll take the groun'
Till conscience troubles beasts.
—Free S. S. Teachers.

Nemo me impune lacessit.—Bob Bremner.

Mine was the unevilling, frenzied part,
O why should I such scenes outline,
Scenes so abhorred to my heart,
'Tis thine to pity and forgive.
—Jack Phenix.

If any marling, biting act,
To blame poor Hewitt, dare man,
May grief and sorrow be his lot,
For Hewitt is a sure man.
—A. Bremner.

[EDITORIAL ADVICE.—The editor of THE SUN earnestly requests correspondents to avoid personal matters as much as possible, because we believe, and it has always been the case, that no good is derived from persons airing their opinions of neighbors in a newspaper. While not saying who is responsible for this unpleasantness, we think it would be well if both writers, "A Ratepayer," and our unknown man, would lay aside their pens, so far as personal matters are concerned, and devote the time spent in penning personal paragraphs to cultivated a more friendly relation. It would be better for all concerned to leave personalities severely alone.]

The Best Travel Line Made to South Bay Transporting Bankers.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 22.—Miss Bibbert, daughter of Captain Bibbert, of Yarmouth, purchased at Dingy the first through ticket ever issued at that station to a private using to Hong Kong. She goes via Vancouver and is due at Hong Kong December 18th, on 23rd day she is to wed Captain Brown, of Brampton, who is now in charge of the docks at Hong Kong. The proceedings of the case are very romantic. Miss Bibbert visited Hong Kong early last summer with her father. There she met Captain Brown for the first time. She promised to return in the fall and marry him and she has kept her word. She will have to travel 7,000 miles to reach her prospective husband.

The Christmas Number of SATURDAY NIGHT contains forty four pages beautifully illustrated, printed on fine paper, and is a marvel of typographical art. A large amount of money has been paid for prize stories, poems, and photographs. The stories have been illustrated by the best Canadian artists and every page contains something pleasing to the eye. The publishers of SATURDAY NIGHT never indulge in fakes of any kind. It is their aim to make their Christmas issue an advertisement which is certain to attract readers to their regular issue.

Perhaps you do not read SATURDAY NIGHT? It is a twelve page paper, always well illustrated and admittedly wears the handsomest dress of any paper in the Dominion. All the good things from the American and English and German comic papers are reproduced, both jokes and pictures. The faces of foreign celebrities, authors, statesmen and actors appear in its column. It pays more money for the copyright stories of leading English novelists than all the other Canadian papers combined. It is thoroughly clean and has the largest and ablest editorial staff of any weekly paper in Canada. Its large circulation and magnificent advertising patronage alone make it a possibility in a country like Canada where at best there is but a limited patronage. The Christmas Number and the regular issue of TORONTO SATURDAY NIGHT are for sale by all newsdealers. The price of the former is fifty cents, including the picture Fatima; the latter is two dollars per annum—two dollars and fifty cents for both. You cannot do better than subscribe either directly to the Sheppard Publishing Company (Ltd.), 8 Adelaide street west, Toronto, or through your news agent.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers.—Daily experience confirms the fact which has triumphed over all opposition for more than fifty years, viz., that no means are known equal to Holloway's remedies for curing bad legs, bad breasts, sores, wounds, disease of the skin, erysipelas, abscesses, burns, scalds, and, in truth, all maladies where the skin is broken. To cure these infirmities quickly is of primary importance, as compulsory confinement indoors weakens the general health. The ready means of cure are found in Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which heal the sores and expel their cause. In the very worst cases the Ointment has succeeded in effecting a perfect cure after every other means had failed in giving adequate relief.

An address presented by the Presbyterian general assembly to the Marquis of Lorne, after the recovery of the Princess Louise in 1882, is now offered for sale in a second hand shop. To avoid this sort of thing the pompous person who reads the address should always keep it, for he is always much more interested in the affair than the bored big man upon whom he inflicts his ponderous sentences.

Many women suffer in silence from the troubles peculiar to their sex rather than consult a physician. Let them try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they will no longer feel life a burden.

A young girl named Snell, belonging near Chatsworth, ran away from home several days ago to conceal her shame. Two weeks ago she gave birth to a babe in Owen Sound. The other night she came to Dundalk, hired a room at the Connor House, and leaving the babe on the bed took the next train. She was arrested at Proton Station next day and brought back.

Beware of the Liver.

You may always know when your liver is out of order, or when you need to be called bilious, by any of the following symptoms: Pain in the side and back, dizziness, dull headache, a foul taste in the mouth in the morning, sallow colored complexion, yellowish tint in the eyes, costiveness or diarrhoea, of slimy dark color, low spirit, and dismal forebodings. It is acknowledged by all physicians and others, who have seen their action, that Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are a perfect cure for all bilious affections. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all medicine dealers.

Three Fergus hotelkeepers were fined last week for having the window blinds on their bar rooms down during the hours which whisky cannot legally be dispensed. Orangeville hotelkepers had better take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

HAPPILY WED.—Mr. D. Livingston, one of the proprietors of the Gordon house, was married at Toronto on Wednesday of last week to Mrs. Corbie of Orillia. Mr. and Mrs. Livingston arrived home on Friday evening. THE SUN extends its congratulations.

ANNUAL MEETING.—The annual meeting of the Orangeville board of trade will be held in the council chamber at 8 o'clock on Tuesday evening, Dec. 1st. The election of officers for next year will take place and a large attendance is requested.

WARDEN ALLEN'S DINNER.—Warden Allen banqueted the county councillors and a number of friends at the Commercial hotel last evening, and a most enjoyable time was spent by him and his guests. A more complete report will be found in the next issue of THE SUN.

A GOOD PRIZE.—Geo. Booth, the east Broadway grocer, will give a prize of a set of dishes, valued at $12, for the best tub of butter brought to market on Thursday, Dec. 17, the butter to be his property. Anything over 40 lbs, Mr. Booth will pay the market price in cash.

CHEAP HEATING.—The town of Dunnville is now supplied with natural gas, and coal and wood for heating purposes are entirely driven out of use. As at Kingsville, gas for stoves is supplied for $1 to $2 a month, and as there is no limit to the length of piping, one stove can be made to heat a good sized house.

NEW FIRM.—Mr. J. J. Kelly of the Central hardware store has taken in a partner in the person of Mr. F. J. Marshall of Yanatter, and the business will be conducted in future by Kelly & Marshall. Both members of the new firm are well known throughout the country and they will secure a liberal share of public patronage.

SURROGATE COURT.—There were filed in the surrogate court for the county of Peel, at Brampton, the will of the late James Benson of Mono Mills was filed on Monday, the 26th inst., personalty, $150, realty, $350; the will of Mary Rowcliffe, widow, of Alton, who died Oct. 29, 1891, was filed on Friday, the 20th inst., personalty, $225, realty, $575.

TOOK A DROP.—Everybody admits that bread is the "staff of life," but sometimes the staff is a little more expensive than people think it should be, and a great deal of grumbling is caused when bread "takes a rise." For some time the Orangeville bakers have been selling a 4-pound loaf for 13 cents, but last week the price took a drop to the old figure of 12 cents.

A TERM OF THREE MONTHS.—Frank McMaster, the young man who was tried at the police court last week on a charge of stealing $42 and an overcoat from James Rusk of Mono and was committed for trial, appeared before his honor Judge McCarthy on Monday last. Evidently the young man was not at the bottom of the theft, for an Orangeville man, who has since left town, had his share of the spoils. The judge sentenced the young fellow to 3 months at hard labor in the "castle."

GAVE HIM A "SEND-OFF."—On Monday evening a number of friends of Mr. A. G. McKenney met at the Elgin house and entertained that gentleman to a banquet, previous to his going to Toronto. A most enjoyable evening was spent by the guests in speech-making, song singing and other amusements. Mr. McKenney left for the Queen city on Tuesday morning, where he has secured a lucrative situation in wholesale hardware house. We wish "Ab" continued success.

"THE STORY OF THE CELLS".—Rev. Dr. Searls, chaplain of the Auburn (N Y) state prison, lectured to a large audience in the basement of the Methodist church on Tuesday evening, his subject being "the Story of the Cells." Dr. Searles is a lecturer of no mean ability, and the stories he told of some of the prisoners confined in Auburn brought tears to the eyes of many. We hope the rev. gentleman will revisit Orangeville before long, for his lecture is worth going miles to hear.

THE LATE W. J. LINDSAY.—The funeral of Wm. J. Lindsay, son of J B. Lindsay, Esq., of Hornby, took place last Friday. The deceased had been living in Orangeville for a number of years. About a month ago he went on a visit to his brother in Port Perry. He had been ailing for over a year and succumbed while on a visit to Port Perry. He leaves a wife to mourn his loss. The funeral was largely attended; the interment took place in the Presbyterian cemetery. The remains were brought here on the C P R, on Thursday evening.—Georgetown Herald.

IT WILL SUIT US, TOO.—A deputation from the Hamilton board of trade waited on the C. P. R officials at Toronto, on Monday of last week, with the view to having better connections made by both C. P. R. and G. T. R. at Cardwell Junction. At present there are over 40 minutes difference in the time for arrival of the morning trains these lines. A plan was suggested which would mend matters with little alteration of the time tables. Mr. Tait promised to look carefully into the matter, and if possible meet the views of Hamilton people.

AN ORANGEVILLE BOY DEAD.—A few days ago Mr R McFunn [illegible] received notice of the death of his brother-in-law Mr Tom H. Henry of Whitefish Point, Mich., from [illegible] grippe. Deceased was [illegible] Orangeville, but has been living on Cherry farm at the Point for two or three years. The mother and sorrowing friends have the sympathy of all in their sad bereavement. The remains were interred at Whitefish Point. During the past three years Mrs Henry has lost all her sons, Thomas B. being the fourth.

HE'S NOT "A RATEPAYER."—Mr. W. J. Morrison of Camilla dropped into our office yesterday and complained that THE SUN'S Camilla reporter was using him in an ungrateful manner. "A Ratepayer" of Camilla wrote to a local contemporary and accused Messrs. Bremner and Hewitt, two young men of that hamlet, of being correspondents to this paper. Neither of these gentlemen are connected with THE SUN, but "A Ratepayer" seems to think they are, and our representative there inquires Mr. Morrison is the man who signs himself "A Ratepayer." Mr. Morrison denies that he furnishes news to the papers and he says the journal which he is suspected of writing the Camilla news for will substantiate his assertion this week. The whole business appears to be a case of mistaken identity, and when matters are set right we hope the different correspondents will govern themselves accordingly.

THAT IS COMING.—The holiday season will soon be here, and wish is the opportunity to prove that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Merchants are beginning to lay in their stocks of holiday goods, and both old and young are now and then turning their thoughts to what they will select for presentation to their friends when Christmas draws nearer. Now is the time when business men should use printer's ink. Let the public know now where it can get the required articles, and not wait until the last moment, when the people have no time to decide what they want.

CUPID ON THE WARPATH.—It is quite evident that Cupid has re-opened his shop in Orangeville, and if he advertised at regular rates he would probably tell the people that he has come to stay. Men who have dodged Cupid's arrows for years past have at last fallen victims to his persistent shooting, and with the best grace they admit being conquered. For some time this mythical bowman has been directing his shots at the flinty heart of Mr. Archibald Cheyne, an old residenter of this ville, but the shafts glided off and Archie remained unconquered. At last, however, Mr. Cheyne had to give up the ghost and the wedding took place last Thursday evening. The other participant in this matrimonial venture was Mrs. Catharine Walker of Mill street, near the C. P. R. station. Mr. and Mrs. Cheyne have the best wishes of their numerous friends for a long life of wedded bliss. No cards.

PEARSON GETS FREE.—Last Saturday morning Chief Shields arrested Alf. Pearson at the C. P. R. station just as he was boarding the train for Toronto, and brought him up before P. M. Pattullo. The charge against Pearson is that of relieving John Matson of a sum of money, the amount of which is not actually known but it is between $16 and $20. The robbery is said to have taken place in a Broadway hotel the previous night where all had been drinking. Pearson borrowed a quarter of a dollar from Matson and when the latter put his hand in his pocket a few minutes afterwards he found that his hard earned cash was missing. When Pearson was taken in custody only a dime was found on him. He was remanded to jail until Monday afternoon, when he was arraigned before the P. M. Several witnesses were examined, but the evidence was not strong enough to convict Pearson and he was discharged. Pearson used to be a "bee hive" auctioneer, but lately he seems to have got on the wrong track and is going down grade. Robbing intoxicated individuals is an old trick in this town, and the practice appears to be on the increase. If any of these pickpockets are caught and brought before P M. Pattullo it will undoubtedly go very hard with them, as the cadi has no mercy on this class of thieves.

ENCOURAGE THOSE GIRLS.—The girls of the Orangeville high school have taken a noble departure in organising a society to relieve, in a measure, the sufferings of the deserving poor of the town, and citizens of every class and creed should do everything in their power to encourage the girls in their mission of charity. All the girls with the exception of two or three have joined the society and the following motto has been adopted: "Courtesy, Sociability and Charity." Every member of the society has to give something, and committees have been appointed to solicit clothing etc., and get a list of persons who are in need of help. It is the society's intention to distribute the alms before Christmas, and the members are seriously thinking of giving a Christmas cheer in the town hall. We cannot find words to sufficiently praise these noble souled girls in their charitable mission, but we sincerely trust the public will do everything to encourage the High School Girls' Beneficent Society in carrying out their charitable program. The officers of the society are: Maggie Leighton, president; Hester Gray, vice president; Nellie McCue, secretary; Ethel Thompson, treasuror; Ethel Thompson, Pearl McKenney, Lulu Hughson, Jennie Willoughby, Mabel McGuire, Mary Alexander, Florence Henry, Nellie McCue, Annie Leighton, Annie Scott, Hannah Babe, Soliciting committee; Mary Ewing, Lottie Bell, Addie Semple, Mabel Ewing, Minnie Wakely, Nettie Reid, Collecting committee; Emma Skelton, Hester Gray, Clara Laidlaw, Em Foley, Hannah Babe, Nellie Westrop, Distributing committee.

REMOVED.—Messrs. Reaburn & Crozier, monument dealers, have removed from their old stand on Victoria street to premises opposite the Mansion House on Main street. If you wish to purchase a tombstone or monument of any kind call and see them.

FOR BIBLE STUDY.—Rev. H. W. McTavish has been requested to act as special examiner for the American Institute of Sacred Literature, and has consented to assist in this popular movement in the interests of Bible study. The head offices of the Institute are in Chicago.

HORSES KILLED.—During Sunday night the 16th inst., a number of horses belonging to H. Simon Jelly strayed on to the railway track, and a freight train which passed through before daylight struck three valuable ones, mangling two of them terribly, and the third having one leg cut off, so that it had to be killed. A fourth colt was struck and seems to have been injured, but not seriously. The animals were on the track a short distance north of the station. The engine driver, owing to the darkness, could not see the animals, and, it is said, thought he had only struck one horse, and so reported. Mr. Jelly cannot receive any compensation from the railway company for his loss, which will be to the neighborhood of $250 or $300.

TWO ACCIDENTS.—Trewin Bros'. store was the scene of a painful accident on Thanksgiving Day. Mr. Geo. Trewin was standing on a step-ladder when it tipped, throwing him to the floor. In addition to receiving sundry bruises he had his left knee-cap broken. He is doing very well considering the nature of his injuries, but he will be confined to bed for some time. Dr. Bolstis is attending him..... The same day Jimmy Langford, an assistant in Trewin Bros.' store, aged about 16 years, had his leg broken. It appears that he and Jimmy Waite were in T. Jessop's livery stable, when Waite went to get a whip, and Langford, thinking Waite was going to strike him with it commenced wrestling with him. Langford had the stable broom in one hand, and the handle of the broom got between his legs, throwing him to the floor and breaking the large bone of one of his legs. He is laid up as a result, and, being without friends or relatives in this country, is in somewhat destitute circumstances now that he is unable to work. We would like to see Jimmy helped by means of voluntary contributions. If some one will start it we will contribute our mite.

FIRE INSURANCE.—If you want to be insured in the strongest and best companies in Canada, call on F. Irwin, over Endacott's store.

PERSONAL.

Editor Smith of the Shelburne Economist was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. M. McNamara of Ballyroxy gave THE SUN a call last Thursday.

Mrs. J. E. Booth and Mrs. W. Laing are visiting friends at Alliston.

Miss Lizzie Pinkney of Ballycroy left on Monday evening for Moline, N. W. T.

Miss Appleton of Arthur spent a few days last week with friends in town.

Mr. Thos. Chambers of Caledon has retired from farming and removed to town.

Mr. T. Clogg of Toronto attended the market here to-day and purchased a great amount of produce.

Mrs. R. McKeown, who was stricken with paralysis a couple of weeks ago, is recovering as rapidly as can be expected.

Mr. J. O. Mount, late of the Bank of Hamilton here, but now of Orangeville, was a welcome visitor to Owen Sound on Thanksgiving day. It appeared quite natural, and recalled pleasant reminiscences of by-gone days to see him resume his old position at the head of a table at the Seldon house. All were delighted to meet him.—O. S. Sun.

WILFRED TO THE BOSTONIANS.

BOSTON, MASS., Nov. 19.—A reception was given Mr. Wilfred Laurier in in Faneuil Hall, this morning, by the Chamber of Commerce and prominent citizens. He made a speech advocating close trade relations between Canada and the States and appealed to Democrats and Republicans alike to consider the question which, he maintained, is not one of politics. The matter can be settled without reference to annexation; reciprocity would not lead to that. Mr. Laurier pleaded for the strongest cordiality between the two nations; war between the United States and England would be fratricidal.

YOU CAN FIND OUT IF THIS BE TRUE!

Five dollars' worth for fifty cents is an unusual offer, yet it is a bona fide one. While travelling in Germany, Mr Edmund E. Sheppard, editor of TORONTO SATURDAY NIGHT, saw in the principal art stores a magnificent oleograph 20 x 28 inches in size, printed in twenty-one different colors and tones of oil—what is really a factory made oil painting of the highest class, not a chromo. After obtaining the address of the art association which issued it, he visited their manufactory in Berlin and made arrangements for a Canadian edition to accompany the Christmas Number of TORONTO SATURDAY NIGHT. The subject of this beautiful picture is Fatima, the daughter of Mahomet. Only one thousand copies had been printed and these were sold at twenty marks ($5 00) each. The firm had paid the artist, one of the most distinguished portrait painters in Europe, five thousands marks for the privilege of reproducing this picture, and the sale in Germany has been limited to one thousand copies, yet the picture which will be presented in Canada is identical with it, printed on the finest paper in twenty-one differently colored oils, embossed and varnished ready for framing and needing neither glass in front nor wood back of the picture, as it is almost identical with a painting mounted on canvas. The picture represents an oriental beauty remarkably life like, and is unequaled by anything that has ever been presented by any newspaper in the world. When you see this picture hanging in a news store together with the pictorial supplements given by the English illustrated papers, you will at once admit that even the great London publications are not in competition with our own Canadian SATURDAY NIGHT.

"Aren't you ever going to grow old, like the rest of us?" asked a man of an acquaintance he hadn't seen for some time. "Well, not so long as I can purify my blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla," was the apt reply. This man knew what he was talking about.

Decollete dresses came in for condemnation in the resolutions of the World's W. C. T. U. convention at Boston. There was a great deal that was wise and good in the union platform, though, and a little foolishness can be let go. Honi soit qui mal y pense 'applies to this low necked dress question as well as to other things.
